Abstract: The Service announces an amendment to the appendix III listing of bigleaf mahogany under the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES). The species in the Americas and its logs, sawn wood, and veneer sheets have been included in appendix III since November 1995, based on an action by the Government of Costa Rica. The Government of Brazil has supplied information to the CITES Secretariat to independently include its population in appendix III to support its national legislation for species and the need for cooperation of other CITES countries in controlling the international trade. The Service will consider any comments received on whether to enter a reservation on the Federative Republic of Brazil's action for its population.

Abstract: The Service proposes to amend the migratory bird permit regulations providing permits for the taking, possession, transportation, sale, purchase, and barter of migratory birds. The Service is revising and updating the requirements for special purpose permits. Due to the large number of permits issued under "Special purpose," the Service proposes to create four new sections for specific types of the most frequently issued special purpose permit: Rehabilitation, Possession, Salvage, and Migratory Game Birds.

Priority: Other Significant

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

Legal Authority: 16 USC 460l-4

CFR Citation: 36 CFR 59

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This amendment to 36 CFR 59 modifies Land and Water Conservation Fund (L&WCF) post-completion requirements by: (1) clarifying the "State" planning prerequisite for conversion approval; (2) allowing the recipient of an L&WCF grant to use non-recreation land it currently owns, or non-recreation land that is transferred from one public agency to another without payment, to satisfy the replacement requirement when land acquired with L&WCF assistance is proposed for conversion to other than public outdoor recreation uses, assuming all other eligibility criteria are met; (3) eliminating the requirement to notify NPS of all instances of obsolescence and facility use changes; and (4) establishing standards for resolving premature conversions to ensure their timely resolution.

Abstract: The National Park Service (NPS) is proposing to amend its regulations concerning motor vehicle operation under the influence of alcohol within units of the NPS. Current NPS regulations prohibit operation with a blood alcohol concentration (BAC) of 0.10 grams or more of alcohol per 100 milliliters of blood or 0.10 grams of alcohol per 210 liters of breath. On March 3, 1998, President Clinton directed the NPS to promulgate regulations adopting a stricter limit of 0.08 grams BAC within units of the NPS.

Legal Authority: 16 USC 1; 16 USC 3; 16 USC 9a

CFR Citation: 36 CFR 7.33

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This proposed rulemaking amends the current special regulations for Voyageurs National Park by adding a section designating areas open to aircraft use within the Park. This addition is necessary because National Park Service general regulations require such special regulatory designations for areas in parks open to the operation or use of aircraft. The intended effects are to increase safety, protect resources, and provide appropriate enjoyment to park users.

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The National Park Service proposes to change the special regulations relating to the use of and designated routes for snowmobiles and snowplanes within Grand Teton National Park and John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Memorial Parkway. The proposed rule will define more clearly the use of snowmobiles, snowplanes, and designated routes. This rule can eliminate the use of snowmobiles in the Potholes-Baseline Flats area at the discretion of the Superintendent and establish special regulations allowing snowmobile use on the Continental Divide Snowmobile Trail. The proposed rule will also establish a requirement for operators of snowmobiles within Grand Teton National Park to have a valid driver's license or learner's permit.

Priority: Other Significant. Major status under 5 USC 801 is undetermined.

Legal Authority: 16 USC 470 et seq

CFR Citation: 36 CFR 61

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The National Park Service proposes to revise the requirements for State and local historic preservation programs as well as the way the NPS administers these programs. The proposed changes are intended to provide more flexibility in: (1) staffing the State historic preservation office; (2) setting standards for State Historic Preservation Review Board membership and operations; and (3) carrying out State Historic Preservation Officer responsibilities. The revision streamlines the process for certification of local governments to participate officially in the national historic preservation program. This proposed revision also officially recognizes the growing role of tribal historic preservation programs. Some of the changes are necessary because of the 1992 amendments to the National Historic Preservation Act.

Abstract: This rule will designate trail crossings of snowmobile trails at three locations along the Appalachian National Scenic Trail. These trail crossings are part of a State-approved network of snowmobile routes that exist on adjacent State lands. These crossings existed prior to the NPS assuming management of the National Scenic Trail. Designating these crossings fulfills assurances made by the NPS at the time of land acquisition that establishment of the permanent linear trail corridor would not sever established snowmobile routes.

Abstract: These regulations are necessary for implementation of the livestock and grazing control provisions of 25 USC 640(d). In 1982 the Federal District Court for Arizona abolished 25 CFR 153 Grazing Regulation for the Joint Use Administrative Area and ordered the Secretary to promulgate new regulations for the control of grazing and livestock for the former Joint Use Administrative Area. Due to a lack of tribal concurrence regulations were not promulgated for lands partitioned to the Navajo tribe. Navajo tribal concurrence has been recently obtained; therefore, the BIA needs to move forward with publication of these regulations. Any cost associated with the implementation of these regulations will be assumed within the BIA annual budget. Cost associated with compliance of the provisions of these regulations will be borne by the Navajo tribe or its members. There is no associated cost to the general public.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant. Major status under 5 USC 801 is undetermined.

Legal Authority: PL 59-321

CFR Citation: 25 CFR 214

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This revision eliminates royalties for minerals not found within the Osage Mineral Estate and gives the Osage tribal Council authority for setting applicable royalty rates. This revision also replaces outmoded methods of exchange with modern methods and designates officials responsible for management of non-oil and gas minerals within the Osage Mineral Estate. The revisions will enhance the Department's management of the production of these minerals and eliminate inaccuracies in the current regulations.

Abstract: This rule will formalize procedures for the priority ranking process for education facilities construction. The priority ranking process is under guidelines that were published in the Federal Register in May 1979 and April 1988. Under the guidelines, the Department has annually prepared a new priority ranking list and published it in the Federal Register. This process has been criticized by both Indian tribes and Congress. This rule would provide more continuity, objectivity, and accountability in the priority ranking process and address the handling of emergency needs.

1833. ROYALTY PAYMENT LIABILITY

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: 25 USC 396 et seq; 25 USC 396a et seq; 25 USC 2101 et seq; 30 USC 181 et seq; 30 USC 351 et seq; 30 USC 1001 et seq; 30 USC 1701 et seq; 31 USC 9701; 43 USC 1301 et seq; 43 USC 1331 et seq; 43 USC 1801 et seq

CFR Citation: 30 CFR 211

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: Responsibilities of Minerals Management Service include the collection of royalties, bonuses, rentals, and related revenues from Federal and Indian mineral leases. These monies are, for the most part, collected from the current designated payor on the lease. However, if MMS is unable to collect from the current payor, it must pursue collections from (a) prior payor(s), the lessee, or an assignee of the lease. Existing regulations are unclear as to the responsibilities and liabilities of the parties involved. Therefore, MMS is amending its regulations to clarify payor, lessee, and assignee requirements and responsibilities for Indian mineral leases and Federal solid mineral and geothermal leases.

1859. ENHANCING AML RECLAMATION

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 30 USC 1201 et seq

CFR Citation: 30 CFR 707

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rule will amend the definition of Government-financed construction in section 707. The definition concerns an exemption from the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act that is currently limited to construction funded with 50 percent or more by Government funds. This proposed change would have two impacts. It would create greater efficiency by allowing OSM to leverage limited Abandoned Mine Land Funds. It would also provide a means to address the abandoned unreclaimed refuse piles. The rule would facilitate reclamation through a new cooperative effort using resources and financing from the private sector.

Abstract: During the recently completed Reclamation Reform Act of 1982 (RRA) rulemaking, the Department of the Interior received a number of comments regarding the compliance of certain large trusts with the acreage limitation provisions of the RRA. Comments expressed a variety of viewpoints, including the assertion that some trusts with landholdings (owned and leased land) in excess of 960 acres may circumvent the requirements of Federal reclamation law. The Department has received comments on this issue from various parties and is now determining how best to proceed.

Abstract: This proposed rule establishes procedures for the Secretary of the Interior to follow in administering interstate storage agreements among the Lower Division States (Arizona, Colorado, and Nevada). These agreements will permit State-authorized entities to store Colorado River water offstream, develop intentionally created unused apportionment, and make intentionally unused apportionment available to be used in another Lower Division State. The rule will help satisfy regional water demands by increasing the efficiency, flexibility, and certainty in Colorado River water management.

1902. COALBED METHANE DEVELOPMENT

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

Legal Authority: 42 USC 13368

CFR Citation: 43 CFR 3170

Legal Deadline:
Final, Statutory, October 24, 1995.

Abstract: The rule will implement section 1339 of the Energy Policy Act of 1992. It will prevent conflicts in ownership of coalbed methane from impeding development of that resource by requiring pooling of development and payment of the proceeds into an escrow account until the ownership issue is resolved by a State entity of competent jurisdiction. The rule will also allow States to avoid the Federal regulations by promulgating their own regulations that substantially comply with Federal requirements.

AGENCY: Department of Justice.

ACTION: Semiannual regulatory agenda.

SUMMARY: The Department of Justice is publishing its October 1998 regulatory agenda pursuant to E.O. 12866 "Regulatory Planning and Review," 58 FR 51735, and the Regulatory Flexibility Act, 5 U.S.C. sections 601-612 (1988).

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Robert Hinchman, Senior Counsel, Office of Policy Development, Department of Justice, Room 4258, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue NW., Washington, DC 20530, (202) 514-8059.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: For this edition of the Department of Justice's regulatory agenda, the most important significant regulatory actions are included in The Regulatory Plan, which appears in part II of this issue of the Federal Register. The Regulatory Plan entries are listed in the table of contents below and are denoted by a bracketed bold reference, which directs the reader to the appropriate sequence number in part II.

The Regulatory Flexibility Act (RFA) requires that, each year, the Department publish a list of those regulations that have a significant economic impact upon a substantial number of small entities and are to be reviewed under section 610 of the Act during the succeeding 12 months. This edition of the Department's unified agenda includes one regulation requiring such a review: "Reduction of the Number of Acceptable Documents and Other Changes to Employment Verification Requirements" (RIN 1115-AB73). In accordance with the RFA, comments are specifically invited on this regulation. Those comments should be addressed to the contact person listed in the entry for this item.

Dated: September 16, 1998.

Eleanor D. Acheson,

Assistant Attorney General, Office of Policy Development.

Abstract: This document consolidates within Bureau regulations on inmate recreation programs separate existing provisions pertaining to inmate manuscripts. The provisions are also being revised for the sake of clarity, particularly with respect to the impact of the Bureau's prohibition on conducting a business. There is no change in the intent of the regulations.

Abstract: In 1991, the Department of Justice published regulations to implement title III of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA). Those regulations include the ADA Standards for Accessible Design, which establish requirements for the design and construction of accessible facilities that are consistent with the ADA Accessibility Guidelines (ADAAG) published by the Architectural and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board (Access Board). In the time since the regulations became effective, the Department of Justice and the Access Board have each gathered a great deal of information regarding the implementation of the Standards. The Access Board is currently in the process of revising ADAAG, and it expects to publish a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) in 1998. In order to maintain consistency between ADAAG and the ADA Standards, the Department anticipates reviewing its ADA regulations during fiscal year 1999. In addition to maintaining the consistency between ADAAG and the Standards, the purpose of these revisions will be to more closely coordinate with voluntary standards, to clarify areas which, through inquiries and comments to the Department's technical assistance phone lines, have been shown to cause confusion, and to reflect evolving technologies in areas affected by the Standards.

Abstract: This proposed amendment would revise the Department's regulation implementing title II to clarify the requirement for installation of curb ramps at existing pedestrian walkways and to extend the time period for compliance beyond the current deadline of January 26, 1995. This amendment responds to public concerns about the unique and significant capital expense involved in the installation of curb ramps.

The amendment would establish a two-tier system under which public entities would be required to provide access to pedestrian walkways serving government offices, public transportation, public accommodations, places of employment, and the residences of individuals with disabilities by January 26, 2000. Access to existing pedestrian walkways in other areas would be required by January 26, 2005. The proposed rule would require public entities to include a schedule for the implementation of these requirements in their transition plans.

Abstract: On July 26, 1991, the Department published its final rules implementing titles II and III of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), which prohibits discrimination on the basis of disability by public entities (title II) and in places of public accommodation and commercial facilities (title III). Those regulations included accessibility guidelines but did not specifically include guidelines for facilities designed for children.

This rule amends the ADA Standards for Accessible Design to include guidelines based on children's dimensions and anthropometrics and applies to newly constructed and altered facilities that are designed for use primarily by children. The rule ensures that newly constructed and altered children's facilities are readily accessible to and usable by children with disabilities.

Abstract: In 1991, the Department of Justice published regulations to implement title III of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA). Those regulations include the ADA Standards for Accessible Design, which establish requirements for the design and construction of accessible facilities that are consistent with the ADA Accessibility Guidelines (ADAAG) published by the Architectural and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board (Access Board). The Standards for Accessible Design included a requirement that small raised truncated domes be used at curb ramps, hazardous vehicular areas, and certain reflecting pool edges in order to warn pedestrians who are blind or who have vision impairments of potential hazards in the circulation path (the detectable warnings requirement). In 1996, this requirement was suspended until July 26, 1998, to allow an advisory committee to conduct a comprehensive review of sections 1 through 10 of the ADAAG published by the Access Board, which includes the detectable warnings requirement. Based on the advisory committee's recommendations, the Access Board intends to issue a separate notice of proposed rulemaking (NPRM) to revise and update ADAAG. Because the Standards for Accessible Design issued by the Departments of Justice and Transportation must be consistent with the guidelines published by the Access Board, the Departments of Justice and Transportation will propose to extend the suspension of the requirement for detectable warnings until July 26, 2000, by which time it is expected that the regulatory process by which the Standards for Accessible Design are to be revised will be complete.

Abstract: The Domestic Chemical Diversion Control Act of 1993 removed the exemption from regulation for chemical mixtures. Chemical mixtures are now regulated, unless specifically exempted by the Administrator. In the proposed rule regarding the implementation of the Domestic Chemical Diversion Control Act of 1993, DEA proposed regulations regarding exemption of chemical mixtures. Based on industry comments, the proposed regulations were subsequently withdrawn for reassessment and consultation with industry. Based on extensive consultations with industry, DEA will publish proposed regulations intended to establish the least possible burden on industry while remaining consistent with the requirements of the law.

1964. • SPECIAL SURVEILLANCE LIST OF CHEMICAL, PRODUCTS, MATERIALS AND EQUIPMENT

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: PL 104-237, sec 205 Comp. Methamphetamine Control Act of 1996

CFR Citation: None

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: On October 3, 1996, the Comprehensive Methamphetamine Control Act of 1996 (MCA) (PL 104-237) was signed into law. The MCA provides for a civil penalty of not more than $250,000 for the distribution of a laboratory supply to a person who uses, or attempts to use, that laboratory supply to manufacture a controlled substance or a listed chemical, if that distribution was made with reckless disregard for the illegal uses to which such laboratory supply will be put. The MCA defines the term "laboratory supply" as "a listed chemical or any chemical, substance, or item on a special surveillance list published by the Attorney General which contains chemicals, products, materials, or equipment used in the manufacture of controlled substances and listed chemicals." The MCA further establishes that there is a rebuttable presumption of reckless disregard at trial if a firm is notified in writing that a laboratory supply sold by the firm has been used by a customer of the notified firm, or distributed further by that customer, for the unlawful production of controlled substances or listed chemicals and that firm continues to distribute a laboratory supply to the customer. In developing the Special Surveillance List, the DEA consulted with both Federal and State/local law enforcement and forensic laboratory authorities. DEA also considered the legitimate uses and markets for these chemicals and materials.

Although the Special Surveillance List applies to all individuals and firms which distribute the laboratory supplies on the list, there are no record keeping or reporting requirements imposed on these firms. Additionally, the number of chemicals has been limited to those most frequently used in the illicit production of controlled substances. Thus the Special Surveillance List will have a negligible impact on affected parties. The notice informs individuals and firms of the potential use of the items on the list for the production of controlled substances and listed chemicals and it also advises them that civil penalties may be imposed on them if they continue to distribute one or more of the items listed to a person after receiving notification from the DEA that the person has used or distributed the item for use in an illicit laboratory.

DOJ—DEA

Abstract: In years past, most pharmaceutical manufacturers and wholesalers, as a service to their customers, accepted returns of outdated/damaged merchandise. Also, agencies such as DEA and state Boards of Pharmacy accepted surrendered drugs or witnessed their disposal by controlled substance registrants. Over the past several years, environmental concerns and regulations have eliminated many of the disposal options which had been available. As a result, drug producers and government agencies alike are increasingly reluctant to be involved in the disposal process. Due to these factors and the time and resources expended by DEA and manufacturers, a disposer registration has become an essential link in the legitimate distribution chain. Therefore, DEA is proposing the establishment of a new category of controlled substance registrant as a disposer.

1968. LISTED CHEMICALS; PROPOSED THRESHOLDS FOR IODINE AND HYDROCHLORIC GAS (HYDROGEN CHLORIDE GAS)

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 21 USC 802; 21 USC 871(b)

CFR Citation: 21 CFR 1310

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The Comprehensive Methamphetamine Control Act of 1996 (MCA) establishes that, effective October 3, 1996, Iodine (in its pure crystal form; mixtures such as tincture of iodine and other household products remain exempt from regulation) and Hydrochloric Gas are List II chemicals under the Controlled Substances Act (CSA). The inclusion of these chemicals under the CSA requires that each regulated person must keep records and make reports as specified in title 21, Code of Federal Regulations part 1310. The MCA applied the recording and reporting requirements to all transactions involving Iodine and Hydrochloric Gas.

This notice proposes to establish a domestic threshold of 0.4 kilograms for iodine, thus providing an exemption for transactions below this level, which would include the vast majority of retail sales. Legitimate commerce in Hydrochloric Gas consists almost exclusively of large volume transactions to commercial customers. However, clandestine methamphetamine laboratories often make use of small volumes of this gas, and, therefore, an effective threshold could not be established. In those rare cases where legitimate users purchase small quantities, principally for research or scientific purposes, the recordkeeping and reporting requirements will apply only to the distributor; the purchasers will not be subject to the requirements.

Abstract: DEA is proposing to amend its regulations to implement the requirements of the Comprehensive Methamphetamine Control Act of 1996 (MCA) establishing pseudoephedrine, phenylpropanolamine, and combination ephedrine drug products as List I chemicals, and the MCA requirement that reports be submitted for certain distributions to nonregulated persons involving pseudoephedrine, phenylpropanolamine, and ephedrine, including drug products containing those chemicals. The MCA establishes pseudoephedrine, phenylpropanolamine, and combination ephedrine products as regulated List I chemicals, and requires that reports of certain distributions to nonregulated persons be reported each month.

To minimize the impact of the new law, DEA is proposing to exempt retail distributors from the registration requirement. This exemption will provide the estimated 750,000 retail distributors with relief from the chemical control requirements of the regulations, including registration. Additionally, the existing exemptions from registration for CSA registrants and for distributors of prescription drug products will help minimize the impact of the requirements on other handlers of the products.

Abstract: The Comprehensive Methamphetamine Control Act of 1996 established hydrogen chloride as a List II chemical. In response to comments submitted in connection with DEA's proposed rulemaking to establish a threshold for hydrogen chloride, DEA has determined that regulation of certain types of transactions involving hydrogen chloride is unnecessary for purposes of enforcement of the chemical controls under the Controlled Substances Act. However, exempting the transactions from regulation could not be' accomplished through the system of thresholds. This rulemaking will exempt the transactions from the definition of Regulated Transaction, thus removing them from regulation.

Abstract: The Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act (IIRIRA), enacted on September 30, 1996, amends the employer sanctions,unfair immigration-related employment practices and document fraud sections of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) in several ways (sections 274A, 274B and 274C of the INA, respectively). The Debt Collection Improvement Act mandates that the civil penalties in each of these three sections of the INA be adjusted to reflect inflation. Finally, the Office of the Chief Administrative Hearing Officer has examined its regulations and is making various changes perceived as necessary in light of case-by-case experience since the 1991 amendments to its regulations. All of the changes to the OCAHO regulations set forth herein are designed to make the regulations comport with one of the aforementioned statutes, clarify an existing ambiguity, and/or similarly contribute to the fair and efficient administration of sections 274A, 274B and 274C of the INA.

Abstract: This rule proposes to amend the regulations by implementing the statutory authority given to Immigration Judges to sanction by civil money penalty any action or inaction in contempt of the Judge's proper exercise of authority. This statutory authority is derived from section 304 of the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996, Pub. sanction, and the procedures for appealing such sanctions. The rule also adds an additional ground for disciplinary sanctions under 8 CFR section 3.52 for engaging in a pattern and practice of conduct which has been found to be in contempt of the Immigration Judge's proper exercise of authority. Abstract: This proposed rule would establish a streamlined appellate review procedure for the Board of Immigration Appeals. The proposed rule is in response to the enormous and unprecedented increase in the number of appeals being filed with the Board. The rule recognizes that in a significant number of the cases the Board decides, the result reached by the adjudicator below is correct and will not be changed on appeal. In these cases, a single permanent Board Member will be given authority to review the record and affirm the result reached below without issuing an opinion in the case. This procedure will promote fairness by enabling the Board to render decisions in a more timely manner, whole allowing it to concentrate its resources primarily on those cases in which the decision below may be incorrect, or where a new or significant legal or procedural issue is presented. In addition, the proposed rule provides that a single Board Member or the Chief Attorney Examiner may adjudicate certain additional types of cases, motions, or other procedural or ministerial appeals, where the result is clearly dictated by the statute, regulations, or precedent decisions.

Abstract: The Immigration Act of 1990 provides that an alien entrepreneur and his or her family may obtain lawful permanent residence on a conditional basis, subject to the requirements of a timely petition and interview for removal of the condition two years after obtaining such status. Termination of such status is made reviewable in deportation proceedings before an Immigration Judge. This rule sets forth the procedures that an Immigration Judge will follow in reviewing the termination by the Immigration and Naturalization Service of conditional permanent resident status of alien entrepreneurs and their families.

Abstract: This interim rule relates to a previous notice, signed by the Attorney General on January 15, 1998, and published at 63 FR 3154, on January 21, 1998, which designated from January 16, 1998 to September 11, 1998, as the time period for filing motions to reopen to apply for suspension of deportation or special rule cancellation of removal under NACARA. This rule is simplifying the filing process for NACARA motions to reopen in two ways.

First, this rule clarifies who can file a NACARA motion to reopen. Section 309(g) of IIRIRA permits an alien who has a final order of deportation or removal to file one motion to reopen only if he or she has become eligible for cancellation of removal or suspension of deportation as a result of the amendments made by section 203 of NACARA.

Second, this rule permits any alien who is moving to reopen pursuant to section 309(g) of IIRIRA, as amended by section 203(c) of NACARA, to file such motion initially without a suspension or cancellation application and supporting documents. The rule requires the applicant to then submit the application and supporting documents by February 8, 1999.

Abstract: Two regulatory initiatives dealing with the processing of alien witnesses have been prepared by the INS. INS No. 1683-94 provides the application and approval process for the admission of aliens in S nonimmigrant classification. It provides guidance to the various law enforcement agencies needing alien witnesses and informants to complete critical law enforcement initiatives in the United States. INS No. 1728-95 establishes a fee for the processing of Form I-854, Inter-Agency Alien Witness and Informant Record, for Law Enforcement Agency (LEA) requests for S nonimmigrant classification for eligible alien witnesses and informants. The fee recovers the costs of the processing of requests for immigration benefits, and is needed to comply with specific Federal immigration laws and Federal user fee statute and regulations.

Abstract: The rule makes modifications to existing INS regulations by allowing the INS to waive the passport and visa requirement for citizens of certain former Soviet Socialist Republics and former Warsaw Pact countries who transit through the United States under the Transit Without Visa (TWOV) program. This rule also makes citizens of certain other countries ineligible for TWOV privileges because of that country's past abuse of the TWOV program level of crime and/or narcotics production, state sponsor of terrorism, or restrictions imposed by the President of the United States because the entry of its citizens would be detrimental to the interests of the United States. This rule is necessary to update 8 CFR 212.1(f)(2) and (3) to reflect the current political situation of each country. This is pending deliberations with the Department of State on determining those countries which are permitted to transit without authority. Reflect changes that occurred due to the disintegration of the former Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the dissolution of the People's Republic of Czechoslovakia, the union of the German Democratic Republic and the Federal Republic of Germany, and the name change of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam to the Socialist Republic of Vietnam. The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is replaced by Armenia, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Georgia, Kazakstan, Kyrgyzstan, Moldova, Russia, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, and Uzbekistan. Czechoslovakia is replaced with The Czech Republic and Slovakia. The Mongolian People's Republic is replaced by Mongolia. The Democratic Republic of Vietnam is replaced by the Socialist Republic of Vietnam. This rule is necessary to update 8 CFR sections 212.1 (f)(2) and (3) to reflect the current political situation of each country and should not have any adverse impact. This is pending deliberation's with the Department of State on determining those countries which are permitted to transit without a visa.

Abstract: A final rule (INS No. 1399-96) introducing and authorizing centralized production of a new more secure and fraud-resistant EAD Card or Form I-766 was published in the Federal Register at 61 FR 46534 on September 4, 1996. Centralized production of this new EAD card will be performed by one or more INS Service Centers. Also, an employment authorization document (EAD) application and proposed rule is planned pending Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 (IIRIRA) regulatory initiatives and related policy actions. The proposed rule will provide a more efficient process for centralized production of the new EAD card.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 8 USC 1641(c); PL 104-208

CFR Citation: 8 CFR 204

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 (IIRIRA) included a number of provisions relating to battered aliens and to mail order bride businesses. At present, INS anticipates rulemaking in the following areas.

DOJ—INS

Proposed Rule Stage

INS No. 1845-97 is necessitated by the section 501 of IIRIRA, which provides certain types of public benefits for those aliens who have made a prima facie case for eligibility pursuant to the INS' interim rule on self-petitions by battered aliens, published at 61 FR 13061 (March 26, 1995; INS No. 1705-95). This new interim rule will define what constitutes a prima facie case.

INS No. 1838-97, an advance notice of proposed rulemaking to solicit public input into the regulation of certain functions of the international matchmaking industry (also referred to as "mail order bride businesses"), as required by section 652 of IIRIRA, was published on 7/16/97 (62 FR 38041).

The Service is currently working with DOJ on the Trafficking in People Task Force to develop a cohesive policy in this area.

Abstract: IIRIRA requires the Service to implement an arrival/departure management system by October 1, 1998. This regulation will implement that system by requiring that all aliens seeking to enter the United States on or after that date, unless otherwise exempted by Service regulation, be in possession of a machine readable travel document acceptable to the Service. The regulation will establish a requirement that every person seeking to depart from the United States must travel through a Service designated Port-of-Departure and must conform to Service procedures prior to or upon departure. The regulation also will establish penalties for persons who fail to comply with the requirements of the regulation.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 8 USC 1356(i)

CFR Citation: 8 CFR 235

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rule amends the Immigration and Naturalization Service (Service) regulations to define an enroute inspection. The rule will also notify all affected parties that the Service will begin to bill cruise ship, train, and bus lines or other modes of transportation, or their designated shipping agents or representatives, for all expenditures of government funds which the Service obligates in connection with the performance of en route inspections on board transportation carriers. This action is necessary in order for the Service to more accurately account for the costs associated with providing immigration inspection services on an en route basis, and to ensure their full recoupment.

Abstract: This rule proposes to adjust the fee schedule of the Immigration Examinations Fee Account for four low volume applications which are the Form I-360, Petition for Amerasian, Widow(er), or Special Immigrant; Form N-300, Application to File Declaration of Intention; Form N-336, Request for Hearing on a Decision in Naturalization Procedures; and Form N-470, Application to Preserve Residence for Naturalization Purpose. The fee adjustments are necessary to comply with Federal statutes and Federal cost accounting standards. These statutes and standards require Federal Agencies to charge fees for specific services that provide a private benefit that does not accrue to the public. Federal Agencies are required to review their fees bi-annually to ensure that the fees charged recover the full cost to the Government for providing specific services. Implementation of this rule will ensure that sufficient funds are available to the Federal Government to provide the services for applications and petitions.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 8 USC 1101; 8 USC 1103; 8 USC 1324a

CFR Citation: 8 CFR 274a.12

Abstract: This interim rule amends the INS regulations by adding to the list of classes of aliens authorized to accept work authorization the class of aliens for whom a private bill to grant immigration benefits is pending in Congress. The rule is necessary in order to apply for immigration benefits. This rule would grant such an individual alien the authority to apply for work authorization while the bill on their behalf is pending action in Congress. Due to the small number of private bills enacted annually, this rule would not affect a large class of people, and therefore cannot be considered controversial.

Abstract: In order to provide a more effective and efficient response to a mass migration event, this interim rule implements provisions in the Immigration and Nationality Act allowing the Attorney General to authorize any State and local law enforcement officer to perform certain functions related to the enforcement of the immigration laws during the period of an actual or imminent mass influx of aliens. This rule would place designated State/local law enforcement officers under the direction of the INS when enforcing immigration law. This rule also allows the Commissioner of Immigration to enter into advance written agreements with State and local law enforcement officials setting forth the terms and conditions of the functions to be performed during a Federal response to a mass influx of aliens, including reimbursement of expenses and ties such reimbursement to the Immigration Emergency Fund as the primary source of such funding.

Abstract: This rule proposes to amend the Immigration and Naturalization Service's regulations by delegating the adjudication of certain H-2A petitions to the United States Department of Labor (DOL). The H-2A petitions affected by this action would involve only those petitions filed for initial H-2A employment where the alien is not physically present in the United States. The Service has proposed these changes in order to streamline the existing H-2A petitioning process for certain foreign agricultural workers. The proposals contained in this rule will make it easier and less burdensome for United States employers to file petitions for foreign agricultural workers.

Abstract: The H-1A nonimmigrant classification, which provided for the temporary admission of registered nurses to the United States, expired on September 1, 1995. However, in response to concerns that geographic locations in the United States continued to experience a shortage of registered nurses after the sunset date of the H-1A classification, the president signed Pub. L. 104-302 which provided for the granting of an extension of stay until September 30, 1997, to certain H-1A nurses. On March 7, 1997, the Immigration and naturalization Service published an interim rule in the Federal Register at 62 FR 10422-10425 in order to amend the Service's regulations to reflect the provisions contained in the Pub. L. 104-302.

Since the H-1A classification and the extension period under Pub. L. 104-302 have now expired, this final rule removes all references to the H-1A classification.

Abstract: These rules provide for the collection of a fee at the time of application for participation in a Dedicated Commuter Lane (DCL), instead of at the time of approval of the application. The DCL program is a pilot project established at selected land border ports of entry to expedite the transborder movement of eligible, pre-screened, low-risk groups through designated traffic lanes. The first rule clarifies the requirements for the use of the DCL. (INS No. 1675). A second rule will set forth the fee required of participants in order to cover the technological costs (INS No. 1794).

2021. ADJUSTMENT OF STATUS TO THAT OF PERSON ADMITTED FOR PERMANENT RESIDENCE; TEMPORARY REMOVAL OF CERTAIN RESTRICTIONS ON ELIGIBILITY

CFR Citation: 8 CFR 103; 8 CFR 212; 8 CFR 217; 8 CFR 245

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rule allows certain persons in the United States to adjust status to that of a lawful permanent resident if the application was filed before November 25, 1997 or, if the adjustment application is based on a visa petition or labor certification filed between November 26, 1997 and January 14, 1998. These persons, although eligible for immigrant visa issuance abroad, have been barred from adjustment of status because they had entered the United States without inspection or had violated the conditions of temporary nonimmigrant status. The rule allows prospective lawful permanent or conditional residents to avoid the difficulties and expense of travel to a U.S. consulate or embassy abroad. It continues to penalize these violators of the immigration laws by requiring most adult applicants to pay an additional sum in excess of the standard adjustment filing fee. After adjusting status they may lawfully live and work in the United States and may later be eligible to seek United States citizenship through naturalization. This rule also implements the new section 245(k) of the INA which permits certain employment-based immigrants who are out of status to file for adjustment under section 245(a) of 8 CFR.

CFR Citation: 8 CFR 235; 8 CFR 252

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rule proposes to amend the Immigration and Naturalization Service (the Service) regulations by establishing a procedure whereby bona fide alien crewmen actively serving on board a maritime ferry or a maritime commercial cruise ship may, at the discretion of the Service, be inspected one time during every 90-day period during which the cruise ship conducts operations between Ports-of-Entry (POEs) in the United States and a foreign country. This rule is necessary in order for the Service to formally codify the long-standing practice of authorizing certain maritime crewmen landing privileges in the United States without further inspection during the intervening time between 90-day full-crew inspections.

Abstract: These regulations implement provisions of the Immigration and Nationality Technical Amendments Act of 1994.

INS No. 1712 implements changes to 8 CFR 322 by establishing procedures for a U.S. citizen parent to apply for the expeditious naturalization of his or her children born outside the U.S. It allows certain U.S. parents who do not meet physical presence requirements to use the physical presence of their U.S. parent (the child's U.S. grandparent). The purpose of the rule is to relax the requirements of U.S. citizenship for children born to or adopted by U.S. citizens abroad.

INS No. 1764 reserves the authority to schedule all administrative oath-taking ceremonies with the District Director. The rule will not impact the Immigration Judges' authority to administer the oath at ceremonies conducted by the Service.

Abstract: This rule removes the current regulatory language conditioning an alien's nonimmigrant status on his or her providing full and truthful information requested by the INS, regardless of the requested information's materiality. This rule would clarify that the nonimmigrant's stay is conditioned on, among other things, the provision of all information deemed necessary to ensure that the alien has acquired, and is maintaining, lawful nonimmigrant status during the entire period of his or her stay, or is eligible to receive any other benefit under the INA.

Abstract: The Service is considering further changes to streamline the verification and enforcement process requirements related to the Employer Sanctions provisions of the Immigration Reform and Control Act.

INS No. 1738 will allow INS to issue and serve a warning Notice upon an alleged violator after the INS has determined that a person or entity has violated section 274a of the Act. This rule will also allow interested parties to electronically generate blank copies of the Employment Eligibility Verification Form, (Form I-9).

INS No. 1737 will allow the INS to discontinue its practice of providing any person or entity required to retain Forms I-9 with at least 3 days notice prior to an inspection of the Forms I-9. This practice is not mandated by law, and the INS believes that it may have impeded investigations by giving employers the opportunity to make changes or corrections to forms or to fraudulently create or destroy Forms I-9.

Abstract: Regulations published under this RIN implement provisions of the Immigration and Nationality Act as established by section 302 of the Immigration Act of 1990, Pub. L. 101-649, which allow for the establishment and implementation of Temporary Protected Status (TPS). Currently, nationals of four countries (Liberia, Somalia, Rwanda, and Bosnia-Hercegovina) have been accorded TPS Status. Such designations are accomplished by notice published in the Federal Register.

Previously published TPS regulations were cited by RIN 1115-AC30.

Current regulatory actions:

INS No. 1608 provides for exceptions to deadlines for registering for TPS and updates the application process.

INS No. 1612 provides for the removal of obsolete TPS language.

Abstract: In response to the President's direction to each agency to undertake a review of its regulations for the purpose of reducing the regulations or, when possible, rendering them more readable and comprehensible, the Immigration and Naturalization Service engaged in a thorough line-by-line review of all regulations in title 8 of the Code of Federal Regulations (8 CFR). As a result, the Service is amending its regulations consistent with the President's directive by publishing a series of separate rulemakings in the Federal Register. Over the course of the next two fiscal years, these rulemakings will address all parts of 8 CFR by updating obsolete references; by eliminating portions dealing with terminated programs; by removing language relating to purely procedural matters involving only internal Service processes; by elimination of references which unnecessarily duplicate language contained in the statute or in other portions of the regulations; and by streamlining awkward and confusing language.

Legal Deadline: Final, Statutory, March 1, 1997.
The statute requires the Attorney General to promulgate implementing regulations by March 1, 1997.

Abstract: Many of the provisions of the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 (IIRIRA) became effective April 1, 1997. Some provisions of the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996 (AEDPA) that were not superseded by IIRIRA became effective November 1, 1996. On March 6, 1997, INS and EOIR published an interim rule revising the asylum process; providing a mechanism for the determination and review of certain applicants who demonstrate a credible fear of persecution if returned to their own country; defining the inspection and admission process including new expedited removal procedures for aliens attempting to enter the United States through fraud or misrepresentation apprehension, detention, and removal of aliens; addressing conduct of removal proceedings; and revising many other sections of the regulations to conform with the new laws. INS is currently reviewing comments received on the interim rule prior to issuing a final rule.

Legal Deadline: NPRM, Statutory, September 1, 1996.

Abstract: Section 401(a) of the Personal Responsibility and Work Reconciliation Act of 1996 provides that, with limited exceptions, only qualified aliens, as defined under section 431, may receive certain Federal public benefits. Section 401(b)(2) provides an exception which allows aliens who are "lawfully present in the United States" as determined by the Attorney General to receive Social Security benefits under title II of the Social Security Act.

This interim rule amends the Immigration and Naturalization Service (Service) regulations to define the term "an alien who is lawfully present in the United States" so that the Social Security Administration may determine which aliens are eligible for benefits under title II of the Social Security Act. Aliens who are considered "lawfully present in the United States," however, must otherwise satisfy the requirements for benefits under title II of the Social Security Act.

Abstract: On September 30, 1996, the President signed the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996. Section 343 provides that certain foreign health care workers are inadmissible unless they present a certificate from CGFNS (or another equivalent certifying agency as determined by the Attorney General) to the Department of State, or in the case of adjustment of status, to the Attorney General, in order to enter the United States. The certificate must address such issues as licensure, training, language skills, and education. The Service will be publishing a proposed rule to implement these requirements, including a designation of covered health care occupations, the procedures and requirements for certifying organizations, the content of the certificates, and the process for presentation of the certificates. In addition, the Service plans to issue a temporary interim rule to address shortages in key health care occupations.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 8 USC 1101; 8 CFR 2

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rule amends the INS regulations by changing the regulatory definition of an arriving alien. Under section 235(b)(1)(A)(i) of the INA, which was effective on April 1, 1997, certain arriving aliens are subject to expedited removal procedures. The existing regulatory definition of arriving aliens includes parolees. As a matter of policy, the Department has decided that it is appropriate to exempt from the new expedited removal procedures aliens who were paroled into the United States before April, 1997. This rule clarifies that aliens who were paroled before April 1, 1997 will not be subjected to expedited removal. The rule also makes several changes in the wording of 1.1(q) to use language that is clearer and more consistent with the wording of the new statute.

Legal Deadline: NPRM, Statutory, November 3, 1997. Final, Statutory, February 22, 1998.
Statutory deadline to promulgate regulations for state and local public benefits was previously 11/03/98. Deadlines for regulations for Federal public benefits is 02/22/98.

Abstract: This regulatory action requires all entities (other than nonprofit charitable organizations) providing Federal public benefits (with certain exceptions) to verify by examining documents and using an INS automated verification system that applicants are eligible for the benefits under Federal benefit reform legislation. This rule also sets forth provisions by which State or local governments can verify whether aliens applying for State or local public benefits are eligible for such benefits under Federal laws.

The Interim Verification Guidelines published as a notice on 11/17/97 at 62 FR 61344. The guidelines set forth procedures that benefit providers can use to verify citizenship, qualified alien status, and eligibility under title IV of the PRWORA prior to issuance of the final regulations.

The court-approved settlement agreement in Flores v. Reno (C.D. C al.) required INS to publish regulations last July. However, the changes brought by AEDPA and IIRIRA delayed issuance of regs.

Abstract: The rule amends the Immigration and Naturalization Service regulations by establishing the procedures for processing alien juveniles from custody and the detention of unreleased juveniles in state-licensed programs and detention facilities. This rule also governs the transportation and transfer of juveniles in Service custody.

2052. SPECIAL IMMIGRANT JUVENILE—SPECIAL IMMIGRANT STATUS FOR CERTAIN ALIENS DECLARED DEPENDENT ON A JUVENILE COURT

Legal Authority: PL 105-119

CFR Citation: 8 CFR 204

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rule amends the Service's existing regulations by clarifying the special immigrant juvenile provisions. This rule limits the juvenile courts from considering dependency orders that would qualify juveniles for special immigrant status, without the expressed consent of the Attorney General. This rule also limits the jurisdiction of juvenile courts to consider the custody status for placement of an alien in the actual custody of the Attorney General, unless the Attorney General specifically consents to such jurisdiction.

Abstract: This rule will amend the Service's regulations by providing that all persons, other than ministers, immigrating to the United States as religious workers must immigrate or adjust status to permanent resident before October 1, 2000. This rule implements section 101(a)(27)(c)(ii) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (Act), which provides that religious workers who have 2 years of membership and experience in a religious occupation or vocation may qualify as special immigrant religious workers. By statute, this immigrant category for religious workers expires on October 1, 2000. This rule codifies, in regulatory form, the October 1, 2000 statutory deadline.

Abstract: This rule amends the Immigration and Naturalization Service (Service)regulations by updating existing field office titles due to the reorganization that was approved by the Attorney General on January 14, 1994. The reorganization abolished the position of "Regional Commissioner" and replaced it with that of "Regional Director." The reorganization also established four Regional Administrative positions currently known as "Administrative Center Directors." A restructuring plan of the Office of Administrative Centers is awaiting final approval. Under the restructuring plan, the titles of the four "Administrative Center Directors" are changed to "Associate Regional Directors, Management."

Abstract: On November 19, 1997, President Clinton signed the Nicaraguan Adjustment and Central American Relief Act (NACARA), enacted as title 2 of Pub. L. No. 105-100, 111 Stat. 2160, 2193 (1997) (as amended by Technical Corrections to the Nicaraguan Adjustment and Central American Relief Act, Pub. L. 105-139, Stat. 2644, (1997)). Section 203 of NACARA provides that certain Guatemalans, Salvadorans, and nationals of former soviet Bloc countries are eligible to apply for cancellation of removal under the standards for suspension of deportation that existed prior to enactment of the Illegal Immigration and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 (IIRIRA).

To implement the new cancellation of removal provisions efficiently and expeditiously, the Attorney General has decided to integrate adjudication of cancellation of removal requests into the affirmative asylum process. Traditionally, only immigration judges have had authority to grant suspension of deportation and, after implementation of IIRIRA, cancellation or removal, to eligible aliens in the context of deportation or removal proceedings. The proposed rule authorizes asylum officers to grant cancellation of removal under section 203 of NACARA to certain qualified aliens who have asylum applications pending with the Service, and to their qualified dependents. The rule also sets forth the process for the new adjudication program.

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: 8 USC 1103; 8 USC 1324(b)

CFR Citation: 8 CFR 274

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rule amends the Immigration and Naturalization Service regulations by subjecting employers who are delinquent in paying employer sanctions fines, to charges for interest, handling costs, and penalties associated with late payments of the fines. The Service has previously imposed fines against employers who violate section 274A of the Immigration and Nationality Act, but has yet to charge the employer for interest and handling costs, or to impose penalties for failure to promptly pay the fines. Accordingly, to ensure consistency and comprehensive implementation of the provisions contained in the Debt Collection Improvement Act (DCIA), the Service will begin to issue bills for the fines assessed against employers who violate section 274a of the Act, and impose charges for interest, handling costs, and penalties associated with late payments of the fines.

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: PL 103-414 Communications Assistance for Law Enforcement Act; PL 104-208 Omnibus Consolidated Appropriations Act of 1997

CFR Citation: 28 CFR 100

Legal Deadline: Other, Statutory, October 25, 1998.
CALEA requires telecommunications carriers to be in compliance with section 103 by 10/25/98. These regulations assist carriers to meet their obligations under CALEA.

Abstract: As required by section 109 of the Communications Assistance for Law Enforcement Act (CALEA), the FBI promulgated Cost Recovery Regulations allowing telecommunications carriers to recover certain costs associated with implementing CALEA. The final rule was published on March 20, 1997 (62 FR 13307) and became effective on April 21, 1997. In response to public comment received during this rulemaking, the FBI published an ANPRM on November 19, 1996 (61 FR 58799), which solicited input on the definition of the term "significant upgrade or major modification" as used by CALEA. The "significant upgrade or major modification" NPRM was published on April 28, 1998 (63 FR 23231) and the FBI is currently reviewing the comments received. The FBI anticipates publishing the final rule defining "significant upgrade or major modification" in the first quarter of calendar year 1999.

Additionally, CALEA section 104 requires the Attorney General to publish a Notice of Actual and Maximum Capacity in order to provide telecommunications carriers with the information they will need to meet law enforcement's future simultaneous electronic surveillance requirements. For local exchange, cellular, and broadband PCS, the FBI published an Initial Notice of Capacity on October 16, 1995 (60 FR 53643) and a Second Notice of Capacity on January 14, 1997 (62 FR 1902). The FBI published the Final Notice of Capacity for local exchange, cellular, and broadband PCS on March 12, 1998 (63 FR 12218).

Currently, the FBI is developing a Notice of Inquiry (NOI) concerning capacity methodologies for telecommunications services other than local exchange, cellular, and broadband PCS. The FBI anticipates publishing this NOI in the fourth quarter of calendar year 1998. Information gathered in response to this NOI will be used in the development and promulgation of future Notices of Capacity for those services.

Abstract: The Attorney General is required to establish a National Stolen Passenger Motor Vehicle Information System pursuant to the Anti Car Theft Act of 1992 (49 USC 33109 to 33111). The FBI is coordinating efforts in this matter and, under delegated authority from the Attorney General, the FBI is issuing this rule to establish a national system to verify the theft status of major motor vehicle component parts. The system will include certain information about each passenger motor vehicle reported to a law enforcement agency as stolen and not recovered. The rule provides how an individual or entity may obtain information from the system on whether a vehicle or part is listed as stolen. The rule also provides verification procedures to be followed by insurance carriers and certain motor vehicle part businesses.

Abstract: As a result of the passage of the Lobbying Disclosure Act of 1995 (LDA) and the Lobbying Disclosure Technical Amendments Act of 1998 (LOTAA), the Foreign Agents Registration Unit of the Criminal Division is issuing new regulations concerning changes in the Foreign Agents Registration Act of 1938, as amended, 22 USC 611, et seq (FARA). These regulations replace the term "political propaganda" in the existing regulations with "informational materials" as provided in the LDA and make other changes to the FARA regulations required by the passage of the LDA and the LOTAA. The regulations also make other modifications to the existing regulations to facilitate the administration of FARA.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 28 USC 2679(b)

Abstract: This rule revises 28 CFR part 15, pertaining to the defense of certain suits against Federal employees, to conform the regulations to changes made by the Federal Employee Liability Reform and Tort Compensation Act, PL 100-694. Under prior law, the defense of suits against Federal employees for torts committed in the scope of their employment was limited to claims involving the operation of motor vehicles. PL 100-694 expanded the coverage of the immunity provisions to include all common law torts committed by Federal employees in the scope of their employment. This rule conforms the Department's regulations to the expanded coverage of the statute.

CFR Citation: 28 CFR 0.85; 28 CFR 16 (Revision); 28 CFR 20 (Revision); 28 CFR 50.12

Abstract: This rule updates existing regulations in 28 CFR part 16 "Production or Disclosure of Material or Information" and in part 20 "Criminal Justice Information Systems" which contain old terms and addresses. Additionally, the increasing prevalence of outsourcing by criminal justice agencies of technical and administrative functions warrants establishing express authority for contractor access to criminal history record information (CHRI) where the contractor is acting on behalf of an authorized agency and appropriate security and privacy protections exist. Also, the need for increased international cooperation in responding to law enforcement issues with multinational interest and extra territorial interest warrants providing express authority for acquisition, retention, and exchange of CHRI with foreign and international law enforcement agencies when in the best interest of the United States. Further, administrative charges of the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) are quite analogous to CHRI and the ready availability of this information is of sufficient interest to law enforcement authorities to expressly confirm authority for the acquisition, retention, and exchange of the information along with CHRI.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 28 USC 1921(b)

CFR Citation: 28 CFR 0.144 (Revision)

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rule revises the United States Marshals Service fees pursuant to 28 USC 1921(b). This statute requires the Attorney General to establish fees to be taxed and collected for certain services rendered by the United States Marshals Service in connection with Federal court proceedings. These services include, but are not limited to, the serving of writs, subpoenas, or summonses, the preparing of notices or bills of sale, the keeping of attached property, and certain necessary travel. To the extent practicable, these fees shall reflect the actual and reasonable costs of the services provided. The Attorney General initially established the fee schedule in 1991, based on the actual costs, salaries, overhead, etc. of the services rendered and the hours expended. Due to an increase in the salaries and benefits of United States Marshals Service personnel over time, the current fee schedule is inadequate and no longer reflects actual and reasonable costs.

Legal Deadline: Final, Statutory, October 23, 1996.

Abstract: The Federal Civil Monetary Penalties Inflation Adjustment Act of 1990, PL 101-410, hereinafter, Adjustment Act, provided for the regular evaluation of civil monetary penalties to ensure that they continued to maintain their deterrent value and that penalty amounts due the Federal Government were properly accounted for and collected. On April 26, 1996, President Clinton signed into law the Omnibus Consolidated Rescissions and Appropriations Act of 1996, PL 104-134, hereinafter, Omnibus Act. Section 31001 of the Omnibus Act (also known as the Debt Collection Improvement Act of 1996, hereinafter, Improvement Act) amended section 4 of the Adjustment Act to require the head of each agency to, by regulation, adjust each civil monetary penalty provided by law within the jurisdiction of the agency and to publish such regulation in the Federal Register.

Any increase in a civil monetary penalty made pursuant to the Improvement Act shall apply only to violations which occur after the date the increase takes effect. The first adjustment of a civil monetary penalty made pursuant to the Improvement Act may not exceed 10 percent of such penalty. The adjustment for inflation required by the Adjustment Act must be done every four years. This regulation fulfills the Attorney General's obligations under the Improvement Act.

2090. GUIDELINES FOR MEGAN'S LAW AND THE JACOB WETTERLING CRIMES AGAINST CHILDREN AND SEXUALLY VIOLENT OFFENDER REGISTRATION ACT

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: PL 104-145, Megan's Law; PL 103-322, sec 170101, Violent Crime Cntl & Law Enf Act, 1994

CFR Citation: None

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The Jacob Wetterling Crimes Against Children and Sexually Violent Offender Registration Act (the Wetterling Act) is contained in the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994, PL 103-322 (codified at 42 USC 14071). The Wetterling Act encourages States to establish registration systems for persons who are: (1) convicted of a criminal offense against a victim who is a minor; or (2) convicted of a sexually violent offense. The Department of Justice published final guidelines implementing the Wetterling Act on April 4, 1996 at 61 FR 15110. Megan's Law, PL 104-145, amended subsection (d) of section 170101 of the Wetterling Act relating to the release of registration information. Megan's Law (1) eliminates a general requirement that information collected under State registration programs be treated as private data, and (2) substitutes mandatory language for previously permissive language concerning the release of relevant information that is necessary to protect the public concerning registered offenders. On July 21, 1997 at 62 FR 39009 the Department published final guidelines implementing Megan's Law and also clarifying other provisions of the Wetterling Act based upon experience gained from working with States concerning their sex offender registration systems.

The Pam Lychner Sexual Offender Tracking and Identification Act, among other things, (1) requires the Attorney General to establish a national database at the FBI to track convicted sex offenders and (2) requires the FBI to handle registration directly for sex offenders residing in States that do not have "minimally sufficient" sex offender registration programs (as defined by the Act). The FBI will be issuing regulations to carry out its responsibilities under the Lychner Act. (See RIN 1105-AA56).

The Lychner Act also amends the Wetterling Act to prescribe more stringent registration requirements in some areas. States have until October 3, 1999, to comply with the provisions of the Lychner Act that amend the Wetterling Act. The Attorney General also may grant a 2-year extension for States that are making good faith efforts to come into compliance. Section 115 of the Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations Act (CJSA), PL 105-119, amended the Wetterling and Lychner Acts to afford greater flexibility to the States in establishing registration systems and to add some additional compliance requirements. States have the immediate benefit of the provisions that afford greater flexibility and have until November 2000 to comply with the additional requirements.

The Attorney General issued proposed guidelines to implement the Wetterling Act, Megan's Law, the Lychner Act, and the CJSA Amendments on June 19, 1998. When made final, these guidelines effectively will replace the guidelines published on April 4, 1996, and on July 21, 1997.

Semiannual Agenda of Regulations

AGENCY: Office of the Secretary, Labor.

ACTION: Semiannual regulatory agenda.

SUMMARY: This document sets forth the Department's semiannual agenda of regulations that have been selected for review or development during the coming year. The agenda complies with the requirements of both Executive Order 12866 and the Regulatory Flexibility Act. The agenda lists all regulations that are expected to be under review or development between October 1998 and October 1999, as well as those completed during the past 6 months.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Roland Droitsch, Deputy Assistant Secretary for Policy, Office of the Assistant Secretary for Policy, U.S. Department of Labor, 200 Constitution Avenue NW., Room S-2312, Washington, DC 20210, (202) 219-6197.

Note: Information pertaining to a specific regulation can be obtained from the agency contact listed for that particular regulation.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: Executive Order 12866 and the Regulatory Flexibility Act require the semiannual publication in the Federal Register of an agenda of regulations. As permitted by law, the Department of Labor is combining the publication of its agendas under the Regulatory Flexibility Act and Executive Order 12866.

For this edition of the Department of Labor's regulatory agenda, the most important significant regulatory actions are included in The Regulatory Plan, which appears in part II of this issue of the Federal Register. The Regulatory Plan entries are listed in the table of contents below and are denoted by a bracketed bold reference, which directs the reader to the appropriate sequence number in part II.

Executive Order 12866 became effective September 30, 1993, and in substance, requires the Department of Labor to publish an agenda listing all the regulations it expects to have under active consideration for promulgation, proposal, or review during the coming 1-year period. The focus of all departmental regulatory activity will be on the development of effective rules that advance the Department's goals and that are understandable and usable to the employers and employees in all affected workplaces.

The Regulatory Flexibility Act became effective on January 1, 1981, and applies only to regulations for which a notice of proposed rulemaking was issued on or after that date. It requires the Department of Labor to publish an agenda listing all the regulations it expects to propose or promulgate that are likely to have a "significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities" (5 U.S.C. 602).

The Regulatory Flexibility Act (under section 610) also requires agencies to periodically review rules "which have or will have a significant economic impact upon a substantial number of small entities" and to annually publish a list of the rules that will be reviewed during the succeeding 12 months. The purpose of the review is to determine whether the rule should be continued without change, amended, or rescinded. In the October 29, 1997, Unified Agenda, the Department listed four rules that were to be reviewed in the succeeding 12 months.

The Employment Standards Administration (ESA) reviewed Government Contractors: Nondiscrimination and Affirmative Action Obligations (41 CFR 60-2) that was last reviewed in 1970. ESA has determined there is a continued need for 41 CFR 60-2. ESA is simplifying the regulation to lessen the impact on small entities and plans to publish a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking in March 1999.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) had four items on the last two years' review lists: Control of Hazardous Energy Sources (Lockout/Tagout), Occupational Exposure to Ethylene Oxide, Grain Handling Facilities, and Cotton Dust. OSHA held public hearings in July 1998 on the Cotton Dust and Grain Handling standards. OSHA expects to make a decision on whether and what action to take regarding the Cotton Dust and Grain Handling standards in September 1999. Reports based on reviews of the Lockout/Tagout and the Occupational Exposure to Ethylene Oxide standards will be published in late 1998.

The Mine Safety and Health Administration (MSHA) conducted the 610 review of its regulations in 30 CFR part 48 addressing Training and Retraining of Miners. MSHA will be issuing final rules addressing supervisor and experienced miner training soon. In addition, based on comments received from the review and its experience, MSHA will develop an NPRM proposing more flexible training requirements.

The next 12-month review list for the Department of Labor is provided below and public comment is invited on the listing. A brief description of each rule, the legal basis for the rule, and the agency contact are provided with each agenda item. Agencies will report on the results of each review in the October 1999 regulatory agenda.

Employment Standards Administration

Government Contractors: Nondiscrimination and Affirmative Action Obligations; 41 CFR 60-2 (RIN 1215-AA01)

Occupational Safety and Health Administration

Control of Hazardous Energy Sources (Lockout/Tagout); 29 CFR 1910.147 (RIN 1218-AB59)

Occupational Exposure to Ethylene Oxide; 29 CFR 1910.1047 (RIN 1218-AB60)

Grain Handling Facilities; 29 CFR 1910.272 (RIN 1218-AB73)

Cotton Dust; 29 CFR 1910.1043 (RIN 1218-AB74)

Mine Safety and Health Administration

Training and Retraining of Miners; 30 CFR 48 (RIN 1219-AB02)

All interested members of the public are invited and encouraged to let departmental officials know how our regulatory efforts can be improved and, of course, to participate in and comment on the review or development of the regulations listed on the agenda.

Alexis M. Herman,

Secretary of Labor.

Abstract: The Department of Labor is developing a rule for its employees that supplements the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch issued by the Office of Government Ethics (OGE). The rule would designate certain components of the Department as separate agencies for the purposes of provisions in the Executive Branch-wide standards regarding gifts from outside sources, the receipt of compensation for teaching, speaking, or writing, and fundraising in a personal capacity. The rule would also restrict the outside financial interests for employees of the Mine Safety and Health Administration and require approval of outside employment for employees of the Office of Inspector General. It repeals existing regulations governing outside employment and financial interests. Issuance of this rule would require OGE concurrence.

2108. COORDINATED ENFORCEMENT OF FARM LABOR PROTECTIVE STATUTES

Priority: Info./Admin./Other

Legal Authority: 29 USC 49 et seq; 29 USC 201 et seq; 29 USC 651 et seq; 29 USC 1801 et seq; 8 USC 1188(g)(2); 5 USC 301

CFR Citation: 29 CFR 42

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The Department intends to revise its regulations for coordinated enforcement of farm protective statutes. The rule will clarify existing regulatory language and update the regulations by making nomenclature and other technical amendments. The sections also will be reorganized for clarification. These regulations were first promulgated in 1980 to coordinate the farm labor enforcement activities of the Department's Employment and Training Administration, the Employment Standards Administration the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, and the Office of the Solicitor of Labor (45 FR 39489). The regulations establish a National Farm Labor Coordinated Enforcement Committee, which meets quarterly, consisting of the heads of the above DOL agencies, to oversee that coordination. A Regional Farm Labor Coordinated Enforcement Committee, which meets quarterly is established in each DOL regional office. The Regional Committee is made up of the head of each of the above Agencies' regional offices. Each Regional Committee holds at least one annual public meeting to discuss farm labor issues.

Additional Information: Since 1980, a number of changes have taken place in DOL's farm labor activities, such as: The Farm Labor Contractor Registration Act has been replaced by the Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Worker Protection Act; the title of the head of the National Committee has been changed from Under Secretary to Deputy Secretary; the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 has amended the Immigration and Nationality Act, authorizing DOL to enforce work contracts executed by employers of alien (H-2A) farmworkers; the role of States in operating the Employment Service under the Wagner-Peyser Act was enhanced in 1982; regional offices of the Employment Standards Administration no longer exist and the regional farm labor enforcement role is now coordinated by the Regional Administrator for Wage and Hour; and the Assistant Secretary for Policy has assumed a role in farm labor programs at the national level. These and other changes necessitate updating the coordinated enforcement regulations.

Abstract: This proposed regulation will revise the existing regulation under the Privacy Act of 1974. The existing regulation was promulgated over 20 years ago and is in need of revision. The proposed regulation will conform Departmental requirements with the case law which has evolved over the past years. The regulation will govern the conduct of Departmental employees and members of the public, as it pertains to the treatment of records covered by the Privacy Act. The proposal will renumber part 70a as part 71 because the Office of the Federal Register no longer permits alphabetical entries for CFR parts.

Abstract: Section 13(a)(15) of the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) provides an exemption from minimum wage and overtime compensation for domestic service employees engaged in providing companionship services. Section 13(b)(21) of the FLSA provides an exemption from overtime compensation for live-in domestic service employees. DOL proposed certain technical amendments to update the regulations, 29 CFR part 552, Application of the Fair Labor Standards Act to Domestic Service, and to clarify that these exemptions are applicable to third-party employers or temporary help agencies only where the domestic service worker is jointly employed by the third-party employer or temporary help agency and the family or household using their services. (58 FR 69310) After reviewing the public comments, the Department adopted technical changes to update the regulations, including a revision necessitated by recently-enacted amendments to title II of the Social Security Act under Public Law 103-387 (Social Security Domestic Employment Reform Act) 10/22/94, (see 60 FR 46766) and reopened the public comment period on proposed revisions affecting third-party employers (section 552.109).

Final, Statutory, October 1, 1995.

Abstract: The Federal Acquisition Streamlining Act of 1994, signed on October 13, 1994, amends several Acts administered by the Department of Labor: (1) It amends the Contract Work Hours and Safety Standards Act (CWHSSA) to limit its applicability to contracts in an amount of $100,000 or greater. (2) It amends the Davis-Bacon Act (DB) to provide waivers from the Act's prevailing wage requirements under selected laws for volunteers performing services to a State or local government or agency and for volunteers performing services to a public or private nonprofit recipient of Federal assistance. (3) It also amends the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act (PCA) to eliminate the requirements that contractors on covered contracts be either manufacturers or regular dealers in the items to be supplied under the contract but retains the Secretary of Labor's authority to define the terms "regular dealer" and "manufacturer." A final rule implementing the CWHSSA and PCA changes was published on August 5, 1996 (61 FR 40714).

Abstract: This regulation gives guidance to employers on the information they must keep in records deemed essential for determining compliance with the monetary requirements of the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) regarding payment of minimum wages and overtime compensation to covered and nonexempt employees, or for determining that certain statutory exemptions to FLSA's requirements for payment of the minimum wage or overtime (or both) may apply. This regulation was included in the Department's regulatory reinvention initiative as a candidate for possible simplification of regulatory language and streamlining of regulatory requirements to ensure that applicable standards are easily understandable and reasonable.

Abstract: In accordance with the authority provided by title V of the Independent Offices Appropriations Act of 1952, often referred to as the "user fee statute," and the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education and Related Agencies Appropriation Act of 1995 (PL 103-333), the Department is proposing to establish and collect user fees to recover the costs of providing certain services that are required by law and without which, the recipients of the services would not legally be allowed to engage in particular employment practices. The services for which user fees are to be collected include processing applications and issuing farm labor contractor certificates of registration under the Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Worker Protection Act; processing applications and issuing certificates authorizing employers to employ certain students at special minimum wages under section 14(b) of the Fair Labor Standards Act; and processing applications and issuing certificates authorizing employers to employ homeworkers under section 11(d) of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Abstract: The "Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996" (H.R. 3448) was enacted on August 20, 1996, as Public Law 104-188. Title II of this enactment amended the Portal-to-Portal Act (PA) and the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA). The PA amendment excludes (under certain circumstances) from compensable "hours worked" the time spent by an employee in home-to-work travel in an employer-provided vehicle. The FLSA amendments: (1) increase the $4.25 Federal minimum hourly wage by $.90 in two steps over two years (i.e., to $4.75 on October 1, 1996, and to $5.15 on September 1, 1997); (2) provide a $4.25 subminimum wage for youth under age 20 in their first 90 calendar days of employment with an employer; (3) set the employer's direct wage payment obligation for tipped employees at $2.13 per hour (provided such employees receive the balance of the full minimum wage in tips); and (4) set the hourly compensation requirements at not less than $27.63 per hour for certain exempt professional employees in computer-related occupations. Changes will be required in the regulations to reflect these amendments.

Abstract: The Debt Collection Improvement Act of 1996 (PL 104-134)

DOL—ESA — Proposed Rule Stage

amended the Federal Civil Penalties Inflation Adjustment Act of 1990 (PL 101-410) to require Federal agencies to adjust certain civil money penalties for inflation. The Department is proposing adjustments in the civil money penalties that may be assessed under section 16(e) of the Fair Labor Standards Act for (1) repeated or willful violations of the minimum wage or overtime provisions; and (2) child labor violations. Any increase in the penalty amounts shall apply only to violations which occur after the effective date of the increase.

Abstract: Two appellate court decisions have ruled that the Department of Labor's definition of "site of the work" in section 5.2(l) of the Davis-Bacon Act regulations does not conform to the statutory language of the Davis-Bacon Act, which requires payment of prevailing wages as determined under the Act to all laborers and mechanics "employed directly upon the site of the work." (See e.g., Ball, Ball and Brosamer v. Reich, 24 F.3d 1447, (D.C. Cir. 1994); L.P. Cavett Company v. U.S. Department of Labor, 101 F.3d 1111 (6th Cir. 1996).) The Department is proposing technical clarifications of Davis-Bacon coverage based on the site of the work definition as interpreted by these court decisions.

Abstract: The Division of Coal Mine Workers' Compensation reviewed its existing regulations, pursuant to Executive Order 12866, with a goal of eliminating outdated and unnecessary rules and streamlining the processes. The result is a proposal to revise existing rules to facilitate alternative dispute resolution during the informal conference; streamline the litigation process by encouraging the early development and submission of evidence; reduce the costs of copying and mailing; raise the dollar limit for prior approval for medical equipment; and rewrite existing rules to make them more customer-oriented.

There will be no additional administrative costs associated with these changes, but savings can be expected through streamlining.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 29 USC 706; 29 USC 793; EO 11758

CFR Citation: 41 CFR 60-741 (Revision)

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This final rule revises appendix C to the regulations implementing section 503 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. Appendix C contains procedures that Government contractors may use to review their personnel processes to ensure that the processes are fair to disabled applicants and employees. The existing appendix recommends that contractors attach or include a description of accommodations considered or used for individuals with disabilities to application forms or personnel records. As revised, the appendix recommends that the description of accommodations be maintained in separate confidential medical files.

The revision results from a comment submitted by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission in response to OFCCP's NPRM under the Vietnam Era Veterans' Readjustment Assistance Act (VEVRAA), which contains a similar appendix. The EEOC submitted that in most instances descriptions of accommodations constitute medical information that, under the Americans with Disabilities Act, must be maintained in separate files and treated as confidential medical records.

Accordingly, the revision is required in order to ensure that contractors complying with section 503 will not inadvertently violate the Americans with Disabilities Act. The revision also ensures continued consistency between OFCCP's rules under section 503 and VEVRAA, which minimizes contractor burdens and confusion.

Abstract: The Office of Labor-Management Standards (OLMS) is proposing to amend Receipts and Disbursements Report (Form LM-21) to narrow the scope of reporting. A Receipts and Disbursements Report is required in the circumstances specified in section 203(b) of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959, as amended (LMRDA). It is required to be filed by any labor relations consultant, or other individual or organization, who has made or received payment as a party to an agreement or arrangement with an employer, pursuant to which he has undertaken persuader or information-supplying activities on behalf of the employer. The proposed amendment would reflect reporting guidelines established in Donovan v. The Rose Law Firm, 768 F.2d 964 (8th Cir. 1985). This judicial decision narrowed the scope of reporting to eliminate reporting of receipts and disbursements in connection with labor relations advice and services rendered to employers for whom no persuader or information-supplying activities were undertaken.

Abstract: Experience in several recent disasters has highlighted the complexity and time-consuming nature of the monetary benefit provisions of the current regulations and brought into question other provisions of the current regulations which are perceived to be unduly restrictive and/or result in perceived inequities in some disaster situations. These issues will be addressed in two stages. First, an ANPRM was published, with a 60-day comment period, on 12/08/94 at 59 FR 63670. This ANPRM outlined provisions in the Disaster Unemployment Assistance (DUA) program regulations (20 CFR part 625), other than the monetary benefit provisions, that have come into question and solicits public comment and suggestions relative to these provisions and on other provisions for review and potential revision in a future NPRM. Second, an interim final rule was published May 11, 1995, with a 60-day comment period. This rule simplified the monetary assistance provisions by removing cumbersome administrative provisions and inconsistencies in the computation of a weekly amount.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 1552

Abstract: U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia held that section 43 of the Airline Deregulation Act was unconstitutional. On July 16, 1985, the U.S. Court of Appeals decided that employee protection provisions of section 43 were severable from the legislative veto provisions. The U.S. Supreme Court ruled on March 25, 1987, that the legislative veto provisions were unconstitutional but the employee protection provisions were constitutional; therefore, rulemaking on the monetary benefits aspect of the employee protection program can proceed. In 1991 DOT determined there were no job losses due to deregulation. In September 1993, the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia ordered DOT to develop broader guidelines to apply to air carriers, which may result in a finding of job losses. DOL has reinstituted clearance on the proposed rule. No benefits are payable to eligible workers until DOT determines that an air carrier experienced a qualifying dislocation and Congress appropriates the money to award benefits. To date, neither of these actions has occurred.

Abstract: Title V of the North American Free Trade Agreement Implementation Act (PL 103-182) amends chapter 2 of title II of the Trade Act of 1974 by adding a new Transitional Adjustment Assistance Program (NAFTA-TAA) for workers who lose their jobs because of increased imports from or a shift of production to Mexico and Canada. Most of the provisions of title V are in the form of amendments to chapter 2, title II, of the Trade Act. While some of the provisions are not in the form of amendments to the Trade Act, they nonetheless must be given effect in implementing the NAFTA-TAA program. A proposed rule to amend the regulations on the trade adjustment assistance program for workers was published in the Federal Register on January 17, 1995.

Abstract: The Department of Labor (DOL) is currently re-engineering the labor certification process that is set forth in DOL regulations at 20 CFR 656. DOL's goals are to make fundamental changes and refinements that will (a) better serve customers, (b) streamline the process, (c) improve effectiveness, and (d) save resources. The re-engineering effort is a collaborative effort of Federal and State staff who are involved in the administration of alien certification programs. The re-engineering effort also involves consultation throughout the process with sponsors, stakeholders State partners, and outside interest groups to solicit ideas and suggestions for change.

2144. ESTABLISHMENT OF FEES FOR IMMIGRATION PROGRAMS ADMINISTERED BY THE EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING ADMINISTRATION

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: Not yet determined

CFR Citation: Not yet determined

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The regulation would establish a new fee charged to employers for processing of alien labor certification and attestation applications by the Department of Labor (DOL) and State Employment Security Agencies. The user fee would be proposed in the FY 1998 Reconciliation Bill. The user fee would be a government receipt and would be applied to Federal and State expenditures for Federal and State program administration in the State Unemployment Insurance and Employment Service account and the Program Operations Account in DOL's Employment and Training Administration (ETA).

Timetable: Next Action Undetermined

Regulatory Flexibility Analysis Required: No

Government Levels Affected: State, Local

Additional Information: Funding of ETA immigration programs has been reduced by 39 percent since FY 1995. The fee proceeds would be used to offset the costs of administering the alien labor certification program. However, in each of Fiscal Years 1999 and 2000 regular appropriations of $41 million would be required in addition to user fees to work off a large backlog of applications already in the pipeline and future growing backlogs created primarily by appropriations reduction in FY 1996 and 1997.

Abstract: It is the purpose of title IV, section 402, of the Job Training Partnership Act to provide job training, employment opportunities, and other services for those individuals who suffer chronic seasonal unemployment and underemployment in the agriculture industry. These conditions have been substantially aggravated by continual advancements in technology and mechanization, resulting in displacement, and contribute significantly to the Nation's rural employment problem. This problem is Federal in scope. No alternative solutions are under consideration at this time. Benefits include fuller rural employment. Over $69 million is appropriated annually by Congress for this program. This rule would implement changes made by the 1992 amendments to JTPA.

Abstract: The regulation will establish standards for determining whether an employee benefit plan is established or maintained pursuant to one or more collective bargaining agreements for purposes of its exclusion from the Multiple Employer Welfare Arrangement (MEWA) definition in section 3(40) of ERISA, and thus exempted from state regulation. The regulation will clarify the scope of the exception from the MEWA definition for plans maintained under or pursuant to one or more collective bargaining agreements by providing criteria which will serve to distinguish health benefit arrangements which are maintained by legitimate unions pursuant to bona fide collective bargaining agreements from health insurance arrangements promoted and marketed under the guise of ERISA-covered plans exempt from State insurance regulation. The regulation will also serve to limit the extent to which health plans maintained pursuant to bona fide collective bargaining agreements may extend plan coverage to individuals not covered by such agreements. The Department has determined to develop a revised proposal utilizing the negotiated rulemaking process.

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: These proposed rules will govern certain reporting requirements under title I of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended (ERISA) for multiple employer welfare arrangements (MEWAs) that provide benefits consisting of medical care. In part, the rules will implement recent changes made to ERISA by the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (HIPAA). The proposed rules will also set forth elements that MEWAs would be required to file with the Department of Labor for the purpose of determining compliance with the portability nondiscrimination, renewability and other requirements of part 7 of subtitle B of title I of ERISA including the requirements of the Mental Health Parity Act of 1996 and the Newborns' and Mothers' Protection Act of 1996. The proposed rules would also provide guidance with respect to section 502(c)(5) of ERISA which authorizes the Secretary of Labor to assess a civil penalty of up to $1,000 a day for failure to comply with the new reporting requirements.

The Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (HIPAA), PL 104-191, was enacted on August 21, 1996. HIPAA amended the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended (ERISA) to provide for, among other things, improved portability and continuity of health insurance coverage. The Newborns' and Mothers' Health Protection Act of 1996 (NMHPA), PL 104-204, and the Mental Health Parity Act of 1996 (MHPA) also PL 45-204, were enacted on September 26, 1996, to provide protection for mothers and their newborn children with regard to the length of hospital stays following birth and parity in the application of limits for certain mental health benefits with limits on medical and surgical benefits, respectively. All of the above provisions are set forth in a new part 7 of subtitle B of title I of ERISA.

Section 101(g)(h) of ERISA, as amended by HIPAA, provides that the Secretary of Labor may prescribe reporting requirements for multiple employer welfare arrangements (MEWAs) that provide benefits consisting of medical care but are not group health plans within the meaning of title I of ERISA. The reporting requirements of section 101(g)(h) of ERISA, as well as the related civil penalty provisions of section 502(c)(5) of ERISA are intended to help determine the extent to which the requirements of part 7 of subtitle B of title I of ERISA are being carried out in connection with the provision of medical care by such MEWAs.

Abstract: This initiative would amend the conditions under which small pension plans (i.e., those with fewer than 100 participants) will be exempt from the requirements of section 103(a)(3)(A) to engage an independent qualified public accountant and to include the report of such accountant as part of the plan's annual report. Specifically, the amendment would condition the availability of the exemption on plan assets being held by an approved institution, the approved institution providing a certification of the assets held, and the availability of such certifications to plan participants and beneficiaries. This initiative is being undertaken to improve security and accountability with respect to assets of small employee pension benefit plans.

Abstract: The Department has received requests not to reject multiemployer welfare plan annual reports (Form 5500) or assess civil penalties solely because the opinion of an independent qualified public accountant, that is required to be included with the Form 5500, either is adverse or qualified due to a failure to comply with the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants (AICPA) Statement of Position 92-6 (SOP 92-6). Under SOP 92-6, the AICPA has modified generally accepted accounting principles to require health and other welfare plans to calculate and disclose, as part of their financial statements, the present value of their future post-retirement benefit obligations. The Department is considering comments received from the public on the burdens, costs, and benefits of accounting for post-retirement welfare benefit obligations in accordance with SOP 92-6 prior to adopting a formal position on this matter for 1999 and future plan years.

Abstract: This interpretive bulletin will compile for ease of reference the views of the Department of Labor (the Department) concerning the circumstances under which the use of a payroll deduction program for forwarding employee monies to an individual retirement account annuity will not constitute an employee pension benefit plan subject to title I of the Employee Retirement Security Act of 1974 (ERISA). This guidance is intended to assist employers in their efforts to provide retirement savings opportunities to employees by clarifying the circumstances under which the use of payroll deduction programs will not implicate provisions of parts 1 (Reporting and Disclosure), 4 (Fiduciary Responsibility) and 5 (Administration and Enforcement) of title I of ERISA.

Abstract: Section 502(l) of ERISA requires the Secretary of Labor to assess a civil penalty against a fiduciary who breaches a fiduciary duty under, or commits a violation of, part 4 of title I of ERISA, or any other person who knowingly participates in such breach or violation. The Department has published an interim rule setting forth the procedures for the assessment of penalties under ERISA section 502(l) and for petitioning the Secretary to exercise his or her discretion to waive or reduce the mandated assessment, as well as a proposed rule that defines the following pivotal terms contained in section 502(l): "applicable recovery amount," "breach of fiduciary responsibility or violation," "settlement agreement," and "court order." The Department intends to finalize these two regulations.

Abstract: PWBA has undertaken a comprehensive review of the current reporting and disclosure framework to identify changes that will serve to assure the disclosure of useful and timely information while eliminating any unnecessary administrative burdens and costs on plans and plan sponsors attendant to compliance with these requirements. On the basis of recommendations and information from the public concerning the need for regulatory and legislative changes in the disclosure area. PWBA concluded that only marginal changes to the disclosure requirements can be accomplished through the regulatory process and, therefore, reform efforts should focus on regulatory changes relating to the streamlining of the Form 5500 Series, and related annual reporting regulations, in addition to possible legislative changes to both the reporting and disclosure provisions.

Abstract: MSHA's current air quality standards for exposure to hazardous airborne contaminants were promulgated over 25 years ago. They do not fully protect today's miners, who are potentially exposed to an array of toxic chemicals, including lead, cyanide, arsenic benzene, asbestos, and other well-documented hazards. Some miners have developed occupational illness (e.g., lead poisoning, acute cyanide poisoning, and silicosis) as a result of their exposure. MSHA has concluded that a gradual phase-in of provisions in the air quality rulemaking will be less burdensome for the industry and provide more immediate protection for the miners exposed to the most serious hazards. MSHA will be issuing the final rule in phases. Phase 2 addresses respiratory protection. Phase 3 will address selected PELs. MSHA is also considering subsequent phases to update PELs applicable to hazards encountered in metal and nonmetal and coal mines, revise requirements for exposure monitoring, improve precautions for handling restricted use chemicals, provide for observation of monitoring, and establish provisions for medical surveillance and transfer of miners required to use respirators and miners exposed to certain carcinogens.

Abstract: Since 1970, MSHA regulations have generally prohibited belt haulage entries from being used to ventilate active working places. The intention of this prohibition is to prevent smoke from a belt conveyor fire from being coursed to miners in their workplace. Improved technology, including sophisticated atmospheric monitoring systems, has since made it possible to safely use "belt air" to ventilate active working places. This rulemaking would permit the use of belt air, provided that certain safety requirements are met. In many cases, the use of belt air may result in more efficient and effective ventilation systems, enhancing the health and safety of miners. Additionally because this regulation will eliminate the need for mine operators to seek regulatory variances from MSHA, costs and burdens on both industry and MSHA will be reduced.

Legal Authority: 30 USC 811

CFR Citation: 30 CFR 56; 30 CFR 57; 30 CFR 77

Abstract: Accidents involving surface haulage equipment are a leading safety problem in the mining industry. A review of fatal mining accidents during the past 3 years shows that 30% of the deaths involved surface haulage equipment. This equipment includes large 240-ton haulage vehicles, over-the-road trucks, front-end loaders, and other equipment. Causes of surface haulage accidents include brake failures, unsafe grades, overloaded vehicles, and "blind spots." The Agency issued an Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (ANPRM) in July 1998 to share its ideas and to seek suggestions to reduce these surface haulage accidents. MSHA will consider all comments received on the ANPRM in developing the proposed rule.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 30 USC 811

CFR Citation: 30 CFR 57; 30 CFR 75

Abstract: Recent fatalities in underground coal mines involving roof-bolting machines indicate the need to both modify the design of such machines and take additional precautions in their use. MSHA has evaluated roof-bolting machines currently in use focusing on potential hazards to the machine operators during the drilling and roof-bolt installation procedures. MSHA believes that machine design features may contribute to or cause accidents and that changes in machine design and operating procedures would make operating the equipment safer for the machine operator. The Agency issued an Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (ANPRM) to obtain additional information and data on mine operators' experiences with these machines. MSHA will consider all comments received on the ANPRM in developing the proposed rule.

2180. SAFETY STANDARD REVISIONS FOR UNDERGROUND ANTHRACITE MINES

Priority: Other Significant

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

Legal Authority: 30 USC 811

CFR Citation: 30 CFR 75

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: There are two major types of coal mines -- bituminous and anthracite. The mining methods used and hazards encountered in underground anthracite mines are different from those in underground bituminous coal mines. Mining methods in anthracite mines include minimal use of mechanized equipment, slow rate of advance into the coal seam, and pitching and unduiating seams. Because of these differences, some mine operators find it difficult to comply with existing safety standards at their anthracite mines. These anthracite mine operators must request a variance from existing standards to change the requirements. The variance process costs time and money. Because anthracite mines are usually small operations, this burden can be significant. MSHA has received over 300 variance requests from anthracite mine operators since January 1993. MSHA intends to issue a proposed rule to modify several existing safety standards to address more appropriately the specific conditions of the anthracite mining industry.

2181. ELECTRICAL STANDARDS FOR METAL AND NONMETAL MINES

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: 30 USC 811

CFR Citation: 30 CFR 56; 30 CFR 57

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: Electric power is widely used in the mining and processing of minerals. Large, highly productive mining equipment, such as continuous miners, loaders, shuttle cars, draglines, shovels and drills, are electrically powered. In addition, electricity is used for the transportation of material on conveyors, for electric railroads, and for processing plants. MSHA's accident records related to inadequate equipment grounding support the need for improved safety standards. The number of electrical accidents could be reduced by proper equipment grounding. The proposed rule would revise MSHA's existing safety standards addressing hazards associated with the grounding of circuits equipment, and metal enclosures at surface and underground metal and nonmetal mines. The proposed standard would specify requirements for grounding conductors to ensure that safe methods of grounding are used.

Abstract: The proposed rule would revise existing standards and add new standards to require certain operators of underground metal and nonmetal mines to make self-contained self-rescue devices (SCSRs) available to miners. SCSRs are emergency breathing units that generate oxygen. Existing MSHA standards require that SCSRs be available for emergencies at all underground coal mines. MSHA expects that this proposed rule would affect fewer than 20 metal and nonmetal mines where methane has been detected.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 30 USC 825

CFR Citation: 30 CFR 48

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: In 1991, MSHA published a proposed rule to revise portions of the existing part 48 regulations. In response to that proposal, MSHA received numerous comments from both industry and labor representatives. Some commenters recommended that supervisors who are exposed to mine hazards should receive training under part 48 beyond that required for other miners. While these comments raised concerns that extended beyond the scope of that proposed rule, MSHA has evaluated the merits of these concerns and determined that they warrant Agency consideration. For this reason, MSHA is addressing them in this proposal. MSHA is proposing to increase the number of hours of annual refresher training for supervisors from 8 hours to 12 hours. The training needs of supervisors are broader in scope and require a greater depth of understanding than that needed by other miners. MSHA expects that better trained, more knowledgeable supervisors will contribute to their own safety and that of the miners under their supervision.

Abstract: Today's complex mining environment subjects miners to well-known hazards, such as coal mine dust and crystalline silica; to emerging hazards, including hazardous wastes burned as fuel supplements at cement kilns; and to changing hazards from the many chemicals brought onto mine property. This rule would provide miners with the means to receive necessary information on the hazards of chemicals to which they are exposed and the actions necessary to protect them from such hazards. In developing this rule, MSHA has reviewed OSHA's hazard communication standard, information collected by NIOSH, and public comments. For its final rule, MSHA intends to publish a user-friendly regulation which will facilitate compliance by mine operators, while providing increased health and safety protection to miners.

2189. LONGWALL EQUIPMENT (INCLUDING HIGH-VOLTAGE)

Priority: Other Significant

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

Legal Authority: 30 USC 811; 30 USC 957

CFR Citation: 30 CFR 18; 30 CFR 75

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: Since 1970, MSHA regulations have required that high-voltage cables and transformers be kept at least 150 feet from the coal extraction area. The objective of this requirement is to prohibit the use of high-voltage cables and equipment that could serve as an ignition source for methane and coal dust in close proximity to the work area.

The modern development of highly productive longwall mining systems has resulted in their widespread use in the mining industry. Mine operators, however, currently must apply to MSHA for a variance from the existing standards in order to use this high-voltage equipment. The increased use of high-voltage longwalls in underground coal mines in recent years has led to the design of safe high-voltage electrical equipment and associated cables. These improvements have occurred specifically in the area of design and construction of explosion-proof equipment; insulation, short circuit, ground fault, and mechanical protection of cables; and equipment for safe handling of cables. For these reasons, in August 1992, MSHA published a proposed rule to establish safety requirements for the design construction, installation, use, and maintenance of high-voltage longwall equipment and associated cables. The final rule will eliminate the need for a variance to use this equipment.

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: To ensure that only safe products are used in mines, MSHA sets approval requirements and tests products itself. This rulemaking would allow MSHA to accept testing of certified mine equipment performed by independent laboratories which will improve the health and safety of miners. It also would allow MSHA to approve products which satisfied alternative testing and evaluation requirements, provided that the alternative requirements were equivalent to MSHA's own, or could be enhanced to be equivalent. By reducing its testing activities, MSHA could direct more resources toward verifying that products in use have been manufactured in compliance with the relevant approval. This rulemaking is consistent with a recommendation of the National Performance Review.

Abstract: The final rule would implement new procedures and requirements for testing and approval of flame-resistant conveyor belts to be used in underground mines. These revisions would replace the existing flame test for conveyor belts. Current regulations require that conveyor belts be flame-resistant in accordance with specifications of the Secretary. As part of this rulemaking, the Agency also would promulgate conforming amendments to relevant safety standards.

Abstract: In response to the President's directive, MSHA conducted a review of its existing regulations to identify provisions that are outdated, redundant, unnecessary, or otherwise in need of changing. Many of the changes require notice and comment rulemaking while other non-substantive changes can be implemented upon publication. So far, the Agency has identified nine regulations that could be removed entirely without any adverse impact on miner safety and health. In general, these regulations are obsolete or redundant. MSHA has identified provisions in over 80 other regulations that need overhauling or the cleanup of non-substantive language. MSHA will also be considering new regulations that reflect "best practices" which are used widely in the mining industry to protect miners' safety and health. MSHA views this project to be an evolving, ongoing process and will continue to accept recommendations from the public.

2193. SAFETY STANDARDS FOR UNDERGROUND COAL MINE VENTILATION

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: 30 USC 811

CFR Citation: 30 CFR 75.360(a)(1)

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: MSHA is proposing to amend section 75.360(a)(1) by requiring preshift examinations to be conducted within 3 hours preceding the beginning of any 8-hour interval during which any person is scheduled to work or travel underground. MSHA's 1996 final rule revising its standards for ventilation of underground coal mines was challenged in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit (D.C. Circuit). The D.C. Circuit reviewed the validity of the rule and issued an order invalidating, on procedural grounds only, section 75.360(a)(1).

In response to the order, the Agency published a notice in the Federal Register reinstating the portion of the previous regulation requiring a preshift examination to be conducted prior to the beginning of any shift. This proposed rule is identical to the standard promulgated in the 1996 final rule which was invalidated by the D.C. Circuit.

The general practice in the mining industry at the time the Mine Act was enacted was for coal miners to work in shifts of 8 hours. Thus, the effect of the preshift examination requirement was that examiners conducted preshift examinations every 8 hours. However, over a period of time, overlapping work shifts and work shifts exceeding 8 hours have become common. MSHA continues to believe that it is necessary to address the issues surrounding the preshift examination interval. The proposal would clarify and standardize the application of the preshift examination requirements to assure that these examinations are concluded within appropriate time frames.

MSHA has determined that this proposed rule does not meet the criteria of a significant regulatory action. The proposal would cost under $1 million and will only affect approximately 230 underground coal mines.

Abstract: In mining operations, the majority of the fatalities associated with confined spaces occur in storage bins, hoppers, tanks, and stockpiles. The primary hazards to miners occur from being trapped by shifting piles of loose materials, falling into materials, and being struck by overhanging materials. Due to the many chemicals used and stored in mining, the toxic and physical hazards encountered in mining are identical to those confined space hazards that exist in general industry. MSHA intends to explore both regulatory and non-regulatory options to address the hazards associated with working in confined spaces at mines.

2196. SAFETY STANDARDS FOR METHANE IN METAL AND NONMETAL MINES

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 30 USC 811

CFR Citation: 30 CFR 57

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: Current MSHA regulations place metal and nonmetal mines with a history of, or a potential for, methane liberation (gassy mines) into several categories. Safety standards for methane detection and prevention apply to a mine depending on its category. Recent legal decisions have narrowed the application of existing gassy mine standards, leading MSHA to conclude that the standards may need to be revised to protect adequately all miners who work in gassy mines. This action would revise the existing safety standards for methane in metal and nonmetal mines to address dangerous levels of methane in outburst cavities in abandoned idled, and worked-out areas of category II-A mines. It would further address the use of approved equipment in category III mines. The Agency is exploring the use of negotiated rulemaking to address this issue.

Abstract: Existing respirable dust standards limit respirable dust when quartz (crystalline silica) is present. MSHA is considering a new standard specifying a separate exposure limit for silica (not tied to the respirable dust standard). This is in response to recommendations of the Advisory Committee on the Elimination of Pneumoconiosis Among Coal Mine Workers who felt that separate standards for coal mine dust and for silica "should aid in targeting mining situations where silica exposure constitutes a significant hazard."

Abstract: The Federal Coal Mine Health and Safety Act of 1969 established the first comprehensive respirable dust standards for coal mines. These standards were designed to reduce the incidence of coal workers' pneumoconiosis ("black lung") and silicosis and eventually eliminate these diseases. While significant progress has been made toward improving the health conditions in our Nation's coal mines, miners continue to be at risk of developing occupational lung disease, according to the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health. In February 1996, the Secretary convened a Federal Advisory Committee on the Elimination of Pneumoconiosis Among Coal Miners (Advisory Committee) to assess the adequacy of MSHA's current program and standards to control respirable dust in underground and surface coal mines, as well as other ways to eliminate black lung and silicosis among coal miners. The Committee submitted its report to the Secretary in November 1996, with the majority of the recommendations unanimously supported by the Committee members.

MSHA has completed a preliminary review of the Advisory Committee's recommendations. There are 20 principal recommendations set out in the Advisory Committee report, which are further subdivided into a total of approximately 100 distinct action items. The recommendations are both extensive and significant, and warrant thorough consideration by the Agency. MSHA, therefore, is proceeding with an in-depth evaluation of the recommendations and will respond to them in an orderly fashion.

MSHA has issued issued five Procedure Instruction Letters implementing some of the recommendations of the Advisory Committee. The Agency will notify the mining community as it determines how to implement other Advisory Committee

Abstract: MSHA has revised its safety standards for metal and nonmetal mines and underground coal mines to reference the 1995 ASTM standard for roof bolts and accessories (ASTM F432-95). The new standard reflects technological advances in the design of roof and rock bolts and support materials and will improve the level of protection provided to miners. The safety standards for ground control and roof control at mines currently require that mine operators obtain a certification from the manufacturer that rock bolts and accessories are manufactured and tested in accordance with an American Society for Testing and Material (ASTM) publication "Standard Specification for Roof and Rock Bolts and Accessories." MSHA regulations reference the 1983 revision (ASTM F432-83) for metal and nonmetal mines and the 1988 revision (ASTM 432-88) for coal mines. The ASTM standard is a consensus standard used throughout the United States. It contains specifications for the chemical, mechanical, and dimensional requirements for roof and rock bolts and accessories used for ground support systems.

Legal Authority: 30 USC 813

CFR Citation: 30 CFR 56; 30 CFR 57; 30 CFR 62; 30 CFR 70; 30 CFR 71

Abstract: Section 62.120(f) of MSHA's comprehensive proposed rule on occupational noise exposure would require operators to establish a system of monitoring which effectively evaluates each miner's noise exposure. Consistent with the Federal Mine Safety and Health Act of 1977 (Mine Act), and in response to comments, MSHA published a supplemental noise proposal to include a new provision providing affected miners and their representatives with an opportunity to observe this monitoring.

Section 103(c) of the Mine Act requires, among other things that when the Secretary issues regulations requiring operator monitoring, "such regulations shall provide the miners or their representatives with an opportunity to observe such monitoring or measuring, and to have access to the records thereof." The supplemental noise proposal would implement section 103(c) of the Mine Act.

Abstract: MSHA proposed to amend the definition of "experienced miner" to mean a miner who has had one year of mining experience and, for new miners hired after October 13, 1978, has completed new miner training. MSHA proposed to strengthen the training requirements for experienced miners by adding course requirements. Also, MSHA proposed to delete the supervisory personnel exemption from the training requirements. The comments received by MSHA on its September 1991 proposed rule addressed such issues as the appropriate training for different types

2203. • SAFETY STANDARDS FOR REPORTING DAILY INSPECTIONS OF SURFACE COAL MINES

Priority: Info./Admin./Other

Legal Authority: 30 USC 811

CFR Citation: 30 CFR 77.1713

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: MSHA is making a nonsubstantive technical amendment to 30 CFR 77.1713. Currently the rule provides that all recorded examination reports of daily inspections for hazardous conditions at surface coal mines include the action taken to abate hazardous conditions and be signed or countersigned each day by at least one of the following persons: (1) the surface mine foreman; (2) the assistant superintendent of the mine; (3) the superintendent of the mine; or (4) the person designated by the operator as responsible for health and safety at the mine.

The persons specified are responsible for health and safety in the mine, to suspend operations and allocate resources to correct health and safety problems as they develop. However, the terms "mine foreman," "superintendent," and "assistant superintendent" may no longer describe the person with the authority to correct problems within certain mine management structures in the coal industry. This technical amendment updates the standard to allow a mine official with authority and responsibility equivalent to the mine officials specified in the existing standard to sign or countersign the daily inspection reports. MSHA has determined that the cost of this rule is the same as the existing rule. The benefit is that it reflects changes in terminology in the industry.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR (DOL)

Office of the Assistant Secretary for Administration and Management (OASAM)

Proposed Rule Stage

2204. NONDISCRIMINATION ON THE BASIS OF AGE IN PROGRAMS AND ACTIVITIES RECEIVING FEDERAL FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE FROM THE DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 42 USC 6101 et seq Age Discrimination Act of 1975

CFR Citation: 45 CFR 90

Legal Deadline:
NPRM, Statutory, September 10, 1979, Requires publication of the NPRM within 90 days of publication and submission to HHS of final rule within 120 days of NPRM.

Abstract: The proposed regulatory action is necessary to comply with the Department's statutory and regulatory obligations under the Age Discrimination Act of 1975, as amended (the Act). The Act and the general, Governmentwide implementing rule issued by the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) (45 CFR 90) require each Federal agency providing financial assistance to any program or activity to publish proposed regulations implementing the Act no later than 90 days after the publication date of the Governmentwide rule, and to submit final agency regulations to HHS no later than 120 days after publication of the NPRM. As a practical matter, while DOL has not issued proposed or final regulations under the Age Discrimination Act, it has complied with its enforcement obligations. Furthermore, discrimination on the basis of age is prohibited under section 167 of the Job Training Partnership Act of 1982 and the implementing regulations at 29 CFR 34.

2205. • NONDISCRIMINATION ON THE BASIS OF DISABILITY IN PROGRAMS AND ACTIVITIES RECEIVING OR BENEFITING FROM FEDERAL FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 29 USC 794 Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended

CFR Citation: 29 CFR 32

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended prohibits discrimination on the basis of disability in federally financed programs and activities. The Department last published a final rule implementing section 504 on October 7, 1980. Since that time, section 504 has been amended several times, generally to update terminology and provide new definitions. The Department is undertaking this rulemaking to update 29 CFR part 32 to incorporate those changes.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: PL 105-220, sec 188 Workforce Investment Act

CFR Citation: 29 CFR 37

Legal Deadline:
Final, Statutory, August 7, 1999.

Abstract: The Workforce Investment Act of 1988 (WIA) was signed into law by President Clinton on August 7, 1998. Section 188 prohibits discrimination on the grounds of race, color, national origin, sex, age, disability, religion, political affiliation or belief, participant status, and against certain noncitizens. Section 188(e) requires that the Secretary of Labor issue regulations necessary to implement section 188 not later than one year after the date of the enactment of the WIA. Such regulations will include standards for determining compliance and procedures for enforcement that are consistent with the Acts referred to in section 188(a)(1), as well as procedures to ensure that complaints filed under section 188 and such acts processed in a manner that avoids duplication of effort.

Abstract: The Department of Labor hereby adds title 29 CFR 99 "Audits of States, Local Governments, and Non-Profit Organizations" as a new regulation which codifies the revised Office of Management and Budget (OMB) Circular A-133 in its entirety. The Single Audit Act Amendments of 1996 (Public Law 104-156, 110 Stat. 136) and the June 24, 1997, revision of OMB Circular A-133, "Audits of States Local Governments, and Non-Profit Organizations," required agencies to adopt in codified regulations the standards in the revised OMB Circular A-133 by August 29, 1997, so that they will apply to audits of fiscal years beginning after June 30, 1996. The revised OMB Circular A-133 co-located audit requirements for States, local governments, and non-profit organizations. As a consequence, the OMB rescinded OMB Circular A-128, "Audits of States and Local Governments." On August 29, 1997, the Department of Labor amended its grants common rules at 29 CFR 95 and 29 CFR 97 in accordance with OMB guidance.

Abstract: As required by section 610 of the Regulatory Flexibility Act and section 5 of Executive Order 12866, OSHA has reviewed the Agency's standard for the protection of employees from exposure to lockout/tagout hazards, 29 CFR 1910.147, to determine whether the rule should be continued without change or should be amended or rescinded, consistent with the objectives of the rule and of the Occupational Safety and Health Act, to minimize any significant impact on a substantial number of small entities. After a thorough review of the Agency's experience in enforcing this standard, the available literature, and comments received in connection with this review, OSHA has determined that there is a continued need for the rule, that the rule does not appear to overlap, duplicate, or conflict with other Federal rules or with other State and local rules, and that no technological, economic or other factors have arisen since the rule was published that would necessitate amendment or rescission of the rule at this time. OSHA has also concluded that no change that is consistent with the objectives of the OSH Act can be made to the rule that will further minimize any significant impact on a substantial number of small entities. OSHA will be responding to comments received during this review of the standard by preparing materials to assist employers in complying with the rule.

Abstract: Since the promulgation of a final rule for scaffolds used in construction in August 1996, OSHA has learned of several issues that have arisen under the new standard. The agency is considering whether to propose changes to the scaffolds standard to address these issues. These issues include: (1) providing access to platforms where decking extends past the ends of the scaffold; (2) changing the minimum width for roof brackets to less than 12 inches; (3) changing the requirements for grounding of the scaffold during welding operations; (4) requiring the use of scaffold grade planks. Abstract: In the 1980s, OSHA embarked on a project to update and consolidate OSHA standards that applied to the shipbuilding, shiprepair, and shipbreaking industry. Shipyard employers have been subject to both the "shipyard" standards and OSHA's general industry standards. This has resulted in inconsistent and contradictory requirements for essentially the same operations.

Phase 1 of this project aimed at establishing a vertical standard for shipyard employment and addressed six subparts (Confined Spaces, Welding, Access/Egress, Personal Protective Equipment, Fall Protection and Scaffolding). Proposals on these subparts were issued in November 1988 (53 FR 48092). The remaining subparts were categorized as Phase II of the consolidation project (including general working conditions and fire protection). This action was endorsed by the Shipyard Advisory Committee which was chartered in 1989 to update and consolidate existing shipyard standards.

This particular standard will revise the existing shipyard employment standards covering access and egress and will consolidate all related and applicable 29 CFR part 1910 provisions into 29 CFR part 1915. The revision will develop, in part, performance-oriented standards, address current gaps in coverage, address new technology, and eliminate outmoded and redundant provisions. 75,000 workers are potentially exposed to these hazards annually.

Abstract: In July 1993, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) was petitioned for an emergency temporary standard (ETS) to reduce the permissible exposure limit (PEL) for occupational exposures to hexavalent chromium. The Oil, Chemical, and Atomic Workers International Union (OCAW) and Public Citizen's Health Research Group (HRG) petitioned OSHA to promulgate an ETS to lower the PEL for chromium (CrVI) compounds to 0.5 micrograms per cubic meter of air (ug/m3) as an eight-hour, time-weighted average (TWA). This represents a significant reduction in the current PEL. The current PEL in general industry is found in 29 CFR 1910.1000 Table Z and is a ceiling value of 100 ug/m3 for "Chromic acid and chromates (as CrO3)." These are measured as chromium (VI) and reported as chromic anhydride (CrO3). The amount of chromium in the compound equates to a PEL of 52 ug/m3 of chromium (VI) measured and reported as chromium (VI). This ceiling limit applies to all forms of hexavalent chromium (VI) including chromic acid and chromates, lead chromate, and zinc chromate. The current PEL for chromium (VI) in the construction industry is 100 ug/m3 as a TWA PEL, which also equates to a PEL of 52 ug/m3.

The major illnesses associated with occupational exposures to hexavalent chromium are lung cancer and dermatoses. OSHA estimates that approximately one million workers are exposed to hexavalent chromium on a regular basis in all industries. The major uses of hexavalent chromium are: as a structural and anti-corrosive element in the production of stainless steel, ferrochromium, iron and steel, and in electroplating, welding and painting. After reviewing the petition, OSHA denied the request for an ETS and initiated a section 6(b) rulemaking. Work on a proposed rule continues.

Abstract: In January 1993, OSHA issued a general industry rule to protect employees who enter confined spaces (58 FR 4462). This standard does not apply to the construction industry because of differences in the nature of the worksite. In discussions with the United Steel Workers of America on a settlement agreement for the general industry standard, OSHA agreed to issue a proposed rule to extend the protection to construction workers, appropriate to their work environment. One million construction workers are exposed to the hazards of confined space entry each year. OSHA intends to issue a proposed rule addressing this construction industry hazard in the summer of 1999, after extensive discussion with the Advisory Committee on Construction Safety and Health and other stakeholders.

Abstract: During the 1980s, OSHA embarked on a project to update and consolidate the various OSHA shipyard standards that were applied in the shipbuilding, shiprepair, and shipbreaking industry. A shipyard employer is subject to both the "shipyard" standards and OSHA's general industry standards. Phase 1 of this project aimed at establishing a vertical standard for shipyard employment and addressed six shipyard employment safety standards (Confined Spaces, Welding, Access/Egress, Personal Protective Equipment, Fall Protection and Scaffolding). Proposals on these hazards were issued in November 1988 (53 FR 48092). The remaining hazards were categorized as Phase II of the consolidation project (including general working conditions and fire protection in shipyard employment). This action was endorsed by the Shipyard Advisory Committee which was chartered in 1989 to update and consolidate existing shipyard standards.

The operations that are addressed in this particular rulemaking relate to fire brigades, fire extinguishers, sprinkler systems, detection systems, alarm systems, fire watches, and emergency plans. One hundred thousand workers are potentially exposed to these hazards annually. This proposed standard is being developed using the negotiated rulemaking process.

Abstract: A number of OSHA standards require that certain products and equipment used in the workplace be tested and certified by a laboratory that has been recognized and accredited by OSHA. Through the Nationally Recognized Testing Laboratory Program, OSHA has, to date, recognized 15 laboratories operating 37 sites in the U.S., Canada, and the Far East as NRTLs. OSHA is proposing to revise 29 CFR 1910.7 to allow OSHA to charge fees to NRTLs for services that are provided to the NRTLs. The fees will be computed on the basis of the cost of the services to the Government. In determining the amount of such fees, OSHA will follow the guidelines established by the Office of Management and Budget in Circular Number A-25.

Abstract: OSHA is proposing to revoke certain requirements for employers to prepare and maintain records (certification records) which certify that employers have performed certain tests or inspections of equipment or machinery or that the employer has conducted certain training specified in the standards. The purpose of proposing to revoke these certification records is to minimize the paperwork burdens imposed on employers. OSHA preliminarily finds that there will be no reduction in employee safety and health as a result of reducing requirements to fill out and maintain these certification records.

Abstract: In January 1998, OSHA published the final respiratory protection standard, except for the reserved provision on assigned protection factors (APFs). APFs are numbers that estimate the degree of performance of the various classes of respirators. OSHA has developed a statistical model for analyzing available data that will be used to derive APFs. Accordingly, OSHA will request further public comment on the analyses conducted using that model, the ANSI Z88.2-1992 APFs, the NIOSH Respirator Decision Logic APFs and other relevant methods for deriving APFs. This will assure that OSHA receives and fully considers public input before issuing final APFs. OSHA expects to complete the rulemaking on APFs in 1999.

Abstract: Operation of powered industrial trucks, such as forklifts, is the second leading cause of fatalities in the private sector, second only to highway vehicle fatalities. On average, there are 107 fatalities and 38,330 injuries annually in the workplace.

The present standard has proven to be ineffective in reducing the number of accidents involving powered industrial trucks. As a result, there has been strong interest that OSHA issue a new standard to more effectively address this hazard. OSHA has revised the present standard to increase its effectiveness by requiring, in performance language, initial and refresher training and evaluation as necessary. The frequency of the refresher training will be based upon the vehicle operator's knowledge, skills, and abilities to perform the job safely. OSHA will also state what information the training should include. This rule will apply to general industry, the maritime industries and construction.

Abstract: OSHA issued a final standard governing employee entry into confined spaces in general industry on January 14, 1993 (58 FR 4462). The standard was challenged by a number of parties including the United Steelworkers of America. OSHA reached a settlement agreement with the steelworkers in June 1994. As part of this settlement agreement, OSHA issued a proposal on November 28, 1994 (59 FR 60735), to clarify paragraph (k) of the rule, Rescue and Emergency Services. OSHA also proposed to allow more flexibility in the point of retrieval line attachment and asked whether the standard should provide affected employees or their representatives with the opportunity to observe the evaluation of confined spaces, including atmospheric testing, and to have access to evaluation results. Hearings were held September 27-28 1995. The post-hearing comment period ended on December 20, 1995. In February 1996, the record was closed. A final rule is expected in calendar year 1998.

Abstract: During the 1980s, OSHA embarked on a project to update and consolidate the various OSHA standards that were applied in the shipbuilding, shiprepair, and shipbreaking industry. Shipyard employers have been subject to both shipyard and general industry standards.

Phase 1 of this project aimed at establishing a vertical standard for shipyard employment and addressed six shipyard employment safety standards (Confined Spaces, Welding Access/Egress, Personal Protective Equipment, Fall Protection and Scaffolding). Proposals on these subparts were issued in November 1988 (53 FR 48092). The remaining subparts were categorized as Phase II of the consolidation project (including general working conditions and fire protection). This action was endorsed by the Shipyard Advisory Committee which was chartered in 1989 to update and consolidate existing shipyard standards.

This particular regulatory action will revise the existing shipyard employment standards covering scaffolds and will consolidate all related and applicable 29 CFR part 1910 provisions. It will develop, in part, performance-oriented standards, address current gaps in coverage, and address new technologies.

Abstract: On May 20, 1986, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) issued a report to OSHA, under section 9(a) of the Toxic Substance Control Act, stating that EPA has reasonable basis to conclude that the risk of injury to worker health from exposure to four glycol ethers during their manufacture, processing and use is unreasonable, and that this risk may be prevented or reduced to a significant extent by OSHA regulatory action. EPA gave OSHA 180 days in which to respond to its report. OSHA published its response on December 11, 1986, stating that OSHA had preliminarily concluded that occupational exposures to the subject glycol ethers at the current OSHA permissible exposure limits may present significant risks to the health of workers. OSHA published an Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (ANPRM) on April 2, 1987 (52 FR 10586). OSHA used the information received in response to the ANPRM, as well as other information and analysis, and published a proposal, March 23, 1993 (58 FR 15526), that would reduce the permissible exposure limits for four glycol ethers and provide protection for approximately 46,000 workers exposed to the substances. OSHA is working toward promulgation of a final rule in 1999.

Abstract: The Superfund Amendments and Reauthorization Act of 1986 (Public Law 99-499) established the criteria under which OSHA should develop and promulgate the Hazardous Waste Operations and Emergency Response standard. OSHA issued an interim final standard on December 19, 1986 (51 FR 45654) to comply with the law's requirements. OSHA issued a permanent final rule for provisions on training to replace this interim rule on March 9, 1989 (29 CFR 1910.120).

On December 22, 1987, as part of an omnibus budget reconciliation bill (PL 100-202), Congress amended section 126(d)(3) of SARA to include accreditation of training programs for hazardous waste operations. OSHA issued a proposal on January 26, 1990 (55 FR 2776) addressing this issue. OSHA received public comments following the issuance of the proposal. OSHA also reopened the record in June 1992 to allow additional public comment on an effectiveness of training study that the Agency had conducted. OSHA has also developed nonmandatory guidelines to further address minimum training criteria.

Abstract: OSHA was petitioned in May 1987 by Action on Smoking and Health (ASH), Public Citizen, and the American Public Health Association to issue an emergency temporary standard on environmental tobacco smoke (ETS) in the workplace. In March 1992, OSHA was petitioned by the AFL-CIO to establish workplace IAQ standards. In December 1992, ASH again petitioned for rulemaking on ETS.

Every day, more than 20 million American workers face an unnecessary health threat because of indoor air pollution in the workplace. Thousands of heart disease deaths, hundreds of lung cancer deaths, respiratory disease, Legionnaire's disease, asthma, and other ailments are estimated to be linked to this occupational hazard. Further, America's workers are at risk of developing thousands of upper respiratory symptoms and severe headaches from indoor air pollutants. EPA estimates that 20 to 35 percent of all workers in modern mechanically ventilated buildings may experience air-quality problems.

After reviewing and analyzing available information, OSHA published a proposed rule on April 5, 1994. The proposal would require employers to write and implement indoor air quality compliance plans that would include inspection and maintenance of current building ventilation systems to ensure they are functioning as designed. In buildings where smoking is allowed the proposal would require designated smoking areas that would be separate, enclosed rooms where the air would be exhausted directly to the outside. Other proposed provisions would require employers to maintain healthy air quality during renovation, remodeling, and similar activities. The provisions for indoor air quality would apply to 70 million workers and more than 4.5 million nonindustrial indoor work environments, including schools and training centers, offices, commercial establishments, health care facilities, cafeterias and factory break rooms. ETS provisions would apply to all 6 million industrial and nonindustrial work environments under OSHA's jurisdiction. OSHA preliminarily estimates that 5,583 to 32,502 cancer deaths and 97,700 to 577,818 coronary heart diseases related to occupational exposure to ETS will be prevented over the next 45 years. This represents 140 to 722 cancer deaths and 2,094 to 13,001 heart diseases each year. OSHA preliminarily estimates that the proposed standard will prevent 4.5 million air-quality related illnesses per year.

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: During the 1980s, OSHA embarked on a project to update and consolidate the various OSHA shipyard standards that were applied in the shipbuilding, shiprepair, and shipbreaking industry. Shipyard employers have been subject to both the "shipyard" standards and OSHA's general industry standards for landside operations. Phase 1 of this project aimed at establishing a vertical standard for shipyard employment and addressed six shipyard employment safety standards (Confined Spaces, Welding, Access/Egress, Personal Protective Equipment, Fall Protection and Scaffolding). Proposals on these Subparts were issued in November 1988 (53 FR 48092). The remaining subparts were categorized as Phase II of the consolidation project (including general working conditions and fire protection). This action was endorsed by the Shipyard Advisory Committee, which was chartered in 1989 to update and consolidate existing shipyard standards.

The operations that are addressed in this particular rulemaking relate to housekeeping, illumination, sanitation, first aid, and lockout/tagout. About 75,000 workers are exposed annually to these hazards.

Abstract: Firefighting exposes members of fire brigades to a significant risk of harm. To mitigate these risks, OSHA promulgated a standard for fire brigades in 1980. However, the standard is now more than 18 years old, and does not reflect current advances in technology and safety. This action would revise the existing fire brigade standard to reflect the latest technology in safety, particularly with respect to personal protective equipment and emergency procedures. It would also address gaps in coverage, since the existing fire brigade standard does not cover wildland fire fighting or crash-rescue type fire fighting. OSHA will be working closely with State Plan States to assess the potential impact of the proposed rule on municipal fire departments.

Abstract: The annual fatality rate for power line workers is over 50 deaths per 100,000 employees. The construction industry standard addressing the safety of these workers during the construction of electric power transmission and distribution lines is over 20 years old. OSHA is developing a revision of this standard that will prevent many of these fatalities, that will add flexibility to the standard, and that will update and streamline the standard. In addition, OSHA intends to amend the corresponding standard for general industry so that requirements for work performed during maintenance of electric power transmission and distribution installations are the same as those for similar work in construction.

CFR Citation: 29 CFR 1926

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: In response to industry requests and OSHA's Advisory Committee on Construction Safety and Health (ACCSH) recommendation, OSHA has determined that the current safety and health program standards contained in subpart C of the construction standards, 29 CFR 1926, need to be revised to provide construction employers with a more comprehensive set of requirements to assist them in establishing safety and health programs. Safety and health programs have proven to be an effective, systematic method of identifying and correcting existing workplace safety and health hazards, as well as preventing those that might arise in the future.

The ACCSH has been working to develop recommendations for OSHA on safety and health programs and training in construction for many years. After its April 1996 meeting, ACCSH began to develop language and concepts to submit to OSHA for consideration as a proposed rule. Over 130 stakeholders representing small, medium and large contractors and host employers and stakeholders (such as petroleum producers; contractor associations; labor unions; other governmental agencies; and non-profit institutions) have participated in these ACCSH discussions.

Although OSHA is still developing the details of a new proposed safety and health program standard, the proposal will require employers to set up a program for managing workplace safety and health in order to reduce the incidence of occupational deaths, injuries, and illnesses. The standard will not impose duties on employers to control hazards that they are not already required to control. Instead, the standard will provide a basic framework for systematically identifying and controlling workplace hazards already covered by the OSH Act under section 5(a)(1) and current OSHA standards.

Abstract: OSHA issued a general industry rule on September 1, 1989 (54 FR 36644) to address the hazards posed to workers by the failure to control hazardous energy (i.e., the failure to properly lock out or tag out machines and equipment) during repair and servicing activities. OSHA has not yet issued a standard to prevent these accidents during equipment repair and maintenance activities in the construction industry. Four million workers annually may be exposed to this hazard in construction workplaces. As a result, OSHA intends to issue a proposal to address this hazard in this industry.

Construction sites often do not have effective lockout/tagout procedures to control hazardous energy because of several factors, all associated with the nature of the construction industry. These factors basically relate to the types of machines and equipment found in construction; the makeup of the industry (i.e., employment is relatively "short term," lasting only as long as the length of the current project); multiple employers having different employer/employee relationships are present at the same site; and "in-the-field" maintenance activity is usually temporary.

Abstract: Beryllium is a lightweight metal that is used for nuclear weapons, for atomic energy, and for metal alloys such as beryllium-copper and beryllium-aluminum. The metal alloys are found in sectors for dental appliances, golf clubs, non-sparking tools, wheel chairs, etc. Beryllium is also used in the ceramics industry. The current permissible exposure limits for beryllium are: an 8-hour TWA of 2 ug/m3; a 5 ug/m3 ceiling concentration not to be exceeded over a 30-minute period; and a 25 ug/m3 maximum peak exposure never to be exceeded.

In 1977, OSHA proposed to reduce the 8-hour TWA exposure to beryllium from 2 ug/m3 to 1 ug/m3 based on evidence that beryllium caused lung cancer in exposed workers. A hearing followed the proposal, but a final standard was never published. Since the previous OSHA hearing, NIOSH has updated its studies on beryllium exposed workers. The study results again demonstrate a significant excess of lung cancer among exposed workers. The International Agency for Research on Cancer (IARC) has concluded that beryllium is a carcinogen in humans. (Category I)

In addition to lung cancer, a new OSHA beryllium standard would address chronic beryllium disease (CBD), a fatal disease involving lung fibrosis and other organ toxicity. Based on several recent studies involving workers employed in the beryllium ceramics industry, in beryllium production, and in Department of Energy facilities, there is now evidence that very low level beryllium exposure (less than 0.5 ug/m3) may cause CBD. A recent (1997) study from Japan concludes that the level necessary to protect workers from developing CDB cannot exceed 0.01 ug/m3. A new medical surveillance tool is now available that allows for the early detection of workers with CBD prior to any signs of clinical disease or symptoms. Beryllium-sensitized workers convert to CBD at an estimated rate of about 10 percent per year. This "beryllium sensitization" test is being used in clinical studies of current and past exposed workers. Recent study results indicate that between 5 percent and 15 percent of beryllium-exposed workers are sensitized and will eventually develop CBD. In 1997, DOE issued interim guidelines to protect beryllium-exposed workers at all DOE facilities. The guidelines include provisions for exposure monitoring, medical surveillance and re-location of beryllium-sensitized workers.

The DOE guidelines, however, do not affect workers outside DOE facilities. Thus, OSHA needs to initiate rulemaking to protect beryllium-exposed workers from contracting CBD and lung cancer.

Abstract: OSHA has made a continuing effort to eliminate confusing, outdated, and duplicative regulations. In 1978 and again in 1984 the Agency conducted comprehensive revocation and revision projects that resulted in the elimination of hundreds of unnecessary rules. In 1995, OSHA developed a list of standards it proposed to revoke or revise. These standards were deemed to be out of date, duplicative, inconsistent with other OSHA standards or preempted by the regulations of other Federal agencies. The agency began this process in March 1996 by revoking various non-substantive provisions that the Agency believed were unnecessary or ineffective in protecting worker health or safety. The Agency followed up this effort by issuing a final and a proposed rule addressing substantive changes. The first of these, issued on June 20, 1996, eliminated duplicative standards by replacing them with cross references to eliminate any possible confusion and to reduce the volume of the rules. The second one, published on July 22, 1996, proposed to reduce the burden imposed on employers by selected medical surveillance provisions of existing rules, change the emergency-response provisions of the vinyl chloride standard, and eliminate a number of duplicative or unnecessary provisions. OSHA issued a final rule addressing these changes in June of 1998. This Standards Improvement Project had two other components: elimination of requirements and appendices associated with the Agency's Longshoring and Marine Terminals Standards (completed in July 1997) and revision and streamlining of the Agency's respirator standard and appendices, which was completed in January 1998.

Unified Agenda of Federal Regulatory and Deregulatory Actions

AGENCY: Department of State.

ACTION: Semiannual regulatory agenda.

SUMMARY: Consistent with the Regulatory Flexibility Act of 1980, 5 U.S.C. 602, and OMB guidance to the Department of State pursuant to Executive Order 12866, the October 1998 agenda of the Department of State is set forth below. The purpose of this publication is to provide information to the public on the Department's regulatory plans. Consistent with OMB guidance, this agenda includes active continuing items from prior agendas.

2254. FOREIGN PROHIBITIONS ON LONGSHORE WORK BY U.S. NATIONALS

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 8 USC 1288(d)

CFR Citation: 22 CFR 89 (Revision)

Legal Deadline: Final, Statutory, December 31, 1998.
Legal deadline reflects the statutory requirement that the list be updated on an annual basis.

Abstract: The above-mentioned statute requires the Secretary of State to compile, and update annually through Notice-and-Comment rulemaking procedures, a list, by particular longshore activity, of countries where performance of such activity is prohibited by law, regulation, or in practice in the country concerned. According to the statute cited above, the Attorney General will use this list for enforcing restrictions on work performed by crewmembers of vessels from such countries. Compilation of the list itself does not involve any significant costs and is based upon information being provided to the Department of State by U.S. diplomatic missions overseas as well as by the public. Questions regarding the policy justification for the list and its use are best directed to the Departments of Labor, Transportation, and Justice.

Legal Authority: International Legal Material, vol XII, no. 6, Nov. 1973, p 1302

CFR Citation: 22 CFR 92.81(b)(3)

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: By resolution of the international diplomatic conference that adopted the final text of the 1973 convention on the forms of international wills, there was a recommendation that States establish an internal system to permit the optional registration of information to facilitate the discovery of international wills. The President transmitted the convention to the Senate on July 2, 1986, with the recommendation that the Senate give its advice and consent to U.S. ratification of the convention, and information about the intention to establish the Registry in the Department of State (Senate Treaty Doc. 99-29). The Senate gave advice and consent on August 2, 1991. Implementing legislation (the International Wills Act) is required before the United States can take further action to ratify the convention.

Department Regulatory Agenda; Semiannual Summary

AGENCY: Office of the Secretary, DOT.

ACTION: Semiannual regulatory agenda.

SUMMARY: The regulatory agenda is a semiannual summary of all current and projected rulemakings, reviews of existing regulations, and completed actions of the Department. The agenda provides the public with information about the Department of Transportation's regulatory activity. It is expected that this information will enable the public to be more aware of and allow it to more effectively participate in the Department's regulatory activity. The public is also invited to submit comments on any aspect of this agenda.

ADDRESSES: The mailing address for the initiating offices of the Department that appear in the agenda is 400 7th Street SW., Washington, DC 20590; except for the Federal Aviation Administration, which is located at 800 Independence Avenue SW., Washington, DC 20591, and the U.S. Coast Guard, which is located at 2100 2nd Street SW., Washington, DC 20593.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

General

For further information on the agenda in general, contact: Neil R. Eisner, Assistant General Counsel for Regulation and Enforcement, Department of Transportation, 400 7th Street SW., Washington, DC 20590, (202) 366-4723.

Specific

For further information about any particular item on the agenda, contact the individual listed in the column headed "Agency Contact" for that item.

Agenda

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Background

Improvement of Government regulations is a prime goal of the Clinton Administration. There should be no more regulations than necessary, and those that are issued should be simpler, more comprehensible, and less burdensome. Regulations should not be issued without appropriate involvement of the public; once issued, they should be periodically reviewed and revised, as needed, to assure that they continue to meet the needs for which they originally were designed.

To help the Department of Transportation (Department) achieve these goals and in accordance with Executive Order 12866 "Regulatory Planning and Review" (58 FR 51735; October 4, 1993) and the Department's Regulatory Policies and Procedures (44 FR 11034; February 26, 1979), the Department prepares a semiannual regulatory agenda for publication in the Federal Register. The agenda summarizes all current and projected rulemaking, reviews of existing regulations, and completed actions of the Department. These are matters on which action has begun or is projected during the succeeding 12 months or such longer period as may be anticipated or for which action has been completed since the last agenda.

The agendas are based on reports submitted by the initiating offices and are reviewed by the Department Regulations Council. The Department's last agenda was published in the Federal Register on April 27, 1998 (63 FR 22286). The next one is scheduled for publication in the Federal Register in April 1999.

For this edition of the Department's regulatory agenda, the most important significant regulatory actions are included in The Regulatory Plan, which appears in part II of this issue of the Federal Register. The Regulatory Plan entries are listed in the table of contents below and are denoted by a bracketed bold reference, which directs the reader to the appropriate sequence number in part II.

Regulatory Flexibility Act

In 1980, Congress passed the Regulatory Flexibility Act (RFA), Public Law 96-354, which requires the designation of those regulations for which a Regulatory Flexibility Analysis will be prepared; i.e., those regulations that would have a significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities. The RFA also requires that, each year, the Department publish a list of those regulations that are to be reviewed under the Act during the succeeding 12 months. The agenda includes those regulations to be reviewed under the RFA or those for which review has been concluded since the last agenda. The phrase (Section 610 Review) appears at the end of the title for any such review. However, it should be noted that, after further assessment of the regulations listed for RFA review, it may be found that the regulations, in fact, do not have a significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities. The Department has also added an Appendix D to this agenda, which contains the Department's 10-year plan for the review of its existing rules, including the reviews required by the RFA.

Economic Assessment/Evaluation

DOT requires an economic analysis for all its rulemakings. A preliminary and final economic assessment is required for each proposed and final regulation, respectively, that is likely to be very costly. For other rulemakings, a regulatory evaluation is prepared.

Definitions

The agenda covers all rules and regulations of the Department, including those that establish conditions for financial assistance. The following definitions are provided for ease in understanding the information in this document.

Initiating office means an operating administration or other organizational element within the Department that formulates regulations.

Significant rulemaking is now being referred to in this agenda as an agency priority. This means a rulemaking that is very costly, controversial, or of substantial public interest; would have a major impact on another Federal agency; would have a substantial effect on State and/or local or tribal governments; would have a substantial impact on a major transportation safety problem; would initiate a substantial regulatory program or change in policy; would be substantially different from international requirements or standards; would materially alter budgetary impacts; or otherwise involves important legal or policy issues.

Office of Management and Budget (OMB)/Secretarial Review

Any rulemaking document OMB identifies as significant is subject to its review and will be classified as significant by DOT. A few rulemakings identified as agency priority by DOT, but not significant by OMB, and some rulemaking documents (e.g., extensions of compliance dates), although part of an otherwise significant rulemaking, are not subject to OMB review. All DOT agency priority rulemaking documents are subject to review by the Secretary of Transportation.

Explanation of Information on the Agenda

The format for this agenda is required by Office of Management and Budget memorandum of July 8, 1998.

First, the agenda is divided by initiating offices. Then, the agenda is divided into five categories: (1) Prerule stage, (2) proposed rule stage, (3) final rule stage, (4) long-term actions, and (5) completed actions. For each entry, the agenda provides the following information: (1) Its "significance"; (2) a short descriptive title; (3) its legal basis; (4) the related regulatory citation in the Code of Federal Regulations; (5) any legal deadline and, if so, for what action (e.g., NPRM, final rule); (6) an abstract; (7) a timetable, including the earliest expected date for a decision on whether to take the action; (8) whether the rulemaking will affect small entities and/or levels of government and which categories of small entities or governments will be impacted; (9) whether a Regulatory Flexibility Analysis is required; (10) a listing, where determined, of any analyses an initiating office will prepare or has prepared for the action; e.g., an Economic Assessment, an Environmental Impact Statement (EIS), or a Regulatory Flexibility Analysis; (11) an agency contact office or official who can provide further information, including advice on how to obtain documents referenced in the agenda; (12) a Regulation Identifier Number (RIN) assigned to identify an individual rulemaking in the agenda and facilitate tracing further action on the issue in the Federal Register that may occur between agenda publications; (13) whether the item is part of the Reinventing Government effort and, if so, whether it would revise existing text in the Code of Federal Regulations or eliminate text; (14) whether the action is subject to the Unfunded Mandates Act; and (15) whether the action is major under the congressional review of rulemaking procedures established by the Small Business Regulatory Enforcement Fairness Act. If there is information that does not fit in the other categories, it will be included under a separate heading entitled "Additional Information."

For nonsignificant regulations issued routinely and frequently as a part of an established body of technical requirements (such as the Federal Aviation Administration's Airspace Rules), to keep those requirements operationally current, only the general category of the regulations, the identity of a contact office or official, and an indication of the expected number of regulations are included; individual regulations are not listed.

If a regulatory docket number has already been established, it may be provided under the "Additional Information" heading. If a member of the public desires further information regarding a particular proposal or regulation, reference should be made to this docket number.

In the "Timetable" column, abbreviations are used to indicate the particular documents being considered for issuance by that date. ANPRM stands for Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking, SNPRM for Supplemental Notice of Proposed Rulemaking, NPRM for Notice of Proposed Rulemaking, and FR for Final Rule. Listing a future date in this column is not an indication that a proposed or a final rule will be issued on that date; it is the earliest date on which a decision is expected to be made on whether to issue the document listed. Submittal of any proposed or final rule to the Office of Management and Budget for review under Executive Order 12866 must follow such a decision. If any document is issued, publication in the Federal Register would follow within a few days of completion of this review. In addition, these dates are based on current schedules. Information received subsequent to the issuance of this agenda could result in a decision not to take regulatory action or in changes to proposed publication dates. For example, the need for further evaluation could result in a later publication date; evidence of a greater need for the regulation could result in an earlier publication date.

Finally, a dot (•) preceding an entry indicates that the entry appears in the agenda for the first time.

Request for Comments

General

Our agenda is intended primarily for the use of the public. Since its inception, we have made modifications and refinements that we believe provide the public with more helpful information, as well as make the agenda easier to use. We would like you, the public, to make suggestions or comments on how the agenda could be further improved.

In an effort to comply further with the spirit of Executive Order 12866, the Regulatory Flexibility Act, DOT's regulatory policies and procedures, and the President's directive on plain language, we are also seeking suggestions on which existing regulations issued by an operating administration of the Department or the Office of the Secretary you believe need to be reviewed to determine whether they should be revised or revoked. We particularly draw your attention to the Department's review plan in Appendix D.

Regulatory Flexibility Act

The Department is especially interested in obtaining information on requirements that have a "significant economic impact on small entities" and, therefore, must be reviewed under the Regulatory Flexibility Act. If you have any suggested regulations, please send them, along with your explanation of why they should be reviewed, to the concerned operating administration or the Office of the Secretary.

In accordance with the Regulatory Flexibility Act, comments are specifically invited on regulations that are targeted for review under section 610 of the RFA. Please see Appendix D for the Department's section 610 review plans and information. Those comments should be addressed to the contact person of the operating administration involved.

Plain Language

The President's "Plain Language in Government Writing" memorandum of June 1, 1998, requires that by January 1, 1999, we must use plain language in all proposed and final rulemaking documents published in the Federal Register. The exception is if we proposed the rule before that date. We try to write clearly. However, we solicit your comments and suggestions for how to improve the clarity of our regulations and specific existing or proposed rules that need improvement.

Year 2000 Computer Problem

We are requesting public comment to assist us in identifying rulemaking actions that would affect the private sector or governmental entities' ability to fix their year 2000 computer date problem. If we consider a requirement that would mandate business process changes and require modifications to computer systems between September 30, 1998, and July 1, 2000, as part of the development of the proposed and final rule, we will analyze the effect of our action and our discretion to consider other approaches. If we impose a requirement, a summary of the analysis will be included in the preamble that will clearly explain why we are imposing it, why there are no acceptable alternatives, and why it cannot be delayed. If you see actions identified in this agenda that you believe would impose such requirements, we encourage you to let us know.

Purpose

The Department is publishing this regulatory agenda in the Federal Register to share with interested members of the public the Department's preliminary expectations regarding its future regulatory actions. This should enable the public to be more aware of the Department's regulatory activity and should result in more effective public participation. This publication in the Federal Register does not impose any binding obligation on the Department or any of the offices within the Department with regard to any specific item on the agenda. Regulatory action, in addition to the items listed, is not precluded. If further information is desired on any of the items listed in the agenda, the public is encouraged to contact the individual listed for the particular item. Additional information concerning the agenda in general or the Department's Regulatory Policies and Procedures may be obtained from Neil R. Eisner, whose address and telephone number appear above.

Issued in Washington, DC, on October 8, 1998.

Rodney E. Slater,

Secretary of Transportation.

Appendix A - Instructions for Obtaining Copies of Regulatory Documents

Some Administrations within the Department differ in procedures or as to inclusion on a mailing list. For the offices listed below, persons desiring to obtain a copy of a specific regulatory document to be issued that is listed in this agenda should communicate, either by telephone or by letter, with the contact person listed with the regulation at the addresses below.

United States Coast Guard (USCG)

Appendix D - Review Plans for Section 610 and Other Requirements

Part I - The Plan

General

The Department of Transportation has long recognized the importance of regularly reviewing its existing regulations to determine whether they need to be revised or revoked. Our 1979 Regulatory Policies and Procedures require such reviews. We also have responsibilities under E.O. 12866 ("Regulatory Planning and Review") and section 610 of the Regulatory Flexibility Act to conduct such reviews. Finally, on June 1, 1998, the President also directed agencies to use plain language in new rules and to consider rewriting existing rules when we have the opportunity and resources permit. The Department is currently conducting a number of reviews of existing rules and is engaged in rulemaking actions resulting from reviews.

Section 610 Review Plan

Section 610 requires that we conduct reviews of rules that (1) have been published within the last ten years and (2) have a "significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities" (SEIOSNOSE). It also requires that we publish in the Federal Register each year a list of any such rules that we will review during the next year. To better comply with section 610, the Department is updating its regulatory review plan published on June 29, 1981, to accomplish a more systematic review of all of its regulations. The Office of the Secretary and each of the Department's Operating Administrations, except for the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA), developed a 10-year plan for the analysis and review of all their rules. The agencies with smaller regulatory programs expect to complete their reviews over a shorter period of time. These reviews will comply with section 610 of the Regulatory Flexibility Act. FHWA's approach to section 610 reviews is described in Part II to this Appendix.

Other Review Plans

All elements of the Department, except for FHWA and the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), have also elected to use this 10-year plan process to comply with the review requirements of the Department's Regulatory Policies and Procedures, Executive Order 12866, and the President's directive on plain language. FHWA and FAA are using different approaches, which are described in Part II to this Appendix.

Changes to the Review Plan

Some reviews may be conducted earlier than scheduled. For example, to the extent resources permit, the plain language reviews will be conducted more quickly. Other events, such as accidents, may result in the need to conduct earlier reviews of some rules. Other factors may also result in the need to make changes; for example, we may make changes in response to public comment on this plan or in response to a Presidentially-mandated review. If there is any change to the review plan, we will note the change in the following Unified Agenda. For any section 610 review, we will provide the required notice prior to the review.

Part II - The Review Process

Except as specifically noted for FHWA and FAA at the end of this part of the Appendix, each element of the DOT will use the following process to review its existing rules.

Year 1 - Analysis

Generally, the agencies have divided their rules into 10 different groups and plan to analyze one group each year. The analysis for group 1 will take place from fall 1998 to fall 1999, group 2 from fall 1999 to fall 2000, and so on. We request public comment on the timing of the reviews. For example, is there a reason for scheduling an analysis and review for a particular rule earlier than we have? Any comments concerning the plan or particular analyses can be submitted to the regulatory contacts listed in Appendix B, General Rulemaking Contact Persons.

Section 610

The agency will analyze each of the rules in that year's group to determine whether any rule published in the last ten years has a SEIOSNOSE, which triggers the need for a review under section 610 of the Regulatory Flexibility Act. The level of analysis will, of course, depend on the nature of the rule and its applicability. We request that public comments be submitted to us early in the analysis year concerning the small entity impact of the rules to help us in making our determinations. In each October's Agenda, the agency will publish information on the results of the analyses that it has completed during the previous year. For rules that had a negative finding on SEIOSNOSE, we will give a short explanation (e.g., "these rules only establish petition processes that have no cost impact" or "these rules do not apply to any small entities"). For parts, subparts or other discrete sections of rules that do have a SEIOSNOSE, we will indicate that during the next twelve months, we are going to do a section 610 review to determine whether we can lessen the impact. At this stage, we will add an entry to the Agenda in the prerulemaking section describing the review in more detail. We also will ask for public comment on how best to lessen the impact for specific rules and provide a name or docket to which public comments can be submitted. In some cases, the section 610 review may be part of another unrelated review of the rule. In such a case, we plan to clearly indicate which parts of the review are being conducted under section 610.

Other Reviews

During this analysis year, the agency will also examine the specified rules to determine whether any other reasons exist for revising or revoking the rule or for rewriting the rule in plain language. In each October's Agenda, the agency will also publish information on the results of the examinations completed during the previous year.

Year 2 - Section 610 Review

During this year we will conduct the review to determine whether to revise or revoke the rule to lessen the impact or whether we must keep the rule unchanged. At the end of the review year, we plan to publish the results of our review. If no changes are warranted, we will publish a short explanation. If we are going to make a change, we will explain that. In most cases, this will involve changing the review entry to the Unified Agenda noting that we now plan rulemaking action.

FHWA

Because of its ongoing zero-based review of its safety rules and the need to review many of its financial assistance rules in response to the Transportation Efficiency Act for the 21st Century, FHWA has not developed a 10-year review plan. In Part IV, it describes its ongoing or planned reviews.

FAA

The Federal Aviation Administration, rather than review a portion of its rules each year, has established a process by which the public is asked for its comments on which rules need review the most. Any information that the FAA receives in connection with its annual section 610 analyses would, of course, also be reviewed in the spirit of E.O. 12866. In addition, in response to a recommendation of the White House Commission on Aviation Safety and Security, the FAA has completed a review of all its existing regulations to identify those in need of rewriting as performance-based or plain language regulations. The agency also reviewed ongoing regulatory projects and proposals to identify additional candidates for revision. In all, the agency reviewed 68 parts of the CFR, containing 3,884 sections, appendices, and Special Federal Aviation Regulations. In addition to using plain language in its future regulations, the FAA intends to revise those regulations identified in its study when it has the opportunity and resources to do so.

Part III - List of Pending Section 610 Reviews

The Agenda identifies the pending DOT section 610 reviews by inserting "(Section 610 Review)" after the title for the specific entry. Also, a Governmentwide list of section 610 reviews can be located in an Index at the end of the Agenda. For further information on the pending reviews, see the Agenda entries.

FEDERAL HIGHWAY ADMINISTRATION

SECTION 610 AND OTHER REVIEWS

I. Federal-Aid Highway Program

The FHWA has adopted regulations in title 23 of the CFR, chapter I, related to the Federal-aid highway program. These regulations implement and carry out the provisions of Federal law relating to the administration of Federal aid for highways. The primary law authorizing Federal aid for highways is chapter 1 of title 23 of the USC. Section 145 of title 23 expressly provides that chapter 1 provides for a federally assisted State program. For this reason, the regulations adopted by the FHWA in title 23 of the CFR primarily relate to requirements that States must meet to receive Federal funds for the construction and other work related to highways.

Because the regulations in title 23 primarily relate to States, which are not defined as small entities under the Regulatory Flexibility Act, the FHWA believes that its regulations in title 23 do not have a significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities, with limited exceptions discussed below. The FHWA solicits public comment on this preliminary conclusion.

In title 23 of the CFR, part 450, "Planning assistance and standards," and part 500, "Management and monitoring systems," may impact small local governments. The FHWA intends to review parts 450 and 500 of title 23 during the next year as part of its efforts to implement the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (Pub. L. 105-78, June 9, 1998, TEA-21), which reauthorizes Federal surface transportation programs. The FHWA solicits public comment on whether and how parts 450 and 500 may be amended to reduce or eliminate burdens on small entities, including small governments.

Similarly, part 657, "Certification of size and weight enforcement," Part 658, "Truck size and weight, route designations - length, width and weight limitations," and part 669, "Enforcement of heavy vehicle use tax," of title 23 may have impacts on small governments or small businesses. The FHWA also intends to review these regulations in 1999, and public comment is solicited on whether and how these regulations may be revised to reduce burdens on small entities.

Implementation of TEA-21 may offer further opportunities to reduce the burden of existing regulations on small entities, and comment on this possibility is requested.

II. Federal Motor Carrier Safety Regulations

The FHWA has underway a comprehensive, multi-year project to develop modern, uniform safety regulations that are up-to-date, clear, concise, easier to understand, and more performance oriented. The FHWA has held 11 public outreach meetings, announced in the Federal Register, to solicit public involvement in this review; a total of 110 industry and government safety representatives participated in 14 one-day focus group sessions; over 2,000 comments have been received in the public docket so far.

On November 23, 1994, the FHWA published a final rule removing obsolete and redundant regulations identified through this review. In addition, on June 18, 1998, the FHWA published another final rule (63 FR 33254) removing and amending additional provisions of the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Regulations identified through the zero-base review.

The FHWA is now developing a notice of proposed rulemaking that would propose a complete revision of the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Regulations implementing the results of the FHWA's zero-base review of those regulations. The FHWA intends to propose a complete reorganization of the safety regulations and a rewrite of those regulations using plain language and a question and answer format to enhance the clarity and understandability of those regulations. In addition, the FHWA intends to better focus the regulations on safety while adopting a performance-based approach to the regulations and reducing the paperwork associated with compliance with the regulations. The FHWA believes that this effort will produce regulations which are simpler to understand and to comply with, especially for small motor carriers. Small entities will be specifically invited in this rulemaking to comment on the agency's proposal and to suggest additional ways in which the FHWA can reduce burdens on small entities through this or related rulemakings to revise the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Regulations.

Abstract: The Department is instituting an aviation data requirements review and modernization program. The review is designed to harmonize the Department's aviation data systems with current regulatory and statutory needs; improve the quality of the Department's aviation databases; and eliminate obsolete data reporting and processing systems. This is the first step in an outreach program to review aviation data collected by the Department and the measures that should be taken to modernize and improve aviation data reporting and processing systems. The Department is soliciting public comments from aviation data users on the nature, scope, source, and means for collecting, processing, and distributing airline traffic, fare, and financial data. Specifically, the Department is inviting comments to determine whether existing aviation data should be amended, supplemented, or replaced; whether selected forms and reports should be retained, modified, or eliminated; whether the Department should require all aviation data to be filed electronically; and how the aviation data system should be reengineered to enhance efficiency and to reduce costs for both the Department and airline industry. This action is significant due to substantial public and industry interest.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 40101 et seq

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 254.4; 14 CFR 254.5

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The Department is proposing to amend its rule governing the amount by which certain U.S. air carriers may limit their liability to passengers for lost, damaged, and delayed baggage. This action is in response to a petition by Public Citizen and Aviation Consumer Action Project to increase the minimum liability limit from $1,250 to $1,850 per passenger. The Department is also requesting comment on two alternate proposals: (1) to raise the limit to $1,850 with a mechanism that automatically provides for periodic future increases, or (2) to raise the minimum liability limit to $2,000. On May 1, 1998, the Aviation Consumer Action Project filed a supplemental petition for a higher limitation that would be periodically updated for inflation.

Abstract: The Department is reviewing its procedural rules for drug and alcohol testing. This review is intended to lead to a notice of proposed rulemaking that will not include major substantive changes to how we test but rather to update and clarify provisions of the rules. This ANPRM asked for suggestions for possible changes to the regulation and the focus is expected to be on drug testing. As part of this action, a small entities review under 5 USC section 610 will be included.

Legal Deadline: Final, Statutory, December 31, 1997, current regulation expires.

Abstract: The Department regulates computer reservations systems owned by airlines or airline affiliates that are used by travel agencies. The current rules are designed to prevent the systems from unreasonably prejudicing the competitive position of other airlines and to ensure that travel agencies can provide accurate and unbiased information to the public. The Department is reexamining its rules to see whether they should be readopted and, if so, whether they should be changed. As part of this action, a small entities review under 5 USC section 610 will be included.

Abstract: The Departments of Commerce and Transportation are proposing to amend their restrictions on shipping to North Korea. Currently, United States ships and aircraft are prohibited from traveling to or transporting goods to, or destined for, North Korea. In view of the U.S. policy to facilitate the gradual improvement of relations with North Korea, the two departments are proposing to provide for waivers under narrowly defined circumstances such as shipments for humanitarian relief. Shipments such as routine commercial trade would remain prohibited. This action includes a delegation of authority from the Secretary of Transportation to the Assistant Secretary of Transportation for Aviation and International Affairs to grant waivers of these restrictions.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 1324; 49 USC 1371

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 207; 14 CFR 208

Abstract: This action proposed to make direct air carriers responsible for returning charter passengers stranded by strikes or other service interruptions, by eliminating the force majeure clause from charter contracts. However, the CAB subsequently issued an interpretive rule (ER-1387, 49 FR 33436) which was affirmed in court. (Arrow Air, Inc. v. Dole, 784 F2d 1118 (1986)) Therefore, this action is now moot; the NPRM will be withdrawn.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 42 USC 6102

Abstract: This rulemaking action was initiated by the Civil Aeronautics Board to implement the Age Discrimination Act of 1975. A draft final rule was submitted to HHS, as required by that Act, and was approved. However, in view of current airline practices with respect to travel by the elderly, and the absence of complaints of discrimination based on age, there no longer appears to be a need for further rulemaking action, and the NPRM will be withdrawn.

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 253; 14 CFR 399

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The CAB proposed to amend its rules requiring notice of contract terms for domestic travel to require that actual notice be given to passengers of terms absolving carriers from any responsibility to transport a passenger to the destination named on the ticket, or to reimburse the passenger for expenses in reaching the airport noted on the ticket when a flight is diverted to another airport in the same metropolitan area. Alternatively, the Board proposed to declare it to be an unfair and deceptive practice to divert a passenger without arranging and paying for alternate transportation to the destination airport named on the passenger's ticket. The Board considered a final rule but did not decide what action to take. DOT is withdrawing the NPRM as unnecessary since it appears that carriers no longer have the policies that promoted the CAB's concern.

Abstract: The American Association of Airport Executives, the Airport Operators Council International, and the Air Transport Association of America petitioned the CAB to simplify its counter-sign requirements. Presently, airlines are required to display four different consumer protection notices on their ticket counters. The petitioners alleged that the current notices are hard to read and, therefore, do not provide much notice to passengers. They proposed replacing the four notices with one simplified counter sign. A CAB NPRM proposed a number of alternatives, such as a long and/or short notice, where the notices would be required to be posted, and whether a smoking notice should be included. DOT decided not to act on these "counter signs" separately, but rather to consider whether there should be a comprehensive re-examination of all forms of notice to passengers, including notices on tickets. This NPRM will be withdrawn.

2294. +DISCLOSURE OF CODE-SHARING ARRANGEMENTS AND LONG-TERM WET LEASES

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 40113; 49 USC 41712

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 257

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The action would strengthen the Department's current rules requiring airlines to notify passengers of a code-sharing arrangement or long-term wet lease. In these operations, the operator of the aircraft differs from the airline in whose name the transportation was sold. The Department would require that the name of the transporting carrier be disclosed. This action is being undertaken to ensure that consumers have pertinent information about airline code-sharing arrangements on domestic and international flights. This is significant because of congressional and industry.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 1657

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 5.21; 49 CFR 5.35

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The Department is considering a new rulemaking procedure to expedite the processing of noncontroversial changes to its regulations. Rules that the Secretary judges to be unlikely to result in public comment would be published as "direct final" rules. Such direct final rules would advise the public that no adverse comment is anticipated and that, unless written adverse comment or notice of intent to submit such comment is received within a specified number of days, the rule will become effective 60 days from the date of publication in the Federal Register.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 41712

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 257

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: To ensure that consumers are given pertinent information on the nature of change-of-gauge services, the Department is proposing to codify and augment its current disclosure requirements for itineraries with one flight number that involve a change of aircraft. The Department requested comments on the following three proposed requirements, which would apply to U.S. air carriers, foreign air carriers, and, where appropriate, ticket agents (including travel agents) doing business in the United States: (1) that transporting carriers include notice of aircraft changes in their written or electronic schedule information provided to the public, in the Official Airline Guide, and in computer reservation systems; (2) that consumers be given reasonable and timely notice before they book transportation that a particular service with a single flight number entails a change of aircraft en route; and (3) that written notice of the aircraft change be provided on or with each ticket for such service. This proposal, in part, responds to the petition of American Airlines in Docket

2298. RULES OF PRACTICE IN AVIATION ECONOMIC PROCEEDINGS: REINVENTION

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

Legal Authority: 5 USC 511; 39 USC 5402; 42 USC 4321; 49 USC 40101; 49 USC 41101; 49 USC 41301; 49 USC 41501; 49 USC 41701; 49 USC 41901; 49 USC 46101; 49 USC 46301

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 302

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This action would reorganize in a more logical fashion, regulations that govern the conduct of all aviation economic proceedings before the Department. It would also streamline the regulation to remove redundancies. Procedures relating only to oral evidentiary hearings are being grouped together separate from procedures pertaining only to non-hearing cases. Updates to terminology will be made to reflect the revision and recodification of the Federal Aviation Act. This rule has not been comprehensively updated since 1985 and the revisions will take the form of a complete reissuance of part 302. In response to the NPRM, comments were received. They seek changes in the filing periods for responsive pleadings to various types of applications. Since these were outside the scope of the original notice, a supplemental notice will be issued. 2302. POLICY STATEMENT ON AIRLINE PREEMPTION

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 41713

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 399

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The Civil Aeronautics Board in 1979 issued an interim Policy Statement on preemption. It discusses the policy of the Department with respect to three areas in which State law has been preempted by the Airline Deregulation Act of 1978: regulation of commuter air carriers and air taxis, the rights of airport proprietors, and general State authority as it directly or indirectly affects air transportation competition. The Supreme Court subsequently ruled that section 105 of the ADA preempts even indirect State regulation that "has a connection with or reference to" airline rates, routes, or services. Recently the Supreme Court issued another decision on this provision of the law, ruling that it does not preempt State contract law with respect to interpretation and enforcement of agreements voluntarily entered into by air carriers. The Department is considering the effect of these two holdings on the future course and content of the Policy Statement and whether there is a need for such a policy statement.

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 399.80; 14 CFR 399.85

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The Department is proposing to provide formal notice to the public of its enforcement policy concerning the rebating of international air fares by adopting that policy as a Policy Statement in the regulations. No change in the substance of that policy is intended. The Department also proposes to revoke an existing Policy Statement on the advertising of rebates that is contrary to DOT's current enforcement policy. The proposal responds to a request for such action by the American Society of Travel Agents. The proposed regulation is significant because it involves important departmental policies and substantial industry interest.

Abstract: The Department's Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) final rule, published September 6, 1991 (56 FR 45584), reserved portions of the rule concerning passenger vessels. The ADA covers passenger vessels, but issuing accessibility requirements for vessels involves complex issues unlike those affecting land transportation. Abstract: The Department is considering the use of regulatory negotiation to seek consensus among air carriers, consumers, airports, equipment manufacturers, oxygen suppliers, and safety regulators concerning the use of oxygen by passengers on air carriers when individuals need special private supplies. The need for action stems from a current situation where all carriers do not allow passengers to bring their own oxygen aboard. Issues involve conformance with RSPA and FAA hazardous materials rules and the question of providing oxygen during long layovers. The Department is considering whether to begin a regulatory negotiation.

Abstract: This notice requested comments concerning operational and cost issues related to U.S. air carriers collecting information such as full name, date of birth and/or social security number, emergency contact and telephone number from passengers traveling on flights within the United States. This notice was issued on the Department's initiative in response to difficulties with notification in the aftermath of domestic aviation disasters and to comply with a recommendation contained in the initial report of the White House Commission on Aviation Safety and Security (1996) that urged the Department to explore immediately the costs and effects of a comprehensive passenger manifest requirement on the domestic aviation system. DOT will review the implementation of the international passenger manifest requirements (RIN 2105-AC78, 2/18/98, 63 FR 8258) as it determines how to proceed with this rulemaking.

Abstract: This action revises regulations implementing the Freedom of Information Act to conform to the requirements of the Electronic Freedom of Information Act Amendments of 1996, PL 104-231. New provisions concern electronic reading room requirements, deletion markings and volume estimation, timing of responses, multi-track and expedited processing, and unusual circumstances. This action also provides changes to the Department's fee schedule. The Department will charge fees at rates based on an average of hourly rates for three pay scale levels.

Abstract: 46 U.S.C. 12501 requires the Secretary of Transportation to establish a Vessel Identification System (VIS). This rulemaking prescribes the manner and form for participating States to make information available for VIS; to establish guidelines for State vessel titling systems; and to establish procedures for certifying compliance with those guidelines. This rulemaking supports the Coast Guard's strategic goal of mobility of commercial and recreational vessels.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 46 USC 6101; 33 USC 1901 et seq

CFR Citation: 33 CFR 151; 46 CFR 4

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This action would add to the definition of a reportable marine casualty "significant harm to the environment." Some casualty reporting requirements are extended to include foreign tank vessels operating in U.S. waters, including the exclusive economic zone. This project supports the Coast Guard's Marine Safety and Environmental Protection program's goal to reduce the consequence of pollution incidents and further supports the Coast Guard's strategic goal of protection of natural resources.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 33 USC 1231

CFR Citation: 33 CFR 126

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rulemaking is intended to revise existing regulations covering waterfront facilities handling dangerous cargoes. The present regulations are outdated and do not reflect improved safety procedures and modern transportation methods, such as the use of containers. Where appropriate, the regulations would incorporate industry standards regarding the handling of hazardous materials at waterfront facilities. This project also supports the Vice Commandant's workload reduction initiative, and also supports Coast Guard strategic goals by reducing deaths and injuries in the maritime industry.

Abstract: This rulemaking would expand the existing 12 character Hull Identification Number (HIN) applicable to manufacturers of recreational boats by at least two characters to indicate the country of origin (to align to the HIN format with the newly adopted International Organization for Standards format). Several minor amendments to the HIN regulations are also proposed. This rulemaking supports the Coast Guard's strategic goal of marine safety.

Abstract: Title 46 U.S.C. 12301, as amended by the Abandoned Barge Act of 1992, requires all undocumented barges more than 100 gross tons operating on the navigable waters of the United States be numbered. This rulemaking would establish a numbering system for these barges. The numbering of undocumented barges will allow identification of owners of barges found abandoned and help prevent future marine pollution. This rulemaking supports the Coast Guard's strategic goal of protection of the marine environment.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 46 USC 51

CFR Citation: 46 CFR 45

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This regulatory project will allow certain unmanned dry cargo river barges operating on Lake Michigan to be exempted from the normal Great Lakes load line requirements provided instead that they obtain a limited domestic service load line for two specific routes (Chicago to Milwaukee, and Chicago to Muskegon). This will allow certain non-hazardous cargoes originating at inland river ports to be transported as far as Milwaukee and Muskegon by river barge, thereby benefiting from the relatively low cost per ton-mile of river barge transportation. Compliance is not mandatory other than for those river barge operators who voluntarily seek this special load line for their barges. This rulemaking supports the Coast Guard's strategic goal of marine safety.

CFR Citation: 33 CFR 140 to 147

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This project would revise the regulations on Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) activities to: add new requirements for lifesaving, fire protection, training, hazardous materials used as stores on fixed OCS facilities, and accommodation spaces; require foreign vessels engaged in OCS activities to comply with requirements similar to those imposed on U.S. vessels similarly engaged; and allow all mobile inland drilling units (MIDUs) to operate on the OCS out to a defined boundary line, if they meet requirements for lifesaving, firefighting, operations similar to those for fixed OCS facilities. This project would affect the owners and operators of facilities and vessels engaged in offshore activities associated with the exploration for, or development or production of, the resources of the OCS. The preliminary estimate of costs imposed by these amendments would vary according to the unit. The Coast Guard is consulting with the Minerals Management Service, part of the Department of the Interior. This project supports the Coast Guard's Marine Safety and Environmental Protection program's goal of reducing deaths and injuries and the amount of oil discharged into the marine environment. It also supports the Coast Guard's strategic goal of safety.

Abstract: This rulemaking concerns oil pollution prevention and the operational discharge of oil from vessels. It will align existing regulations on oil-water separators, operational discharge, damage and intact stability, and term of validity of International Oil Pollution Prevention Certificates with recent amendments under the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships, 1973 (MARPOL). It will affect U.S.-flagged tank ships of 150 gross tons or more and other U.S.-flagged ships of four hundred gross tons or more. It will eliminate or reduce requirements for shore connections on certain vessels of one hundred gross tons or more. This project supports the Coast Guard's Marine Safety and Environmental Protection program's goal to reduce the amount of oil discharged into United States waters from maritime sources by 20 percent, and the Coast Guard's strategic goals of marine safety and protection of natural resources.

Abstract: This rule would revise the current fees the Coast Guard charges for numbering undocumented vessels in Alaska. The fees were promulgated in 1972 and do not reflect the costs that the Coast Guard incurs to issue the vessel numbers. All fees collected go to the Treasury's General Fund. The rule should result in an increased fee that reflects the current costs for the Coast Guard to issue the vessel numbers in Alaska. Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

CFR Citation: 33 CFR 148 to 150

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The purpose of this rulemaking is to update the Deepwater Port Regulations. Section 502 of the Coast Guard Authorization Act of 1996 prescribes changes to the regulations found in 33 CFR parts 148-150 developed in accordance with the Deepwater Port Act of 1974. These regulations were developed in the 1970's when there were no deepwater ports in the United States. The Coast Guard will be revising the regulations to: remove from the regulations, and place in the license conditions, those requirements which belong in the license conditions; and remove from the regulations those things which can be addressed in an operations manual. The Coast Guard may also consider revising the regulations to address technological advancements and operational experience gained over the last twenty years. In accordance with section 610 of the Regulatory Flexibility Act, the Coast Guard is also reviewing these regulations for their impacts on small businesses and the potential to reduce any such impacts. Public comment on small business impacts is specifically requested. This project supports the Coast Guard's strategic goal of marine safety. This rulemaking will encompass a complete review of the Deepwater Port Regulations.

Abstract: This project involves reviewing and updating the commercial diving regulations in 46 CFR 197, subpart B, which are over 20 years old. A review of the commercial diving regulations needs to be done to determine what parts should be updated or changed based on the current standards of safety, technology, and industry practices and, in accordance with 5 U.S.C. 610, to evaluate and minimize any significant economic impact of the rules upon a substantial number of small entities. The project supports the Coast Guard Marine Safety and Environmental Protection Program's goal to reduce deaths and injuries on U.S. commercial vessels and the Coast Guard's strategic goal of safety.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 46 USC 3703

CFR Citation: 46 CFR 32

Legal Deadline:
Final, Statutory, December 1, 1991.

Abstract: The Coast Guard established minimum performance standards for tank level or pressure monitoring devices for single-hull tank vessels that carry oil in bulk as cargo. These standards are effective until April 28, 1999. These devices reduce the size and impact of an oil spill by alerting the tank vessel operator that a level or pressure change has occurred in a cargo tank. The Coast Guard will evaluate the performance and cost effectiveness of any device which meets the standards set in this rule, if that device is submitted to the Coast Guard during the effective period of this rule. This project supports the Coast Guard's Marine Safety and Environmental Protection program's goal to reduce the amount of oil discharged into the marine environment and the Coast Guard's strategic goal of protection of natural resources.

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

Legal Authority: 33 USC 1233

CFR Citation: 33 CFR 100

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: In keeping with the National Performance Review and the President's Regulatory Reinvention Initiative, the Coast Guard reviewed its regatta and marine parade permitting regulations and determined that certain revisions are needed to eliminate overly burdensome, unnecessary, and obsolete requirements. The rule establishes various categories of events: those which do not require any notice or a permit because they clearly pose no extra or unusual hazard to safety of life; those which require written notice because they may pose such a hazard; and those which require a permit because they clearly pose such a hazard. This rule eliminates the need for permits, and associated paperwork burden on the public, unless they are necessary to advance the statutory purpose of promoting safety of life during marine events. The effective date has been delayed until the Coast Guard completes the Environmental Assessment and Finding of No Significant Impact. This rulemaking supports the Coast Guard's strategic goal of marine safety and mobility of commercial and recreational vessels.

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rulemaking is necessary as part of an overall initiative by the Coast Guard to improve navigational safety for towing vessels. It will help ensure that the mariner piloting a towing vessel has the proper training and qualifications to handle the tug and tow. It will introduce an additional level of license where there has been only two licenses. Each level will require greater experience and proficiency. This will prevent a new operator with minimal experience from commanding the largest flotillas; it will prevent any operator with any experience from commanding the large flotillas until he or she has gained, and shown, the necessary competence. This rulemaking also introduces a requirement for demonstration of proficiency as a prerequisite to being issued a license. This will be in addition to the current requirements for sea service physical examination, drug testing, and successful testing. This project supports the Coast Guard's Marine Safety and Environmental Protection program's goal to reduce the number of casualties, and the Coast Guard's strategic goal of marine safety.

2332. STREAMLINED INSPECTION PROGRAM (CGD 96-055)

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 46 USC 3306; 46 USC 3703

CFR Citation: 46 CFR 8

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This project will establish a Streamlined Inspection Program (SIP). The SIP would allow owners or operators of inspected vessels to have their own personnel perform many of the tests and requirements currently done by Coast Guard marine inspectors. Owners and operators of inspected vessels would work with the Coast Guard to develop written inspection procedures for each of their vessels enrolled in the program. The SIP would be conducted with Coast Guard oversight, and while Coast Guard marine inspectors would still conduct required inspections, their time on board the vessel would be substantially reduced. The SIP will raise the overall level of safety of a vessel by allowing vessels to meet inspection requirements through a combination of: increased participation of the vessel's crew in continuous vessel maintenance; trained and qualified company personnel conducting specific pre-inspection tasks throughout the vessel inspection cycle; and scheduled inspections conducted on board by Coast Guard marine inspectors. This rulemaking supports the Coast Guard's Marine Safety and Environmental goals of increased level of vessel and operational safety and reduced costs of regulatory compliance; and the Coast Guard's strategic goal of marine safety.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 46 USC 2110; 46 USC 3317; 14 USC 664; 31 USC 9701

CFR Citation: 46 CFR 2

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This project implements the Congressional mandate, contained in the Coast Guard Authorization Act of 1996 (Pub. L. 104-324) to cap fees that may be charged for the inspection or examination of small passenger vessels, and to exempt publicly-owned ferries from vessel inspection user fees. The Act limits annual fees for small passenger vessels less than 65 feet in length to not more than $300, and for small passenger vessels 65 feet or over in length to not more than $600. Fees for vessels in these categories currently range from $450 to $2,585 depending on the length and capacity of the vessel. This rule reduces published fees to the levels established under the caps imposed by the Coast Guard Authorization Act of 1996. This rule also exempts publicly-owned ferries from vessel inspection user fees. Additional revisions to the exemption criteria will expand exemptions in certain instances where it is clearly within the public interest to do so, but which are not included under current regulation.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

CFR Citation: 33 CFR 167

Abstract: This rule amends the Traffic Separation Scheme in approaches to Delaware Bay by shifting eastern approach lanes southward; establishing a two-way route for use by tug and tow traffic; and reconfiguring the precautionary area to exclude shoal areas too shallow for deep draft vessels. This rulemaking supports the Coast Guard's Marine Safety and Environmental Protection goal of reducing the number of collisions, allisions, and groundings, and the Coast Guard's strategic goal of marine safety and protection of natural resources.

Abstract: This project will add materials carried with Special Permits issued under Coast Guard regulations and other materials contained in the International Maritime Organization Code of Safe Practice for Solid Bulk Cargoes (IMO Bulk Solids Code, or "BC Code"), including coal, to the list of materials permitted under the regulations. The special handling procedures associated with these materials are also included in the new rules. The revisions will harmonize U.S. regulations with recommended international practice, and eliminate the need to apply for Special Permits, except for newly classified hazardous materials. This project supports the Coast Guard's strategic goal of safety and improved service to the United States shipping industry.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 14 USC 83; 14 USC 1333

CFR Citation: 33 CFR 66

Abstract: The Coast Guard proposes to reestablish Federal jurisdiction over certain waterways in the States of Alabama and Wisconsin for the purposes of private aids to navigation. This action is being taken to implement a request from the State of Alabama and an agreement between the State of Wisconsin and the Coast Guard, and to ensure safe navigation on the affected waterways. This rulemaking supports the Coast Guard's strategic goals of marine safety, and mobility of commercial and recreational vessel traffic.

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The Coast Guard amended its advance notice of arrival requirements to require vessels subject to the International Safety Management (ISM) Code to provide notice of their compliance with the ISM Code when they enter U.S. waters. This rule was promulgated because certain vessels are required to comply with the ISM Code by July 1, 1998, and the Coast Guard is required by statute to deny vessels entry into U.S. ports if they do not comply with the ISM Code. This rule affects passenger vessels that transport more than 12 passengers internationally, and tank vessels, bulk freight vessels or high speed freight vessels of 500 gross tons or more on foreign voyages. This project supports the Coast Guard's Marine Safety and Environmental Protection program's goal to eliminate substandard vessels from United States waters, and the Coast Guard's strategic goal of marine safety.

Additional Information: The Coast Guard issued an interim rule in order to begin collecting ISM Code information from the affected vessels well in advance of the ISM Code implementation date of July 1, 1998, for international, safety, and port management concerns. The interim rule provided a 30-day comment period before the rule took effect, to balance the need for public participation with the Coast Guard's need to document compliance with the ISM Code.

Abstract: This project will establish regulations and guidelines to prevent the introduction of nonindigenous species into waters of the United States. Ballast water has been identified as a major pathway for the introduction and spread of Aquatic Nuisance Species (ANS). This rulemaking will establish voluntary ballast water exchange guidelines applicable to all vessels entering U.S. waters, as well as reporting and sampling procedures to monitor compliance. This project supports the Coast Guard's Marine Safety and Environmental Protection program's goal to reduce the volume of untreated ballast water discharged into United States waters, and the Coast Guard's strategic goal of protection of natural resources.

2339. FEDERAL PILOTAGE FOR VESSELS IN FOREIGN TRADE IN NORTH CAROLINA (USCG-98-3323)

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 46 USC 8503

CFR Citation: 46 CFR 15

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rule would add a new section to subpart I of 46 CFR part 15. The new section would require foreign-trade vessels to be under the direction and control of federally licensed pilots in designated waters of the Cape Fear River and North Cape Fear River, North Carolina, unless under the direction and control of state-licensed pilots. This would ensure that vessels are navigated by competent qualified persons, knowledgeable in the local area and accountable to either the state or the Coast Guard. This project supports two goals: the strategic goal of the Coast Guard to promote safety, and the goal of its program in Marine Safety and Environmental Protection to reduce the numbers of collisions, allisions, and groundings on the waters of the United States.

Abstract: This rulemaking will permit the Coast Guard to suspend or revoke its approvals of courses for merchant mariners. Current regulations do not contain provisions to suspend or revoke course approvals. This rulemaking will affect training schools which offer Coast Guard approved courses, when those schools fail to comply with the terms of course approval. By ensuring that schools maintain uniformly high standards, this rulemaking supports the Coast Guard's Marine Safety and Environmental Protection program's goal of reducing injuries and deaths aboard commercial vessels, and reducing the amount of pollution being discharged into the marine environment, and the Coast Guard's strategic goal of protection of natural resources.

Abstract: This rulemaking will require anchor systems and retrieval systems or measures for all single-hull tank barges operating on the waters listed in the rule (primarily offshore). The purpose of this rulemaking is to reduce oil spills from single-hull, non-self-propelled tank vessels. Priority: Routine and Frequent

CFR Citation: 33 CFR 100; 33 CFR 165

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: These routine and frequent regulations establish limited access zones in which the Coast Guard exercises control of all vessels to ensure the safety or security of events, vessels or individuals. They are usually of short duration, ranging from a few hours to a few days. Safety zones are established for events such as fireworks displays, high speed races, or the transit of dangerous cargoes such as explosives or liquefied petroleum gas. Security zones are established for presidential or vice presidential visits, high profile events such as the Olympics, or controversial events such as transport of spent nuclear fuel. Safety and security zones are promulgated by Captains of the Port or District Commanders in response to requests or notifications from appropriate officials. These routine and frequent rulemakings support the Coast Guard's strategic goals of waterways management and marine safety. Total actions expected 10/01/98 to 10/01/99: 250.

Abstract: These routine and frequent regulations are established where maritime and commercial interests require them for safety of navigation. Special anchorage areas are areas in which vessels of not more than 65 feet may anchor without displaying the required lights or sound signals. These special anchorage areas are limited geographically, and depending upon the purpose, establish both long and short-term anchorages. Anchorage grounds are limited geographically, delineate the types and size of vessel which may use the anchorage, and may place time and other restrictions on its use. Special anchorage areas and anchorage grounds are promulgated by District Commanders in response to requests from appropriate officials. These routine and frequent rulemakings support the Coast Guard's strategic goal of waterways management and marine safety. Total actions expected 10/01/98 to 10/01/99: 10.

Abstract: In May 1989, the Coast Guard began a rulemaking to incorporate into regulation certain elements of the Shore Protection Act. Its objective was to help prevent trash, medical debris, and other unsightly and potentially harmful materials from being deposited into the coastal waters of the United States as a result of sloppy waste-handling procedures. This project supported the Coast Guard's Marine Safety and Environmental Protection program goal of reducing discharge of plastics/garbage into the marine environment and the Coast Guard's strategic goal of protection of natural resources.

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: 46 USC 4202

CFR Citation: 46 CFR 165

Legal Deadline:

Abstract: The Oil Pollution Act of 1990 directed the President by August 18, 1992, to: require periodic inspection of discharge-removal equipment to ensure that it is available in an emergency, and to require carriage of discharge-removal equipment by vessels operating in the navigable waters of the U.S. and carrying oil or hazardous substances. This action implemented those provisions. This project supported the Coast Guard's Marine Safety and Environmental Protection goal to reduce the consequence of pollution incidents and the Coast Guard's strategic goal of protection of natural resources. This project is considered significant because of expected costs and substantial public interest.

2347. CLAIMS PROCEDURES UNDER THE OIL POLLUTION ACT OF 1990 (CGD 91-035)

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 33 USC 2713; 33 USC 2714

CFR Citation: 33 CFR 136

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rulemaking implements section 1013 (Claims Procedures) and section 1014 (Designation of Source and Advertisement) of the Oil Pollution Act of 1990. This rulemaking was designated significant because of anticipated public interest. The interim rule provides the requirements for the filing of claims for uncompensated removal costs or damages resulting from the discharge of oil, for the designation of the sources of the discharge, and for the advertisement of where claims are to be filed. The interim rule also included the processing of natural resource damage (NRD) claims. The NRD claims, however, were not processed until September 25, 1997, when the Department of Justice issued an opinion that the Oil Spill Liability Trust Fund (OSTLF) is available without further appropriation to pay trustee NRD claims under the general claims provisions of the Oil Pollution Act of 1990, 33 U.S.C. 2712(a)(4). Release of the final rule will be delayed until additional experience is gained on the adjudication of these NRD claims. This rulemaking supports the Coast Guard's strategic goal of the protection of natural resources.

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: 46 USC 3703

CFR Citation: 33 CFR 168

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rulemaking developed standards which implement section 4116(c) of the Oil Pollution Act of 1990. It addressed the areas of Prince William and Puget Sounds and requires a two-vessel escort for single-hull tankers greater than 5,000 gross tons. On November 1, 1994, the crash stop criteria were suspended because of industry concerns about meeting the criteria. On February 1, 1995, a notice of availability of a two part study assessing the capability of escort tugs to control disabled tankers in Prince William Sound was published. This project supports the Coast Guard's Marine Safety and Environmental Protection program's goal to reduce the amount of oil discharged into the marine environment and the Coast Guard's strategic goal of protecting natural resources. This project is considered significant because of substantial public and State government interest.

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: 33 USC 2712

CFR Citation: 33 CFR 133

Legal Deadline:
NPRM, Statutory, February 18, 1991.

Abstract: Pursuant to the Oil Pollution Act of 1990 (OPA 90), this action specifies how the authority to obligate the pollution trust fund for oil spill response and cleanup efforts and to enter into agreements with the States will be exercised. The Coast Guard is evaluating the performance of the interim rule and expects to publish a final rule by December, 1999. This rulemaking supports the Coast Guard's strategic goal of the protection of natural resources. This rulemaking is considered significant because of substantial State interest.

2350. REGATTA REGULATIONS

Priority: Routine and Frequent

Legal Authority: 33 USC 1233

CFR Citation: 33 CFR 100

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: These routine and frequent special local regulations ensure the safety of participants and spectators in regattas and marine parades. They specify such things as separate participant and spectator areas, separation schemes for water craft in the area of the event, and temporary restrictions on waterways to accommodate the event. These rules are short-term, usually applying to a single event not exceeding 8 hours in duration, and usually encompassing only a small portion of a navigable waterway. These rules are promulgated by District Commanders in response to a request from a sponsoring organization. These routine and frequent rulemakings support the Coast Guard's strategic goal of marine safety, and mobility of commercial and recreational vessel traffic. Total actions expected 10/01/98 to 10/01/99: 75.

Priority: Routine and Frequent

Legal Authority: 33 USC 499

CFR Citation: 33 CFR 117

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: These routine and frequent regulations establish operating schedules, and notice requirements, for drawbridges across navigable waterways. Drawbridge regulations establish the permanent draw operation schedules for bridges and specify what notice mariners must give to request an opening. Short-term deviations from the permanent schedule may be issued for bridge repairs or to test the effectiveness of a proposed new opening schedule. Drawbridge regulations are promulgated by District Commanders usually at the request of the bridge owner or operator, or of local officials or local Coast Guard bridge administration officials. These routine and frequent rulemakings support the Coast Guard's strategic goals of waterways management, marine safety, and mobility of commercial and recreational vessel traffic. Priority: Routine and Frequent

Legal Authority: 33 USC 1233; 50 USC 191

CFR Citation: 33 CFR 165

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: These routine and frequent regulations establish operating requirements for vessels within specified geographic areas to ensure safety on the navigable waters where some special or unusual circumstance exists. Regulated navigation areas are limited areas in which the Coast Guard specifies operational or vessel restrictions such as vessel entry, movement or departure; and vessel size, speed, horsepower, or draft limitations. Regulated navigation areas are promulgated by District Commanders, usually at the request of Coast Guard marine safety or local maritime safety officials. These routine and frequent rulemakings support the Coast Guard's strategic goals of waterways management, marine safety, and mobility of commercial and recreational vessel traffic. Abstract: The International Maritime Organization (IMO) comprehensively amended the International Convention on Standards of Training, Certification and Watchkeeping for Seafarers, 1978 (STCW), in 1995. The amendments came into force on February 1, 1997. This project is intended to implement them by revising 46 CFR Parts 10, 12, and 15 to ensure that the United States complies with their requirements on: the training of merchant mariners, the documenting of their qualifications, and watch-standing and other arrangements aboard seagoing merchant ships of the United States. This rulemaking is considered significant due to potential impact on industry and potential effect on international interests. This project supports the Coast Guard's strategic goal of safety, and the Coast Guard's Marine Safety and Environmental Protection program's goal of reducing deaths and injuries of crewmembers on domestic merchant vessels and eliminating substandard vessels from the navigable waters of the United States.

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The Coast Guard published a notice of inquiry on this subject on May 11, 1995. It received 1983 comments, most of which were very general. It is clear that two boating accidents involving fatalities caused by propeller strikes on rented houseboats on lake Shasta, Lake Havasu and several instances of crippling injuries in the last several years have generated a great deal of concern. This rulemaking would examine the number and nature of injuries sustained from vessel propellers and help the Coast Guard to determine the need for Federal or State regulation of these vessels, the livery companies leasing these vessels, or the operators of these vessels. Any regulation issued would be implemented to reduce future injuries and fatalities involving rented boats. Future action is partially dependent upon results of a Technology Comparison and testing of propellers, propeller guards, etc. conducted under a Coast Guard grant. This rulemaking supports the Coast Guard's strategic goal of marine safety.

Abstract: The Coast Guard proposes requirements for total flooding or other installed systems for suppressing fires on towing vessels and voyage planning. The purpose of this rulemaking is to reduce oil spills from single-hull, non-self-propelled barges. Drifting oil barges have run aground and spilled their cargoes, causing considerable damage to marine life and the environment. This project was developed in cooperation with the Towing Safety Advisory Committee. This project supports the Coast Guard's Marine Safety and Environmental Protection program's goal to reduce the amount of oil discharged into the marine environment, and the Coast Guard's strategic goals of marine safety and protection of the marine environment. This project is significant due to congressional interest.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

CFR Citation: 33 CFR 20; 46 CFR 5; 46 CFR 4

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The Coast Guard maintains two separate sets of procedural rules for administrative adjudications against merchant mariners' license, certificates, and documents, and the adjudication of class II civil penalties. The rules for suspension and revocation, contained in part 5 of title 46 of the Code of Federal Regulations (CFR), date from 1948 and are based on criminal procedure. The rules for class II civil penalties, contained in part 20 of title 33 of the CFR, date from 1994 and are based on the Model Rules of Administrative Procedure and on other modern rules for civil procedure. Neither set implements the authority of the Oil Pollution Act of 1990 (OPA 90): which provides for the temporary suspension of a license, certificate, or document for up to 45 days without a hearing, in certain circumstances, and a hearing within 30 days of any such suspension. This rulemaking would consolidate all procedural rules for administrative adjudications for class II civil penalties, and allow the Coast Guard to implement the OPA 90 authority. This project supports two goals: the strategic goal of the Coast Guard to promote safety, and the goal of its program in Marine Safety and Environmental Protection to reduce injuries and deaths of crewmembers aboard commercial vessels of the United States.

2358. +SALVAGE AND FIREFIGHTING EQUIPMENT; VESSEL RESPONSE PLANS (USCG-98-3417)

Priority: Other Significant

CFR Citation: 33 CFR 155

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: Current vessel response plan regulations require that the owners or operators of vessels carrying groups I through V petroleum oil as a primary cargo identify in their response plans a salvage company with expertise and equipment, and a company with firefighting capability that can be deployed to a port nearest to the vessel's operating area within 24 hours of notification (groups I-IV) or a discovery of a discharge (group V). Numerous requests for clarification revealed widespread misunderstanding and confusion regarding the regulatory language, which will make the implementation of this requirement difficult. Based on comments received after the vessel response plan final rule publication (61 FR 1052; January 12, 1996) and during a Coast Guard hosted workshop, the Coast Guard intends to better define the terms "salvage expertise and equipment" and "vessel firefighting capability" requirements and will reconsider the 24-hour deployment requirement which was scheduled to go into effect on February 18, 1998. Therefore, the Coast Guard suspended the effective dates of the deployment requirements as published in the final rule. The Coast Guard will continue with this project to better define the requirements. This rulemaking supports the Coast Guard's strategic goals of marine safety and protection of the marine environment.

CFR Citation: 46 CFR 1; 46 CFR 7 to 10; 46 CFR 199

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rulemaking would require vessel owners or operators operating small passenger vessels and passenger vessels in domestic service to develop, maintain, and exercise emergency response plans. The first step in this process is to publish an advance notice of proposed rulemaking to seek feedback from vessel owners and operators. Emergency response plans would establish a process that initiates and maintains actions to prevent injury and loss of life during collisions, allisions, groundings, fires, and other emergencies. The plans would address issues such as passenger egress, crew training, and available emergency resources both on a vessel and in a vessel's operating area. This rulemaking supports the Coast Guard's strategic goal of national security. This rulemaking is significant due to important Department of Transportation policy and public interest.

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: As part of the President's Regulatory Review Initiative to remove or revise unnecessary government regulations, this rule removes numerous obsolete sections from the Code of Federal Regulations and eliminates duplication of other provisions by consolidating the lifesaving requirements for most U.S. inspected vessels making them consistent with the substantive provisions of the Safety of Life at Sea (SOLAS) Convention of 1974, to the maximum extent practicable. It not only implements the provisions of chapter III of SOLAS, as amended, but also revises lifesaving regulations for Great Lakes vessels and certain vessels in domestic trade, which are not covered by SOLAS. The rule also replaces many prescriptive regulations with performance-based alternatives. This rule also supports the Coast Guard's Marine Safety and Environmental Protection program's goal to reduce crew member deaths and injuries on U.S. commercial vessels and the Coast Guard's strategic goal of marine safety.

2362. +IMPLEMENTATION OF THE COMMERCIAL FISHING-INDUSTRY VESSEL SAFETY ACT (CGD 88-079)

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: 46 USC 4502; 46 USC 4506; 46 USC 6104(c); 46 USC 10603(b)

CFR Citation: 46 CFR 28

Legal Deadline:
Final, Statutory, January 1, 1993.

Abstract: The Commercial Fishing Industry Vessel Safety Act of 1988 requires the Secretary of Transportation to prescribe regulations for certain safety equipment and vessel operating procedures. A final rule establishing requirements for navigation, radio, firefighting and lifesaving equipment, fuel, ventilation, and electrical systems was published in August, 1991. In August, 1992, an interim rule established immersion suit requirements. In May, 1993, regulations for immersion suits on vessels operating on seasonally cold waters were also proposed. Lifesaving equipment and instructor qualifications were addressed in a separate rule under RIN 2115-AF35. This project supports the Coast Guard's strategic goal of safety. The issues which remain concern damage stability and immersion suits. The Coast Guard has terminated this docket, and intends to create a new docket to resolve the remaining issues.

2363. +SECURITY FOR PASSENGER VESSELS AND PASSENGER TERMINALS (CGD 91-012)

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: 33 USC 1226

CFR Citation: 33 CFR 120; 33 CFR 128

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The purpose of this action is to improve security measures on passenger vessels engaged in international voyages of 24 hours or more, and on the port facilities serving these vessels. This rule requires all applicable passenger vessels and passenger terminals to develop security plans for planning and performance standards at three security levels. The plans address normal security (Level I), security when a vessel or terminal may be a terrorist target (Level II), and security when a vessel or terminal is determined to be a terrorist target (Level III). The security plans will be examined by the Coast Guard to ensure they meet the requirements of the regulations and conform to internationally recognized standards. This rulemaking supports the Coast Guard's Marine Safety and Environmental Protection program's goal to reduce the risk of terrorism and of loss of life aboard passenger vessels. This rulemaking also supports the Coast Guard's strategic goal of marine safety. This rulemaking is significant because of substantial public interest and safety implications.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 33 USC 1231

CFR Citation: 33 CFR 160

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The Coast Guard requires the reporting of hazardous conditions by vessel owners, masters, agents, or persons in charge. This project added the term operator to the list of those required to report. This project also revised the notification requirement to include hazardous conditions caused by a vessel's operation even when the vessel itself is not effected. This project eliminated the confusion that may exist in determining whether a particular incident is reportable and, if so, by whom. This project supports the Coast Guard's strategic goals of marine safety and protection of natural resources.

Abstract: This project clarified those marine casualties that require immediate notification to the Coast Guard. It specifies when immediate notification was required, who was responsible for providing notice, and to whom notification must was required so that prompt emergency action can be taken as necessary. This rulemaking affects the owners, agents, master, operator, or person in charge of the vessel. This rulemaking supports the Coast Guard's Marine Safety and Environmental Protection program's goal of reducing the number of collisions, allisions, and groundings; and the Coast Guard's strategic goal of marine safety and protection of the marine environment.

Abstract: This rulemaking consolidated the Uniform State Waterway Marking System (USWMS) with the US Aids to Navigation System (USATONS). The consolidation eliminates three differences between the two systems by adopting the markers of the USATONS. There should be no impact on government entities because implementation costs will be linked to replacement cycles for the aids to navigation. This rulemaking supports the Coast Guard's strategic goals of commercial and recreational vessel mobility.

2368. +PART 145 REVIEW: REPAIR STATIONS

Priority: Other Significant

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 106(g); 49 USC 40113; 49 USC 44701; 49 USC 44702; 49 USC 44703; 49 USC 44705; 49 USC 44707; 49 USC 44709; 49 USC 44710; 49 USC 44711; 49 USC 44713; 49 USC 44717; 49 USC 45102 to 45103; 49 USC 45301 to 45302

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 43; 14 CFR 65; 14 CFR 145

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The FAA proposes to update and revise the regulations for repair stations. This action is necessary because many portions of the current repair station regulations do not reflect technical advances in aircraft maintenance practices or aircraft technology. The revisions would reorganize the repair station rules to reduce duplication of regulatory language and eliminate obsolete information. The proposal also would establish new requirements that relate to repair station ratings and classes, manual requirements, recordkeeping, and personnel. This rulemaking is considered significant because of substantial public interest.

Abstract: This action would revise certain requirements concerning registration of aircraft, certification of pilots, and penalties associated with registration and certification violations. This notice also announced new procedures for processing major repair and alteration forms which pertain to fuel system modifications. Actions announced in this notice respond to the FAA Drug Enforcement Assistance Act. The requirements and adopted procedures are intended to assist law enforcement agencies in their efforts to stop drug trafficking in general aviation aircraft. Aging Aircraft Safety Act of 1991: action must be initiated by 4/24/92.

Abstract: On October 5, 1993, the FAA published an NPRM that proposed to require air carriers of certain aircraft used in air transportation to demonstrate that the aircraft's maintenance has been adequate to ensure the highest degree of safety. After further review, and taking into consideration public comments to the NPRM, the FAA considers it appropriate to withdraw that NPRM. The FAA is developing a new NPRM that would ensure the continuing airworthiness of the most significant aging airplanes operating in air transportation by mandating aging aircraft records reviews and inspections for certain air carriers and certain aircraft and also by applying modern damage-tolerance analyses and inspection techniques to older airplane structures that were certificated before such techniques were available. This rulemaking is significant because of substantial public interest.

Abstract: This project would ensure that airplanes used or not used in common carriage in air transportation have a comprehensive corrosion prevention program within their maintenance or inspection programs. In April 1988, a commercial transport airplane experienced an in-flight decompression and separation of approximately 18 feet of the fuselage skin and structure at the top of the airplane. The airplane had been in service for 19 years and had flown almost 90,000 flights. The National Transportation Safety Board concluded that the failure of the airline to detect skin disbonding resulted in corrosion and metal fatigue leading to separation of the airplane's skin structure. This rulemaking is considered significant because of substantial public interest.

Abstract: This action would codify the Federal Aviation Administration's policy not to use information from voluntary Flight Operational Quality Assurance programs in any enforcement actions taken against operators or pilots. The proposed amendment responds to industry groups that have been reluctant to participate. These programs benefit aviation safety by providing information that can lead to improvements in training and operations. In 1995 the FAA initiated a two-year concept demonstration study in partnership with industry. Based on the study, the FAA will issue an Advisory Circular. The FAA will use the information from the study to determine if it is appropriate to codify in the rules the immunity provisions. This rulemaking is significant because of substantial public interest.

Abstract: This action would revise the Federal Aviation Regulations that prescribe the certification and training requirements for mechanics and repairmen. Current regulations prescribing these certification requirements do not reflect the significant technological advances that have occurred in the aviation industry and the enhancements in training and instructional methods that have affected all aviation maintenance personnel. The proposed rule would consolidate and clarify 11 certification, training, experience, and currency requirements for aviation maintenance personnel in a newly established part 66. The proposal would enhance aviation safety by establishing new training programs for aviation maintenance personnel and would decrease the regulatory burden on these personnel by providing alternatives for meeting experience and currency requirements. This is an ARAC project that has 2 phases; phase 1 was addressed in the first NPRM and phase 2 will be addressed in the second NPRM as well as addressing comments received from the first NPRM.

Abstract: This action would propose amendments to require aircraft crewmembers to submit to tests that show the presence of alcohol, drugs, or drug metabolites when requested by Federal, State, or local law enforcement officers investigating violations of Federal, State, or local law. The proposed amendments are intended to reduce aircraft accidents and incidents attributed to the use of drugs by crewmembers. This rulemaking is considered significant because of substantial public interest.

Abstract: This action proposes to increase the amount of compensation that a carrier may earn for collecting and remitting a passenger facility charge from eight cents to ten cents. In addition, the NPRM proposes to clarify that monthly remittances must be received by airport public agencies collecting PFCs on the last day of each month. The NPRM also proposes to amend the regulation to reflect the statutory prohibition on collection of PFCs from passengers using frequent flyer bonus awards. This rulemaking is significant because of substantial public interest.

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 33

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This action proposes changes to amend the type certification standards for aircraft turbine engines that concern bird ingestion. This proposal updates the current bird ingestion standards to reflect recent analysis defining the actual bird threat encountered by turbine engines. This proposal also harmonizes the FAA's type certification standards on this issue with requirements being drafted by the Joint Aviation Authorities (JAA). The proposed changes, if adopted, would establish one set of common requirements, and thereby reduce the regulatory hardship on the aviation industry by eliminating the need for manufacturers to comply with different sets of standards when seeking type certification from the FAA and validation from the JAA.

Abstract: This action proposes to amend the regulations that prescribe the certification and training requirements for aircraft dispatchers. Current regulations prescribing these certification requirements do not reflect the significant technological advances that have occurred in the aviation industry and the enhancements in training and instructional methods that have affected all aircraft dispatchers. The proposal would consolidate and clarify all certification, training, and experience requirements for aircraft dispatchers in newly revised part 65, subpart C, and appendix A of part 65.

2383. +FALSE AND MISLEADING STATEMENTS REGARDING AIRCRAFT PARTS

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 44913

CFR Citation: Not yet determined

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This action proposes additional rules that would prohibit certain false or misleading statements regarding civil aircraft, airframes, aircraft engines, propellers, appliances, component parts, and materials, including standard parts, that are used, or may be used, on civil aircraft. The proposals would also permit increased inspection by the FAA of records regarding the quality of aircraft parts. The additional rules are needed to help prevent persons from representing parts as suitable for use on civil aircraft when in fact they may not be. The proposals are intended to provide assurance that aircraft owners and operators, and persons who maintain aircraft, have truthful information on which to determine whether a part may be used in a given civil aircraft application. This action is significant because of substantial public interest.

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 129

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: As an action intended to implement the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996 (PL 104-132, 4/14/96), the FAA is proposing to amend existing airplane operator security rules for foreign air carriers and foreign operators of U.S. registered aircraft. The proposed amendment would require the Administrator to accept a foreign air carrier's program only if the Administrator finds that the security program provides for identical security measures to those provided by U.S. air carriers serving the same airport. The proposed rule will establish the obligation to use identical security measures. The actual measures to be used will be identified through changes to the nonpublic security program of the foreign air carriers. This rule is considered significant due to substantial public interest and concern of foreign governments.

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 70101 to 70119

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 415; 14 CFR 417

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This action would establish requirements for licensing the operation of a launch site. The law requires anyone who proposes to operate a launch site within the U.S., or a U.S. citizen proposing to operate a launch site outside the U.S., to obtain a license from DOT. This action would govern obtaining a license to operate such a launch site. Currently, commercial rocket launches take place from Federal government installations operated by the Department of Defense and NASA. Licensing requirements for those launches are being developed in a related rulemaking (RIN 2120-AF99). In this action, DOT proposes to implement rules regarding obtaining a license to operate a launch site. This rulemaking is significant because of substantial public interest.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 106(f)

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 17

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rulemaking would formally establish procedures the FAA will use to settle contract disputes and protests.

The FAA Office of Dispute Resolution (ODR) was established as an organization that has broad discretion to resolve protests and contract disputes, utilize administrative or alternative dispute resolution techniques and provide fair and impartial decisions or recommendations, supported by the facts and law. In order for this office to carry out its function, while providing for appropriate due process, it is necessary that certain of its procedures uniformly have the force and effect of law. This would include matters such as the establishment of filing deadlines; the power to issue subpoenas and protective orders; the power to levy sanctions; and the discretion to establish schedules, and to limit discovery, length of presentations, numbers of exhibits, and other similar matters.

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 121; 14 CFR 125; 14 CFR 135

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rulemaking proposes to ban the transportation of devices designed to chemically generate oxygen in certain aircraft, with limited exceptions. This proposed ban applies to newly-manufactured chemical oxygen generators that have never been filled with chemicals. It would also apply to devices designated as chemical oxygen generators that have been discharged (spent) or that are past their expiration dates. The FAA believes that newly-manufactured chemical oxygen generators might be manufactured in one location and transported to another location to be filled. This could lead to human factors errors in determining whether the device designed as a chemical oxygen generator is actually empty.

The Research and Special Programs Administration (RSPA) proposed a ban that applies to "spent" chemical oxygen generators to the extent that such generators have residue chemicals in the canisters. (See RIN 2137-AC92)

This rulemaking is considered significant because of substantial public interest.

Abstract: The FAA is proposing the screening or bag matching of passenger checked baggage on domestic flights by utilizing an FAA-approved Computer Assisted Passenger Screening (CAPS) system. This is in response to a recommendation from the White House Commission on Aviation Safety and Security (The Commission) "Final Report to President Clinton." The Commission recommended that one of the steps that should be taken to improve airline passenger security is the implementation by the FAA of a computerized system for profiling airline passengers flying out of airports located in the United States. Abstract: A statement of policy, Policy Regarding Airport Rates and Charges (Policy Statement), which was required by Congress as part of the DOT Authorization Act of 1994, was published in the Federal Register (61 FR 31994) on June 21, 1996. That Policy Statement announced DOT and FAA policy on the fees charged by federally assisted airports to air carriers and other aeronautical users. This proposed action requests comments on replacement provisions for the portions of the Policy Statement vacated by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit. The Court disallowed a portion of the policy that had to do with historic cost valuation of airport property. DOT and FAA are beginning this proceeding in order to carry out its responsibility to establish reasonableness guidelines for airport fees. This policy is significant due to substantial industry interest.

DOT—FAA

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 106(g); 49 USC 40113; 49 USC 44701 to 44702; 49 USC 44704

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 27; 14 CFR 29

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The FAA proposes to amend the airworthiness standards for rotorcraft load combination (RLC) certification. This proposal would revise the safety requirements for RLC to address advances in technology and to provide an increased improvement in the safety standards for RLC certification and lead to a harmonized international standard.

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 21

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This action will develop a Special Federal Aviation Regulation (SFAR) to require type certificate holders of certain turbojet and turbofan-powered transport category airplanes to conduct a design review of fuel tank systems and develop fuel system inspection and maintenance instructions. It will also allow a certificate holder to submit documentation that the type design of the fuel system of a previously certificated airplane precludes existence of ignition sources within the airplane's fuel tanks. This action is significant because of substantial public interest in the prevention of fire and explosion in airplane fuel tanks.

Abstract: This action proposes to amend the regulations to permit the use of electronic signatures to satisfy maintenance, operational, and type certification record preparation and retention requirements. Although this action will encourage the use of electronic recordkeeping systems, it will not discourage the use of paper documents and records to satisfy regulatory requirements. The proposed rule will provide cost savings and regulatory relief to owners, manufacturers, operators and repair stations.

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 121

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This proposal will amend and extend Special Federal Aviation Regulation (SFAR) No. 36, which expires January 23, 1999. The SFAR allows certificated domestic repair stations, air carriers, air taxi operators of large aircraft, and commercial operators of large aircraft that have the authority to return products to service to accomplish major repairs using self-developed repair data that have not been specially approved by the FAA. These amendments clarify conditions under which the SFAR authorization can be used. Extension of the regulation continues to provide, for those who qualify, an alternative from the requirement to obtain additional time for the FAA to incorporate the SFAR provisions into the regulations.

Abstract: The FAA is proposing changes to the noise certification standards for propeller-driven small airplanes. These proposals are based on the joint effort of the FAA, the European Joint Aviation Authorities (JAA), and Aviation Rulemaking Advisory Committee (ARAC), to harmonize the US noise and certification regulations and the JAR for propeller-driven small airplanes. The proposed changes would provide nearly uniform noise certification standards for airplanes certificated in the US and in the JAA countries. The harmonization of the noise certification standards would simplify airworthiness approvals for import and export purposes.

Abstract: The FAA is withdrawing a previously published Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) that proposed to amend various sections of the regulations. The proposal was to clarify language, correct improper or obsolete references, and to relax certain existing requirements. Since publication of the NPRM, many other completed, in-process, or planned actions have addressed or will address many of the issues involved. The FAA has determined that all unresolved issues should be included in more recent actions dealing with the specific sections of the regulations.

Abstract: This action would add new requirements for water survival equipment carried aboard airplanes and rotorcraft. The requirements would apply, after specified dates, to U.S.-certificate holders that conduct common-carriage operations with airplanes and rotorcraft. This action is in response to the Airport and Airway Safety and Capacity Enhancement Act of 1987 (PL 100-223) and relates to safety recommendations by the National Transportation Safety Board. The requirements are intended to increase the likelihood of aircraft passengers surviving a crash landing in water and, thus, this rulemaking is significant because of the safety implications.

Abstract: This action would require that all seats of transport category airplanes used in air carrier operations and transport category airplanes used in scheduled intrastate service comply with improved crashworthiness standards. The Airport and Airways Safety and Capacity Expansion Act of 1987 directs the Secretary of Transportation to initiate a rulemaking proceeding to consider requiring all seats onboard all air carrier aircraft to meet improved crashworthiness standards based upon the best available testing standards. The intended effect of this action is to increase passenger protection and survivability in survivable impact accidents. This rulemaking is considered significant because of its safety implications and statutory requirements.

Abstract: The FAA is withdrawing a previously published Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (ANPRM) that proposed to establish minimum standards under which a radio navigation system may be certified as the sole radio navigation system required in an aircraft conducting Instrument Flight Rules en route and terminal area operations, including nonprecision approach, in controlled airspace of the United States. This rulemaking was considered to be significant because of a congressional mandate. However, the provision was repealed in 1994 as part of the recodification of Title 49. The provision was originally enacted as section 310(c) in FAA's 1987 Reauthorization bill, Pub. L. No. 100-123.

Abstract: This action establishes a requirement for part 121 certificate holders to develop an FAA-approved ground deicing/anti-icing program and to comply with that program any time conditions are such that frost, ice, or snow could adhere to the aircraft's wings, control surfaces, or propellers. This action is necessary because several accidents and the recent International Conference on Airplane Ground Deicing indicate that, under present procedures, the pilot in command may be unable to effectively determine whether critical airplane components are free of all frost, ice, or snow prior to attempting a takeoff. The action provides an added level of safety to flight operations in adverse weather conditions, and is considered significant because of its safety implications.

2409. AIR TRAFFIC CONTROL RADAR BEACON SYSTEM AND MODE S TRANSPONDER REQUIREMENTS IN THE NATIONAL AIRSPACE SYSTEM

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 121; 14 CFR 135

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This action would revise the Mode S transponder requirement for all aircraft operating under part 135 and certain aircraft operating under part 121 based on the expected availability of operational capabilities of Mode S ground sensors. For part 121 operators, the action would affect only those aircraft not required to have Traffic Alert and Collision Avoidance System II. An aviation rulemaking advisory committee has recommended that the FAA conduct a study of the installed Mode S ground sensor to determine the extent of the benefits derived and the costs involved in equipage. This action is a relieving action made necessary by the fact that ground sensors are not in place to support the requirement. Further, FAA is studying the need for Mode S transponders in part 135 and certain part 121 operations in light of the fact that transponders may not substantially increase ATC ability to view air traffic.

Abstract: The FAA has reviewed the Aviation Rulemaking Advisory Committee recommendation to proceed with this rulemaking. The FAA has determined that it would be most appropriate to address the flight attendant English language issue in the overall context of crew training. Therefore, because the FAA will incorporate the flight attendant English language issue into the proposed revision of part 121 subpart N and O notice of proposed rulemaking, this rulemaking entry will be withdrawn.

Abstract: This action would adjust recently adopted requirements for access to type III emergency exits in transport category airplanes with 60 or more passenger seats. The adjustments would reflect new data from tests conducted at the FAA's Civil Aeromedical Institute and are intended to improve the ability of occupants to evacuate an airplane under emergency conditions. This rulemaking is considered significant because of substantial public interest.

Abstract: This amendment requires parts 125 and 135 certificate holders to provide pilot training or testing in ground deicing/anti-icing procedures and to check the airplane for contamination by frost, ice, or snow during ground icing conditions. The proposal is intended to provide an added level of safety to flight operations in adverse weather conditions under parts 125 and 135. Abstract: This action would extend and modify SFAR 62, issued December 5, 1990, which suspends the Mode C transponder requirement for operations to and from certain specific airports located within 30 miles of a Class B airspace primary airport. The operations and routings approved under SFAR 62 include routes within 2 nautical miles of the specified airports and at altitudes that were not excluded from the Mode C transponder requirement. Airports that are served primarily by aircraft required to install Traffic Alert and Collision Avoidance Systems are not included in this exception. This rulemaking was accomplished in 1990 because the scheduled radar system upgrades, required to provide Mode C transponder coverage, have not been placed into full service in all Class B sites. The present action would extend the current exclusions to those airports that have not received the improved radar coverage, and amend the exclusions provided airports that have received improved radar coverage through operational verification of the new radar systems. This rulemaking is significant because of substantial public interest.

Abstract: This rulemaking proposes to amend the airworthiness standards for normal category rotorcraft by increasing the maximum weight limit from 6,000 to 7,000 pounds and add a passenger seat limitation of nine. The increase in maximum weight is proposed to compensate for the increased weight resulting from additional regulatory requirements, particularly recent requirements intended to improve occupant survivability in the event of a crash.

Abstract: This action proposes to revise the airworthiness standards for transport category airplanes relating to flight attendant assist space, flight attendant assist handles, door hold open features, outside viewing means, interior compartment doors and portable oxygen equipment. With one exception, these proposals are not the result of any specific incident or recommendation, but are part of the FAA's continuing effort to upgrade the regulations to improve the overall level of safety in areas where the state-of-the-art and good design practice have indicated that such upgrades are warranted. These proposals would result in both new type design regulations as well as requirements applicable to existing designs implemented via the operating rules.

Priority: Other Significant

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 70101 to 70119

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 400 to 415

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The Commercial Space Launch Act of 1984, as amended, grants the Department of Transportation authority to license and otherwise regulate commercial launches and the commercial operation of launch sites. In accordance with this authority, delegated to the FAA, the Associate Administrator for Commercial Space Transportation (AST) must ensure that commercial space launch activities are conducted in a manner that does not jeopardize public health and safety and the safety of property, without imposing unnecessary regulatory burdens on the commercial launch industry. The industry has grown in size and complexity since the original regulations were published in 1988, and AST's licensing program continues to evolve to reflect these changes. This rulemaking modifies the current regulations to reflect a streamlined and more mature licensing regime developed over the past few years. Such changes would benefit the industry by reducing regulatory burdens, thus reducing costs. This rulemaking is significant because of substantial public interest.

Abstract: The FAA is amending the regulations to remove the interim rule that established fees and collection procedures for FAA air traffic and related services provided to certain aircraft that transit U.S.-controlled airspace but neither take off from, nor land in, the United States. On January 30, 1998, the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia vacated the FAA's interim final rule and remanded the rule to the FAA for disposition. The FAA intends to comply with its statutory mandate and issue a new rule. This action is significant because of substantial public interest.

Abstract: This rule would require an employment background investigation for persons who screen passengers and cargo in airports. The employment background investigation would include a fingerprint-based criminal history record check in certain cases, for unescorted access privileges to security areas at airports. The purpose of this rule is to help ensure the integrity and safety of the airport environment. This rulemaking is considered significant because of substantial public interest.

Abstract: This rulemaking disposes of comments received in response to the final rule published on September 26, 1994 (59 FR 49138), for certain procedural, operational, and equipment requirements for air tour operations in the State of Hawaii, codified as Special Federal Aviation Regulation (SFAR 71). It also extends SFAR 71 until the FAA publishes a final rule regulating all air tour operations. This rulemaking is significant because of substantial public interest.

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 61; 14 CFR 141; 14 CFR 142

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The FAA is going to issue a final rule versus an NPRM because the FAA does not believe there is any interest by the public and any delay could be detrimental to U.S. Pilot Schools and Training Centers. This rulemaking is needed to remove language restricting licensing for persons outside the U.S. who are not U.S. citizens and remove language restricting the operation of airmen training institutions outside the U.S. Efforts between the FAA, Joint Aviation Authorities (JAA), and European Civil Aviation Commission have identified these subject areas as obstructionist to harmonization efforts and detrimental to U.S. pilot schools, which seek to continue to train students from the JAA member states. The harmonization working groups, set up by the above organizations, are expected to recommend that the JAA remove similarly restrictive language from its Joint Aviation Regulations.

Abstract: This action would amend the airworthiness standards for transport category airplanes to require fuel vent system protection during post-crash ground fires. This proposed rule would apply to air carriers, air taxi operators, and commercial operators of transport category airplanes, as well as the manufacturers of such airplanes. This action is considered significant because of substantial public interest and the safety implications.

Abstract: This action proposes changes to the airworthiness standards to improve the crash resistance of fuel systems on normal, utility, acrobatic, and commuter category airplanes. The FAA has determined that improved crash resistance of these fuel systems is necessary to prevent deaths and injuries due to fire in survivable crashes. The proposed design changes would limit fuel spillage near ignition sources and would provide additional time for the survivors to evacuate the airplane.

Abstract: The FAA issues type certificates for "products," which are aircraft, engines, propellers, and some appliances. The FAA issues a regulation called an "Airworthiness Directive" (AD) to address an unsafe condition in a type certificated product, if that unsafe condition is likely to exist or develop in products of the same type design. Part 39 of title 14 requires each operator of a product affected by an AD to comply with the terms of the AD, in order to operate that product; the AD may mandate operational limitations, maintenance, or alterations for the affected product. The vast majority of routine and frequent Airworthiness Directives are nonsignificant. Total actions expected--700. 10/00/98 to 10/00/99.

Abstract: Standard Instrument Approach Procedures (SIAP) provide for instrument letdown to airports in the United States. They are a nonsignificant body of regulations that are complex and technical in nature and require routine and frequent rulemaking to maintain efficiency. The FAA issues, revises, and cancels SIAPs by adopting amendments that are incorporated into 14 CFR part 97. Contemporaneously with publication in the Federal Register, the SIAPs are made available to the Aeronautical Charting and Cartography Office in the Department of Commerce, and other publishers of aeronautical charts where they are published as approach procedure charts or "approach plates". These charts are made available to the members of the aviation community for use by pilots in making instrument approaches. Total actions expected--2,200. 10/00/98 - 10/00/99.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 106(g); 49 USC 40113; 49 USC 44701 to 44702; 49 USC 44704

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 25

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This action would amend the airworthiness standards for transport category airplanes to require a means to alert the flight crew of potentially unsafe low fuel quantities. There have been several fuel depletion incidents involving loss of power or thrust on all engines that could have resulted in forced landings and injury or loss of life. Most of these incidents resulted from improper fuel management techniques. This proposed amendment would require new transport category airplane designs to incorporate a low fuel quantity alert system that would allow for correction of certain fuel management errors or provide the flightcrew the opportunity to make a safe landing prior to engine fuel starvation.

Abstract: This preliminary action was initiated to determine the feasibility of installing, in all air carrier aircraft, crashworthy fuselage fuel tanks and fuselage fuel lines which are rupture resistant and which disconnect and seal in the event of an accident. This notice solicited public participation in identifying and selecting a regulatory course of action by inviting interested persons to submit specific comments and arguments concerning this proposed regulatory action. Abstract: This action would amend the airworthiness standards for transport category airplanes to require improved cowling retention devices. A review of a number of inflight incidents where engine cowlings were lost revealed that the largest single cause of such losses was improper latching of the cowlings. If adopted, this proposal would provide additional design standards to detect improperly latched cowlings and ensure the integrity of the latching system.

2441. 1-G STALLING SPEED AS A BASIS FOR COMPLIANCE WITH PART 25 OF THE FEDERAL AVIATION REGULATIONS

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 42 USC 4321; 49 USC 106(g); 49 USC 40113; 49 USC 44701 to 44702; 49 USC 44704; 49 USC 44715

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 25; 14 CFR 36

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This action would amend the Federal Aviation Regulations to redefine the airplane reference stalling speed as the 1-g stalling speed in lieu of the minimum stalling speed. It would: (1) provide for a consistent, repeatable reference stalling speed; (2) ensure consistent and dependable maneuvering margins; (3) clarify the requirement for the use of 1-g stalling speeds in determining structural design speeds; (4) increase the head-on gust structural design requirement; and (5) provide for adjusted multiplying factors to maintain essentially equivalent requirements in areas where the use of minimum stalling speed has proven adequate. These changes are needed since the stalling characteristics of modern jet transports as determined by current methods can result in inconsistent reference stalling speeds. These changes may result in a higher level of safety where current methods have resulted in artificially low reference stalling speeds.

Abstract: This action would assess reasonable charges for certain services provided by the FAA. The charges would be set at a level approximating the cost to the Government to provide these services and would be adjusted periodically as the cost of these services change or as prescribed in the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988. The cost of providing services for aircraft registration and recording and replacement of airmen certificates is not being fully recouped in accordance with the changes reflected in the Consumer Price Index of All Urban Consumers, which was published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor, or as set by the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988. This rulemaking would also consolidate all service fees by placing them in part 187 of the Federal Aviation Regulations. This rulemaking is considered significant because of substantial public interest.

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 21

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: Following World War II, a substantial number of surplus military airplanes were offered for sale to the public in order to meet an increased demand for civilian-use aircraft not being met by the civil aircraft industry. The current regulation permits both type and airworthiness certification for surplus military aircraft based on the particular aircraft's safety record and condition. As military aircraft have become increasingly complex and sophisticated, that practice is no longer acceptable. This action would remove the regulations for issuing type certificates for these surplus aircraft and eliminate references to obsolete standards. Surplus military aircraft would still be certificated in the normal, utility, acrobatic, commuter, transport, and restricted categories upon compliance with the applicable regulations.

Abstract: This action would revise the requirements for developing noise exposure maps and noise compatibility programs and submitting them for FAA approval. The revisions are intended to expedite and simplify the part 150 process. Under the revised process, the mandatory set of noise abatement measures which are presently required to be considered by each airport sponsor would be limited in scope depending on the characteristics of each airport and its surrounding community. The new process would be supported by appropriate guidance, training, review, standardization, and consultation requirements. This project is considered significant because of substantial public interest.

Final, Statutory, October 28, 1992.

Abstract: The Omnibus Transportation Employee Testing Act of 1991 directs the FAA Administrator to prescribe regulations that require foreign air carriers to establish drug and alcohol testing programs for employees performing safety-sensitive aviation functions. These regulations must be consistent with the international obligations of the United States and take into consideration any applicable laws and regulations of foreign countries. Comments were invited on a variety of issues related to the application of drug and alcohol testing requirements to employees of foreign air carriers operating within the territory of the United States. This action was taken in lieu of a notice of proposed rulemaking to seek the public's view on a variety of issues and to obtain responses to questions that may arise in addressing drug and alcohol testing by foreign air carriers. This action is considered significant because of substantial public and congressional interest.

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 121

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This proposal would allow part 121 certificate holders who operate aircraft that require three flight crewmembers, two pilots and a flight engineer, to implement a controlled rest on the flight deck program. Under the program, when cockpit workload permits, one flight crewmember at a time would be given the opportunity to sleep for a brief period of time at his or her duty station during the cruise portion of a flight. Before using the controlled rest concept, however, the certificate holder would have to obtain approval for its program from the FAA. This proposal originated as a recommendation from the Aviation Rulemaking Advisory Committee and responds to industry interest in developing a controlled rest program that is approved by the FAA. This rulemaking is considered significant because of substantial public interest.

Abstract: This action would amend the reporting requirements for air carrier certificate holders and certificated domestic and foreign repair stations concerning failures, malfunctions, and defects of aircraft, aircraft engines, systems, and components. The proposed rule would clarify and standardize the reporting requirements for the type of information submitted to the FAA, allowing the FAA to identify trends that may affect aviation safety. This action was prompted by an internal FAA review of industry concern over the quality of the data being reported by air carriers. The objective of the proposed rule is to update and improve the reporting system to effectively collect and disseminate clear and concise information, particularly with regard to aging aircraft, to the aviation industry.

Abstract: This rulemaking will establish noise limitations for certain aircraft operated in the vicinity of Grand Canyon National Park. This action is one part of an overall strategy to reduce further the impact of aircraft noise on the park environment and to assist the National Park Service (NPS) in achieving its statutory mandate imposed by Public Law 100-91 to provide for the substantial restoration of natural quiet and experience in Grand Canyon National Park. The supplemental amendment removes two sections from the December 31, 1996, notice of proposed rulemaking (NPRM) that proposed to establish a corridor through the National Canyon area as an incentive route for quiet technology aircraft. The FAA and NPS have determined not to proceed with an air tour route in the vicinity of National Canyon and are presently considering alternatives to this route. This rulemaking is significant because of substantial public interest.

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 25; 14 CFR 121; 14 CFR 135

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This action upgrades the fire safety standards for cargo or baggage compartments in certain transport category airplanes by eliminating Class D compartments altogether. Compartments that could no longer be designated as Class D would have to meet the standards for Class C or Class E compartments, as applicable. Certain other transport category airplanes that would not have to meet these new standards for type certification would have to meet them for use in air carrier, commuter, on-demand, or commercial service. These improved standards are needed to increase protection from possible in-flight fires. This rulemaking is considered significant because of the safety implications.

Abstract: This action sought public comment on issues relating to the use of child restraint systems in aircraft during all phases of flight (i.e., taxi, takeoff, landing, or any other time the seat belt sign is illuminated). Specifically, the agency sought information about existing child restraint systems, the development of new and improved child restraint systems, the ease with which existing or new child restraint systems can be used, and the effectiveness of changing the current child restraint system regulations. The advance notice gathered information in response to a recommendation made by the White House Commission on Aviation Safety and Security (Gore Commission). Approximately 130 comments were received on the ANPRM. This information is needed so that the FAA can determine the best way to ensure the safety of children while on board aircraft. After such a determination is made, the FAA may issue a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking with specific regulatory proposals that respond to the Commission's recommendations regarding the use of child restraint systems. This action is considered significant because of safety implications.

Abstract: This action amends parts 25, 121, and 135 of the Federal Aviation Regulations and adds new standards for transport category airplanes which would provide for approval of a reduced takeoff decision speed (V1) methodology for takeoff on wet and contaminated runways. As a result of extensive review and due to the increasing emphasis on harmonizing certification standards with the Joint Aviation Authorities (JAA) of Europe, the NPRM of 11/30/87 was withdrawn and a revised one published. Priority: Other Significant

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 25

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rulemaking revises the fatigue requirements for damage-tolerant structures on transport category airplanes to require full-scale fatigue testing and to require that the thresholds for inspections be based on crack growth from initial flaws in the structure. These changes are based on the service history of airplanes evaluated to the current damage tolerance requirements and are intended to ensure that, should serious fatigue damage occur within the operational life of the airplane, the remaining structure can withstand reasonable loads without failure until the damage is detected. This rulemaking is considered significant because of its safety implications and substantial public interest.

Abstract: This notice would have proposed to incorporate visual descent point (VDP) requirements into part 135 of the Federal Aviation Regulations (FAR). In addition, this notice would have amended the VDP requirements in part 121 of the FAR to be consistent with the VDP requirements in part 135 of the FAR. The FAA is terminating this rulemaking because resources are currently being expended for higher-priority projects.

Abstract: This final rule revises and updates the aviation insurance requirements. This action is being taken to reflect current legislative language, to be current with industry practices, to reflect industry concerns, and to recapture administrative expenses incurred. This action clarifies the language and makes it conform with the current legislative language and intent.

2462. RAIN AND HAIL INGESTION STANDARDS

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 106(g); 49 USC 40113; 49 USC 44701 to 44702; 49 USC 44704

CFR Citation: 14 CFR-33

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This action makes changes to the water and hail ingestion standards for aircraft turbine engines. This rulemaking addresses an engine power-loss instability phenomena attributed to operation in extreme rain or hail that is not adequately addressed by current requirements. This rule also harmonizes with requirements being drafted by the Joint Aviation Authorities (JAA). These changes will establish one set of common requirements, thereby reducing the hardship on the United States and worldwide aviation industry, by eliminating the need for manufacturers to comply with different sets of standards when seeking validation from the FAA and JAA.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 106(g); 49 USC 40113; 49 USC 44701 to 44702; 49 USC 44704

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rulemaking amends the requirements for landing gear braking on transport category airplanes to require that the airplane be designed to withstand main landing gear maximum braking forces during ground operations. This rule ensures that the landing gear and fuselage are capable of withstanding the dynamic loads associated with the maximum dynamic braking condition, and also relieves a burden on industry by eliminating differences between the Federal Aviation Regulations (FAR) and European Joint Aviation Requirements (JAR).

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 121; 14 CFR 135

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This action proposed to establish a requirement for two sets of approach charts to be available and used by the flight crewmembers during commercial operations under instrument flight rules (IFR). It responds to the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) finding (A-93-35) recommending that all pilots operating aircraft under 14 CFR parts 135 and 121 have access to their own set of instrument approach charts and use them during the approach and landing segment of the flight. This notice would have also standardize the requirement and rule language for both parts 121 and 135. Abstract: This final criteria issues a performance standard for the certification of equipment, designed to locate improvised explosive devices through automatic detection of detonators, as an Explosive Detection System (EDS). Establishment of minimum performance requirements is a prerequisite to the testing and ultimate deployment of EDS equipment. This action will include portions of the criteria that do not contain sensitive security information. The final criteria deal only with the standards for the certification of the equipment and any ultimate deployment decision would be the basis for separate rulemaking.

2468. +COMMERCIAL SPACE TRANSPORTATION: FINANCIAL RESPONSIBILITY REQUIREMENTS FOR LICENSED LAUNCH ACTIVITIES

Priority: Other Significant

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 70101 to 70119

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 440

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: Persons authorized to conduct commercial launch activities by a license issued by the Office of Commercial Space Transportation (OCST) are required to obtain insurance or demonstrate financial responsibility, in amounts and on terms prescribed by OCST, to protect against third-party or government property damage claims resulting from the licensed activities. Licensees and other launch participants are also required to enter into reciprocal waivers of claims arising out of licensed activities. In addition, persons engaged in commercial launch operations must provide proof of financial responsibility, or offer other assurances, adequate to protect the Government when its property or personnel are involved in such operations. This rulemaking codifies the procedures by which OCST sets appropriate levels and terms of insurance and financial responsibility required to be carried by persons subject to its authority. This action is significant because of substantial public interest.

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 135

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This proposed rule would have established both visual flight rules (VFR) and instrument flight rules (IFR) minimum fuel reserve requirements for airplanes upon arrival at any destination airport located on an island, if no alternate airport is specified. These minimum fuel requirements were not previously mandated in part 135 because they were not envisioned when the current part 135 was issued. This rule was being proposed because of the initiation of this type of operation to such an airport. The FAA is terminating this rulemaking because resources are currently being expended for higher priority projects.

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 108

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The FAA sought public comment on proposals to certificate screening companies (other than air carriers) by the FAA, and otherwise enhance the screening by air carriers of passengers and property that will be carried in the cabin of an aircraft, and of checked baggage. This advance notice responded to a recommendation made by the White House Commission on Aviation Safety and Security, and to a requirement in the Federal Aviation Authorization Act of 1996. It is intended to improve the screening of passengers, property, and baggage. The FAA is currently developing, field testing, and evaluating an automated screener testing system which will provide uniform data regarding screener performance. Therefore, the FAA has withdrawn the ANPRM to allow this automated system to be adequately field tested and evaluated before proceeding with rulemaking.

Abstract: This action proposed to amend two of the Flight-Free Zones within the Grand Canyon National Park by establishing two corridors: the Bright Angel route would be a route for quiet technology only; the National Canyon route would create a viable air tour route while addressing concerns expressed by Native Americans. The FAA, in consultation with the National Park Service, is withdrawing the May 1997 NPRM because the agencies have determined not to proceed with an air tour route in the vicinity of National Canyon and are presently considering alternatives to this route. The FAA will address all substantive comments filed in response to the NRM in the near future. This action is considered significant because of substantial public interest.

Abstract: This action prohibits flight operations within the territory and airspace of Sudan by any United States air carrier and commercial operator, by any person exercising the privileges of an airman certificate issued by the FAA, or by an operator using an aircraft registered in the United States unless the operator of such aircraft is a foreign air carrier. This action is necessary to prevent an undue hazard to persons and aircraft engaged in such flight operations as a result of increased tensions in Sudan. This action is significant because of substantial public interest.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 31136; 49 USC 31502

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 395

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: Current Federal Motor Carrier Safety Regulations limit the hours of service of commercial motor vehicle (CMV) drivers in order to reduce fatigue-related accidents. These regulations include substantial recordkeeping requirements to monitor drivers' hours of service. The Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) is considering ways to reduce the recordkeeping burden while maintaining or improving safety. The FHWA will focus on ways to reduce burdens on small entities. As part of this action, a small entities review under 5 USC section 610 will be included. This rulemaking is significant because of the broad industry impacts.

Abstract: The FHWA is initiating this action to consider whether to amend the definition of commercial motor vehicle in the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Regulations to make those safety regulations applicable to vehicles designed to transport less than 18 passengers including the driver. The Congress granted the authority to regulate such vehicles in the Interstate Commerce Commission Termination Act of 1995, but did not require the agency to exercise this authority.

Abstract: Revisions to the MUTCD are being done in phases due to the voluminous amount of text. This notice of proposed amendment is intended to revise the MUTCD to include a standard for a minimum level of retroreflectivity that must be maintained for traffic signs. This minimum level is to ensure that highway users can detect and read the sign during nighttime conditions. Although the MUTCD states that regulatory and warning signs, and some guide signs, need to reflectorized, no level of retroreflectivity is specified. In recognition of this situation, the United States Congress directed the U.S. Department of Transportation, through the 1993 Department of Transportation Appropriations Act, to revise the MUTCD to include a standard for minimum levels of retroreflectivity that must be maintained.

Abstract: In response to a petition for rulemaking filed by the American Trucking Association, Inc. (ATA) and the ATA Intermodal Conference (the petitioners), the FHWA agreed to consider revisions to the requirements in parts 390 and 396 of the Federal Motor Carrier Safety regulations (FMCSRs) that place upon motor carriers the responsibility for maintaining intermodal container chassis and trailers. These regulations provide the requirements for the inspection, repair and maintenance of commercial motor vehicles. This action is considered significant because of substantial public interest.

Abstract: The FHWA is proposing to amend its periodic inspection requirements for commercial motor vehicles operated in interstate commerce. The periodic inspection final rule was published on December 7, 1988, at 53 FR 49402, and amended on December 8, 1989, at 54 FR 50722. The December 8, 1989, amendment included a request for comments. In response to the comments received and requests for interpretations from the States and industry, the FHWA has determined that the rule should be amended to clarify the requirements for periodic inspection decals; evidence of the inspector's qualifications; the response time for a motor carrier to transmit a copy of a self-inspection report to an authorized Federal, State or local enforcement official; identity of the motor carrier or other entity offering a vehicle for inspection; and documentation of a State periodic inspection, including proof of inspection on vehicles. The FHWA is also proposing amendments concerning the inspection criteria for brake readjustment limits, brake lining thickness, coupling devices, steering mechanism, tires marked "Not for Highway Use", and regrooved tires on steering axles.

Abstract: The FHWA has reviewed the effectiveness and efficiency of the requirements in the Commercial Driver's License (CDL) program. Areas that may be addressed further include: (a) minimum licensing and information system standards for drivers learning to operate a commercial motor vehicle; and (b) increased flexibility in locations where drivers may obtain training and the final CDL. Other general issues under review include treatment of various types of violations (i.e. railroad grade crossings, serious traffic offenses, etc.) , defining terms, responsibilities when hiring new drivers, and processing information related to CDL convictions. Finally, there are issues specifically pertaining to the States under review, such as: (a) flexibility in States sharing test results to assist new drivers in the licensing process; (b) requirements for notification of the licensing State when a driver is convicted; (c) appropriate measures to be taken when a driver is found to be unqualified or disqualified according to Federal standards; and (d) adding a provision for enforcement of violations of an out-of-service order to State responsibilities in 49 CFR 384.

Abstract: The FHWA has resumed consideration of changes in the guidance provided to state agencies for preparing the annual size and weight enforcement plans and certifications. Previous efforts in this area were suspended by the agency in 1994 as a result of a commitment by the Federal Highway Administrator to Congress in June 1994 to conduct a comprehensive study of all aspects of the truck size and weight issue. That study is nearly completed. Accordingly, public comment is again requested on the type of information and data that should be submitted by the states in support of their annual certification of enforcement, and how the FHWA should use the information.

Abstract: Substantial changes in medical technology and the technology, operating practices, and economics of the motor carrier industry have affected the physical and mental demands on commercial motor vehicle (CMV) drivers and in turn, have rendered portions of the current medical examination form used to assess drivers' physical qualifications outdated, difficult to use, or irrelevant. This rulemaking action proposes to redesign the existing medical examination form and to amend the examination procedures to reflect the latest medical and technological advances.

The Department has initiated a rulemaking on the need to require training of all entry-level drivers of commercial motor vehicles. The agency has submitted a report to Congress (02/05/96) on the effectiveness of private sector efforts to ensure adequate training of all entry-level drivers. This report included a cost-benefit study of requiring training of entry-level drivers. Public comments have been solicited on the report. CFR Citation: 49 CFR 391; 49 CFR 383; 49 CFR 1.48; 49 CFR 391.11; 49 CFR 391.45

Abstract: The FHWA is proposing to include the certification of fitness to operate a CMV in the commercial driver's license (CDL) process. Incorporating the commercial driver fitness determination into State--administered CDL procedures could allow elimination of the requirement that CMV drivers carry a separate medical certificate. The CDL would be evidence that the CMV driver is physically fit as well as operationally qualified to operate CMVs safely. This action addresses the driver's physical qualifications as they relate to the CDL process; it does not address whether those standards are correct or should be changed. The FHWA has determined that the negotiated rulemaking process will be used to develop regulations governing the proposed merger of the State-administered CDL procedures and the driver physical qualifications requirements. This action is significant due to anticipated substantial public interest.

Abstract: The Federal Highway Administration and the Federal Transit Administration have a joint environmental regulation at 23 CFR 771, "Environmental Impact and Related Procedures." Nevertheless, each agency's guidance for implementing those regulations is procedurally different. This causes difficulties and inconsistencies for sponsors of transportation projects, particularly where joint FHWA and FTA funds are involved. In the ISTEA, the Congress recognized the importance of providing uniformity and consistency between FHWA and FTA environmental procedures. This is needed to accommodate the increased funding flexibility for surface transportation provided by ISTEA. Because of an increased emphasis on intermodal planning and proposals to advance a high speed rail program, the proposed, new joint regulations will include the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA) and the United States Coast Guard (USCG) bridge permit program. Section 134(h)(4) of title 23, United States Code and section 8(h)(4) of the Federal Transit Act, as amended, direct the Secretary of Transportation to initiate a rulemaking proceeding to conform review requirements for transit projects under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 to comparable requirements for highway projects. This action is considered significant because of potential public, congressional and environmental concerns and because it involves several interested departmental modes.

Abstract: The FHWA proposes to amend its rules of practice for motor carrier safety, hazardous materials, and other enforcement proceedings, motor carrier safety ratings, driver qualification proceedings and its schedule of penalties for violations of the FMCSRs and the Hazardous Materials Regulations. The FHWA further proposes to add provisions on investigative authority and procedures and general motor carrier responsibilities. Abstract: The FHWA is proposing to prohibit operators of commercial motor vehicles from driving onto a railroad grade crossing unless there is sufficient space to drive completely through the crossing without stopping. The intent of this action is to reduce the incidence of collisions between trains and CMVs. This action is required by the Hazardous Materials Transportation Authorization Act of 1994 (PL 103-311; sec. 112). This action is considered significant because of substantial public interest

Abstract: The FHWA proposed to amend the provision of the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Regulations (FMCSRs) concerning television viewers or screens in commercial motor vehicles. The FHWA is concerned that the current restrictions on the locations of such devices may have the unintended effect of discouraging the use of certain Intelligent Transportation System (ITS) technologies such as collision avoidance and traveler information systems which could improve the safety and efficiency of commercial vehicle operations. In response to comments to the April 3, 1993, notice of proposed rulemaking (61 FR 14733) to rescind the regulation concerning television viewers or screens, the FHWA is considering an SNPRM to propose retaining an explicit prohibition against television viewers or screens but revising the regulation to ensure that it does not impede the development and use of ITS-related technologies.

Abstract: This action proposes requiring all filings of surety bonds, trust fund agreements, insurance certificates and cancellations of these instruments to be accomplished electronically. Optional electronic filing has proven economical and efficient for both the FHWA and for electronic filers. Given this success, cost of processing paper filings can no longer be justified. Mandatory electronic filings should not impose any significant costs or burdens on either the FHWA or the filers.

Abstract: The FHWA is considering proposing amendments to its regulations concerning cargo securement requirements for commercial motor vehicles engaged in interstate commerce. The FHWA intends to consider adopting new cargo securement guidelines that will be based upon the results of a multi-year comprehensive research program to evaluate current regulations and industry practices. The FHWA is also requesting comments on the process to be used in developing these preliminary cargo securement guidelines. The FHWA recently completed work on this research program with the Canadian Council of Motor Transport Administrators (CCMTA), State and Provincial agencies responsible for motor carrier safety activities, the Commercial Vehicle Safety Alliance (CVSA), and U.S. and Canadian industry groups.

Abstract: This action proposes to amend the regulations governing qualifications for motor carriers that seek authorization to self-insure their transportation operations. Also, the FHWA is proposing technical amendments necessitated by the ICC Termination Act of 1995 (Pub. L. 104-88), which transferred the ICC's authority to qualify motor carriers as self-insurers to DOT. The agency is also requesting comments regarding the need for additional backup collateral or security to protect the public against uncompensated losses. The FHWA believes that this will be a significant regulatory action because of substantial congressional and public interest in the insurance requirements for motor carriers.

Abstract: In this action, the FHWA is proposing to clarify its rule incorporating certain exemptions from the hours-of-service and commercial driver's license requirements of the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Regulations, created by section 345 of the National Highway System Designation Act of 1995.

The FHWA is also proposing a monitoring program to measure the safety impact of the exemptions. The FHWA would use information obtained from the monitoring program to determine whether the exemptions granted in the NHS Act should be modified or revoked under the standard provided in the authorizing legislation. The FHWA requests comment on the public interest and safety impacts of the exemptions, as well as in the proposed monitoring program.

The final rule that incorporated the exemptions created by section 345 of the NHS Act was issued under RIN 2125-AD83, 4/3/96 (61 FR 14677).

This action is significant because of substantial public interest.

Abstract: This action is proposing to amend FHWA regulations to require application of Intelligent Transportation System (ITS) Standards for ITS projects using Federal-aid highway funds. In the ISTEA of 1991, Congress directed the Department to develop and implement standards and protocols to promote widespread use of ITS. The proposed regulations will apply ITS standards to ITS systems, subsystems, devices, equipment and software to be acquired with Federal-aid highway funds, including ITS funds. Abstract: The FHWA has initiated this rulemaking to evaluate the need to revise the FHWA's regulation pertaining to the $500,000 threshold established to distinguish between heavy maintenance or routine emergency repair and serious damage, which is used as one of the criteria to qualify a disaster under the FHWA emergency relief program for repair of Federal-aid highways. The FHWA has published an ANPRM with the intention of generating discussion and comments on the appropriateness of the current threshold value as well as any additional options regarding establishment of a disaster eligibility threshold. An NPRM is scheduled to be published proposing to increase the threshold to $700,000.

Abstract: Section 403 of the ICC Termination Act of 1995 (ICCTA) requires the FHWA to issue regulations specifying that commercial motor vehicle drivers who are convicted of violating railroad-highway grade crossing laws or regulations must be disqualified from operating a CMV. The ICCTA also requires that penalties be assessed against employers found to have knowingly allowed, permitted, authorized, or required an employee to operate a CMV in violation of a law or regulation pertaining to railroad-highway grade crossings. This rulemaking proposes disincentives for drivers and motor carriers from engaging in such dangerous operating practices. Such disincentives would include long periods (60 to 120 days) of disqualification from operating CMVs for drivers and monetary fines for employers.

Abstract: The FHWA is proposing to amend its regulations on traffic safety in highway and street work zones. Section 1051 of the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 (ISTEA) requires the Secretary of Transportation (Secretary) to develop and implement a highway work zone safety program which would improve work zone safety at highway construction sites. This action is necessary to update the existing regulation, clarify the current policy, and emphasize important issues affecting the safety of highway workers and highway users. This action proposes to transfer and redesignate the regulations currently found in 23 CFR part 630, subpart J, to a new part 636.

Abstract: The FHWA is proposing to amend the regulations governing the transportation of household goods. These regulations protect consumers who ship household goods by motor vehicle. This action is necessary to implement the ICC Termination Act of 1995, (ICCTA), Pub. L. 104-88, 109 Stat. 803, and to update the regulations. The intended effect of this proposal is to make the regulations easier to read and understand, remove an outdated report, address hostage freight problems (situations where non-binding estimates are lower than actual charges and the carrier refuses to deliver freight even after 110 percent of the estimate is paid at the time of delivery), modify a consumer protection publication, consider industry requests to change the rules, and propose conforming and technical amendments.

Abstract: This action seeks public comment on the "North American Uniform Out-of-Service Criteria" (OOS Criteria). During roadside inspections, Federal, State, and local safety inspectors use the OOS Criteria as a guide in determining whether to place commercial motor vehicles (CMVs), or their drivers, "out of service." Such a status means that the CMVs or drivers are so unsafe that corrections must be undertaken before operations can resume. The FHWA is seeking public comment on the future scope and effect

Abstract: The FHWA published a final rule of RIN 2125-AC71 at 62 FR 60035 on November 6, 1997, which incorporated the safety fitness rating methodology (SFRM) into 49 CFR 385 as appendix B. In that document the FHWA identified its ultimate goal as creating a more performance-based means of determining the fitness of carriers to conduct commercial motor vehicle (CMV) operations in interstate commerce. The Final Rule announced that the FHWA would publish an ANPRM shortly which would request comments on the future of a rating system that could be used both in making safety fitness determinations and meeting the demands of shippers, insurers and other present and potential users interested in evaluating motor carrier performance. Accordingly, at this time, the FHWA is seeking comments in this action and supporting data on the future of a rating system.

Abstract: The FHWA is proposing to revise its regulations dealing with the identification and marking of commercial motor vehicles (CMVs). Five changes are being proposed which would: (1) Apply the marking requirements to all CMVs operated in interstate commerce, including those common and contract motor carriers of property or passengers formerly authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC); (2) require motor carriers to mark both sides of each CMV with a specific legal name or name under which it does business (DBA name); (3) require motor carriers to mark each CMV with the city and State of its principal place of business; (4) require all new motor carriers to file Form MCS-150 before beginning operations; and (5) move sec. 385.23 and the appendix to part 385 to a new section in part 390. The States would also be allowed and encouraged to use United States Department of Transportation (USDOT) identification numbers to identify intrastate motor carriers. The proposed changes would improve the identification of motor carriers and CMVs, aid enforcement, and enhance data collection and analysis.

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: Based on the National Highway System (NHS) Designation Act of 1995, the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) no longer requires metric legends on highway signs. After FY 1996, if a State desires to install metric legend signs, the FHWA will not restrict the use of Federal-aid funds. The NHS Designation Act also revises the Metric Conversion Policy to extend the compliance date to September 30, 2000, for having plans, specifications, and estimates (PS&Es) in metric units (prior to September 30, 1996). It is the intent of this rulemaking action to assure that those States and other FHWA partners desiring to convert to metric units will have available a source for formulating their plans in a consistent manner. Therefore, the FHWA is adopting the following two American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials (AASHTO) publications as its policy for metric conversion: "Guide to Metric Conversion" and "Traffic Engineering Metric Conversion Factors." The FHWA has determined that the interim metric values selected by the AASHTO documents are functionally equivalent to English system measurements previously adopted by notice and comment rulemaking.

Abstract: The Manual on Uniform Traffic Control Devices (MUTCD) is incorporated by reference in 23 CFR part 655, subpart F, and recognized as the national standard for traffic control on all public roads. The DOT and Related Agencies Appropriations Act of 1992, Pub. L. 102-388, sec. 406, requires that the MUTCD include a national standard to define the roads that must have center line or edge line markings or both. The MUTCD amendments proposed in this action

Legal Authority: 23 USC 103(b); 23 USC 103(c); 23 USC 315

CFR Citation: 23 CFR 470

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This regulatory action amends 23 CFR 470 in accordance with legislation enacted in 1991 and 1995. The Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 (ISTEA) rescinded the Federal-aid Primary and Secondary and Urban Systems; established an interim National Highway System (NHS); and defined Federal-aid highways. The NHS Designation Act of 1995 (NHS Act) authorized the initial National Highway System and also authorized the Secretary to approve modifications. The action also consolidates in appendices all nonregulatory guidance material issued previously by the FHWA on Federal-aid highway systems.

Additional Information: The FHWA issued an interim final rule with an opportunity for public comment. The FHWA believes that prior notice and opportunity for comment were unnecessary within the meaning of 5 U.S.C. 553(b)(3)(B) because this rule amends existing regulations in accordance with the requirements of the ISTEA and the NHS Act and will simplify administrative procedures, minimize regulatory burdens, and provide flexibility for accomplishing required system actions. This rule amends regulations that the states comply with as part of the Federal-aid highway program. The FHWA has worked closely with the States, and the States have operated under the basic policies covered by this regulation for many years. A number of technical revisions may be required as a result of the recodification of 23 U.S.C. 103 in the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century.

CFR Citation: 23 CFR 777; 49 CFR 1.48(b)

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: Revision to the existing rule will bring FHWA's wetland mitigation policies and requirements into full agreement with the provisions of ISTEA section 1007(b)(11) and section 1006(1)(13). In addition, the revised rule will reflect recent policy issued by the Corps of Engineers and EPA on wetland mitigation banking. FHWA internal policy development on wetland mitigation is also indicated by the proposed revision.

Abstract: The FHWA proposes to amend its regulations on railroad highway projects. The proposed amendments would require railroads to submit final billings within one year following completion of work, delete the requirements of a State's certification that work was completed, increase the ceiling for lump sum agreements from $25,000 to $100,000 and incorporate changes brought about by ISTEA. The FHWA proposes these changes to conform railroad/highway regulations to more recent laws or regulations, and provide State highway agencies clarification and more flexibility in implementing them.

Abstract: This action governs registration of for-hire motor property and passenger carriers, property brokers, and freight forwarders. This action is required by 49 USC 13901 to 13905, which mandates that a registration system be administered by the Secretary of Transportation to replace the former Interstate Commerce Commission's licensing system for motor carriers, property brokers, and freight forwarders. The registration system prescribed in 49 USC 13901 to 13905 is intended to be a temporary and stand-alone procedure while the FHWA undertakes to design and implement the revised system through the 49 USC 13908 rulemaking mandated by Congress to be completed by January 1, 1998.

Abstract: In this action, the FHWA proposes to amend the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Regulations (FMCSRs) to require that certain trailers and semitrailers with a gross vehicle weight rating (GVWR) greater than 10,000 pounds and manufactured on or after January 26, 1998, be equipped with rear impact guards and meet the requirements of Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standard (FMVSS) No. 223. This action is intended to ensure that the rear impact protection requirements of the FMCSRs are consistent with the FMVSSs and to improve the safety of operation of commercial motor vehicles by reducing the incidence of underride accidents in which the rear end of the trailer strikes and enters the passenger compartment.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 31 USC 9701; 49 USC 13908(c)

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 360; 49 CFR 1.48

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This final rule adopts filing fees and fee collection regulations for the motor carrier registration and insurance functions transferred to the FHWA as a result of the enactment of the ICC Termination Act of 1995. The FHWA believes that prior notice and opportunity for comment are unnecessary under 5 USC 553(b)(3)(B). The FHWA is not exercising discretion in a way that could be meaningfully affected by public comments. In this action, the ICC's filing fee regulations related to the motor carrier functions transferred to the FHWA are being recodified as FHWA regulations. The FHWA has concluded that it is in the public interest to implement the transfer of the fee regulations as expeditiously as possible to ensure that there is no disruption of the involved motor carrier activities. The effect of this rule is to make these fees and regulations applicable to registration and insurance filings made with the FHWA.

Abstract: The FHWA is considering revising the driver qualification requirements to allow certain insulin-using diabetics to operate commercial motor vehicles in interstate commerce. The FHWA issued a final disposition accepting waiver applications under certain conditions. The deadline for submitting applications was April 30, 1994. The waiver program ended March 31, 1996. It was instituted to permit the FHWA to observe and collect data on the driving experience of a group of insulin-using drivers. This action is considered significant because of substantial public interest.

Additional Information: Under RIN 2125-AD73, the FHWA adopted a final rule to allow drivers holding valid waivers from both the vision and diabetes standards to continue to operate in interstate commerce after March 31, 1996. See 61 FR 606 (Jan. 8, 1996) (notice of proposed rulemaking); 61 FR 13338 (March 26, 1996) (final rule); 61 FR 17253 (April 19, 1996) (final rule; technical correction). With the closing of the diabetes waiver study (03-31-96), no definitive empirical results were produced. Therefore, the FHWA initiated a retrospective case-referent study to assess the level of risk associated with the operation of commercial motor vehicles by insulin-using diabetic drivers. This is not a waiver study. Further rulemaking on diabetes is deferred until the completion of the retrospective case-referent study (12-31-98).

Abstract: This action was initiated to improve identification systems for truck and bus drivers as identified by the Congress in the Truck and Bus Regulatory Reform Act of 1988. Alternatives that were considered included retinal eye scans and advanced fingerprint technologies. After (1) further review, (2) a careful analysis of public comments submitted to the ANPRM, and (3) a review of demonstration project results, the FHWA has determined that current technology has not progressed to the point where an identification system could be established nationwide in a cost-effective manner and still provide the benefits for which a system was intended. Therefore, the FHWA has published an informational notice to summarize the results of the pilot study and the comments to the ANPRM to demonstrate how the technologies studied fall short of the demands in a commercial licensing environment. Additional studies are being conducted to assess the current state of the art of technology in biometric identification systems. The public docket will remain open while this research is being conducted. This project is considered significant because of substantial public interest.

Abstract: The FHWA requested public comment on how, under section 411(h) and 416(b) of the Surface Transportation Act of 1982 (STA) (PL 97-424, 96 Stat. 2097), the Secretary may determine which safety or efficiency-enhancing devices are to be excluded when measuring the length and width of vehicles for compliance with federally mandated dimensions. The present system of employing rulemaking proceedings is too time-consuming and cumbersome to meet the needs of industry and is needlessly burdensome for FHWA. Abstract: As part of a review of the medical qualification standards applicable to interstate CMV drivers, the FHWA requested comments on the need, if any, to amend its driver qualification requirements relating to the vision standard. A temporary waiver program was initiated and was concluded on March 31, 1996, to permit the FHWA to observe and collect data on the driving experience of a group of vision--deficient drivers who meet certain preconditions. Additionally, the FHWA considered further research to develop comprehensive performance-based visual standards for all commercial drivers. Information about the proposed research plan and public hearing on the subject was published in the Federal Register on June 5, 1996, at 61 FR 28547. The FHWA has awarded a contract with a medical center to develop medically-based recommendations for amending the current Federal vision requirements. Recommendations are to be delivered by September, 1998. These recommendations will be evaluated and considered in deciding what, if any, further proposals should be made concerning the vision standard.

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 5105; 49 USC 5109

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 390.3; 49 CFR 397; 49 CFR 1.48

Legal Deadline:
Final, Statutory, November 15, 1991.

Abstract: This rulemaking will implement the statutory requirements of 49 USC 5109 and 49 USC 5105. Section 5109 addresses the establishment of motor carrier safety permit regulations for motor carriers transporting Class A or B explosives, liquefied natural gases, hazardous materials designated as extremely toxic by inhalation, or highway route controlled quantity radioactive materials. Section 5105 requires inspection of vehicles transporting those radioactive materials before each trip. The proposed rule will incorporate those provisions into the safety permit regulations. This action is considered significant because of substantial public and congressional interest and safety implications.

Abstract: FHWA is considering amending its driver qualification requirements relating to the hearing standard found at 49 CFR 391.41(b)(11). FHWA believes that a review of the standard is necessary to assess the effect advances in medical science and technology may have on the standard. Such advances may lead to amending the current standard. The FHWA published an ANPRM (FHWA Docket No. MC-93-30) seeking comment on the hearing standard. This action is considered significant because of substantial public interest.

Additional Information: A related notice regarding possible waivers was published at 58 FR 65638 (Dec. 15, 1993). The FHWA has decided not to issue waivers in light of the recent decision of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the DC Circuit in Advocates for Highway and Auto Safety v. the Federal Highway Administration, No. 92-1411, August 2, 1994. In that case, the FHWA rule allowing commercial drivers with impaired vision in one eye to apply for waivers from the Federal vision standard was struck down because the Court of Appeals held that the agency lacked the data necessary to support its determination that the vision waiver program "is consistent with the safe operation of commercial motor vehicles." The FHWA initiated research in FY 1995 to determine if the hearing requirement is necessary and if so, what criteria it should encompass in relationship to driving tasks. The research was completed in August 1997 and the FHWA is not amending the current hearing standard at this time.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 23 USC 131; 23 USC 315; 49 USC 1651

CFR Citation: 23 CFR 750

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The revision of these subparts will reduce their complexity, recognize the existence of State laws, regulations, and organizations implementing 23 USC 131, and emphasize the position of the State as the initial, primary, and principal focal point regarding the requirement of effective control. Potential costs should be reduced, albeit minimally. The principal benefit will be to give the States greater ability, in the context of the broad requirements of 23 USC 131, to respond to concepts and issues relevant to the States. We have been reviewing these regulations with the intent to focus on changes necessitated by ISTEA. We are continuing this review in order to be able to accommodate additions or changes effected by reauthorization of ISTEA.

Final, Statutory, February 1996.

Abstract: A record of duty status (49 CFR 395.8) is required to be prepared for each day a driver operates a commercial motor vehicle in interstate commerce. All motor carriers are required to maintain the record of duty status for at least 6 months along with all documents that support the accuracy of the record of duty status (sec. 395.8(k)). The Hazardous Materials Transportation Authorization Act of 1994 (Pub. L. 103-311) mandates the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) to specify what documents must be maintained to support the accuracy of the record of duty status. This rule will implement the statutory mandate that requires the agency to describe the type of supporting documents to be generated and maintained, as well as specify the quantity and length of time to maintain the supporting documents.

Abstract: The current regulation is little changed from the original rule adopted in 1936. The American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) has written to the Department asserting that the regulation, as written, is overly broad and subject to arbitrary enforcement, causing potential interference with constitutional guarantees of due process and equal protection. The ACLU requested an opportunity to submit a comprehensive analysis of this issue. This ANPRM is intended to provide the ACLU with such an opportunity and to open this issue for public comment. The FHWA seeks to modify its current regulation to require drivers to possess the basic functional communication/comprehension ability necessary to ensure safety, consistent with applicable law.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 31136; 49 USC 31502

Abstract: The FHWA amended the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Regulations (FMCSRs) to require that air-braked truck tractors manufactured on or after March 1, 1997, and air-braked single-unit trucks, buses, trailers, and converter dollies manufactured on or after March 1, 1998, be equipped with antilock brake systems (ABSs) that meet the requirements of Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standard (FMVSS) No. 121. The FHWA also required that hydraulic braked trucks and buses manufactured on or after March 1, 1999, be equipped with ABSs that meet the requirements of FMVSS No. 105. This rulemaking ensures that the in-service brake standards of the FMCSRs are consistent with the FMVSSs and to improve the safety of operation of commercial motor vehicles (CMVs) by reducing the incidence of accidents caused by jackknifing and other losses of directional stability and control during braking. With regard to CMVs manufactured prior to the dates previously mentioned, the FHWA is not requiring that motor carriers be required to retrofit such vehicles with ABSs.

Abstract: This amendment expedites traffic, improves safety, and provides a more uniform application of highway signs, signals, and markings. Pedestrian-motor vehicle and bicycle-motor vehicle crashes are serious problems in the United States. A total of 5,412 pedestrians were reported killed and another 82,000 were injured in motor vehicle crashes in 1996. An estimated 761 bicyclists were killed and another 59,000 were injured in motor vehicle crashes in 1996. The DOT Secretarial Initiative for Pedestrian and Bicycle Safety is a new effort to promote walking and bicycling as safe, healthy, and efficient ways to travel. The Secretarial Initiative will attempt, among other things, to reduce by 10 percent, by the year 2000, the number of injuries and fatalities occurring to pedestrians and bicyclists.

After consideration of all the comments received in response to its notice of proposed amendment, the FHWA believes that the permissive use of fluorescent yellow green color will promote safety while providing to State and local governments the flexibility necessary to enable them to adequately address their own situations. This rulemaking will permit States and local governments to use, as an option, the new color, fluorescent yellow green, that appears to improve the visibility of important warning signs and to improve safety at locations where they are used.

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This document makes technical amendments to the authority statements for various FHWA motor carrier regulations in order to remove the obsolete authority citations provided in the subparts. This correction is necessary due to changes required by the ICC Termination Act of 1995 (ICCTA) and the transfer of certain regulatory functions to the FHWA from the former Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC). The effect of these amendments is to remove the outdated authority citations listed in the subparts.

Abstract: Standard 108 requires passenger cars sold after October 1, 1985, to be equipped with center high-mounted stop lamps (CHMSLs). NHTSA undertook a staff evaluation of the safety effectiveness, benefits, and cost of CHMSLs. A preliminary report was published in March 1987, an interim report in August 1989, and a final report in April 1998. NHTSA plans to issue a summary of the comments it received on the final report in October 1998.

Abstract: This review involves analysis of the incident rates and costs of odometer fraud and an assessment of State and Federal efforts to combat odometer fraud. To complete this review, the agency has requested permission to collect a sample of odometer readings of registered passenger cars that are less than 10 years old from vehicle dealers, distributors, vehicle title files, and State Department of Motor Vehicle agencies. Congress has directed the agency to conduct this review.

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 541

Legal Deadline:
Other, Statutory, October 25, 1997, The Anti Car Theft Act of 1992 was enacted on October 25 1992.

Abstract: The standard requires certain passenger motor vehicles to have identifying numbers or symbols to be placed on major parts to reduce the incidence of motor vehicle thefts by facilitating the tracking and recovering of parts from stolen vehicles. Five years after enactment of the Anti Car Theft Act of 1992, the Secretary of Transportation shall submit to Congress a report on the effects of the standard on motor vehicle thefts and recoveries. The agency seeks public review and comment on this preliminary report prior to its submission to Congress. The report does not contain recommendations at this time. The department will develop recommendations after a review of public comments.

Additional Information: The preliminary report indicated that theft rates, which increased during the 1980's, leveled off or even began to decline after 1989-90. Recovery rates changed little during 1984-95. Preliminary indications are that parts marking and anti-theft devices have had beneficial effects on auto thefts and/or recoveries. The provisions of the 1984 and 1992 Theft Acts along with parts marking and anti-theft devices have given law enforcement tools to deter thefts, trace stolen vehicles and parts, and apprehend and convict thieves.

Abstract: With a Supplemental Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (SNPRM), the agency proposes to establish two new safety standards specifying requirements for platform lifts and for buses and multipurpose passenger vehicles equipped with such lifts. The equipment standard would set minimum platform dimensions and would limit the size of platform protrusions and gaps between the platform and either the vehicle floor or the ground. The standard would also require handrails, warning signals and retaining barriers. The proposed vehicle standard would require vehicle manufacturers to install lifts in accordance with the lift manufacturer's instructions and ensure that specific information is made available to lift users. The standards are intended to prevent injuries and fatalities during lift operation and to promote uniformity of Federal standards and guidelines for platform lifts. This action is considered significant due to substantial public interest in transportation of individuals with disabilities.

Abstract: The proposed rule would implement an amendment to 49 USC Chapter 301 which prohibits dealers from selling motor vehicles or motor vehicle equipment that have been determined to contain a safety-related defect or noncompliance with a Federal motor vehicle safety standard until the defect or noncompliance is remedied. It would set forth criteria to govern the timing and content of notifications of defects and noncompliances that manufacturers must send to their dealers. Given the length of time that has passed since issuance of the NPRM (9/27/93), the agency is issuing a supplemental notice of proposed rulemaking to provide an opportunity for additional public comment on the most appropriate regulatory scheme for notifying dealers of safety-related defects and noncompliances with Federal motor vehicle safety standards.

Abstract: The agency is proposing to rewrite the sections relating to headlighting. The rewrite is important because of the standard's age and numerous amendments which have made it difficult to read and interpret. The revised standard should reduce burden especially to small manufacturers because of improved clarity. The reorganization of the sections relating to other lamps will be addressed in a separate rulemaking.

Abstract: Based upon annual average estimates from the 1988 through 1996 Fatal Analysis Reporting System (FARS) and the National Automotive Sampling System (NASS), there is an annual average of 2,515 fatalities and 1,882 serious injuries due to door ejections. Side door ejections are the second leading cause of ejections in all crashes, superseded only by ejections through fixed glazing. One of the activities of agency rollover research focuses on reducing injuries and fatalities resulting from side door ejections. This research has led the agency to potential significant solutions to mitigating a substantial number of these fatalities and injuries by improving side door retention performance. Therefore, the agency is proposing to upgrade the door retention requirements.

Abstract: In response to the President's regulatory reinvention initiative, the agency is proposing to rewrite the reflective devices and associated equipment requirements to make the standard more readable and understandable. The standard has grown over the last 30 years by the incorporation of hundreds of amendments. The document has become unwieldy in use and the agency decided to rewrite it to segregate it into chapters that address each lighting function separately. These sections will state the basic performance necessary for each lighting function and for lamp installation on various vehicle types. The rewrite will continue to reference Society of Automotive Engineers (SAE) and other standards and recommended practices for test procedures if too lengthy to incorporate changes. However, it will codify various agency interpretations of its rules to make the standard more explicit and objective. The administrative rewrite of the headlamp

Abstract: In response to NTSB recommendations on body joint strength and maintenance access panels as well as the agency's own analyses, this rulemaking action improves the test requirements and test procedures for the body joints of school buses and limits the number and size of maintenance access panels that are excluded from the requirements of the standard. The agency believes that this rule will prevent 26-35 AIS 3 injuries per year when fully implemented. This rulemaking is considered significant because of substantial public and congressional interest.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 32901; 49 USC 32905; 49 USC 32906

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 538

Abstract: After reviewing comments received in response to the September 22, 1994 (59 FR 48589) notice, the agency will set the minimum driving range only for dual fueled electric passenger automobiles, otherwise known as hybrid electric vehicles (HEVs), at 7.5 miles on the EPA highway cycle and 10.2 miles on the EPA city cycle when operating on electricity alone. The purpose of establishing the range is to meet a statutory requirement intended to encourage the production of HEVs. An HEV which meets the range requirement would qualify to have its fuel economy calculated according to a special procedure that would facilitate the efforts of its manufacturer to comply with the corporate average fuel economy standard. The agency has also proposed to establish a procedure through which manufacturers of HEVs that do not meet the minimum driving range requirements may petition the agency for relief.

Abstract: In response to the President's regulatory reinvention initiative, the agency is proposing to remove obsolete reporting requirements. These submission requirements include factors such as "breakover angles" for light trucks, which are essentially never used by NHTSA. Revising this part would reduce the costs to the industry of reporting to NHTSA and could be reduced without substantially affecting NHTSA's legitimate data needs.

Abstract: In response to several petitions for rulemaking, the agency is proposing to require that motor vehicles and add-on child restraints be equipped with a means independent of vehicle safety belts for securing the child restraints to vehicle seats. The adoption of the proposal would avoid problems of incompatibility between child restraints and vehicle safety belts and increase the correct installation of child restraints. By reducing allowable head excursion, this proposal would have the effect of requiring child restraints to be equipped with an upper tether strap, and would require vehicles to have two factory-installed, user-ready anchor points for attaching the tether. It would also require vehicles to have a rear vehicle seating position equipped with a specialized lower anchorage system, and require child restraints to be equipped with means of attaching to that system. This action is considered significant because of public interest. Petitions were granted.

Abstract: The agency is proposing to amend the vehicle certification regulation that specifies the contents of certification labels that manufacturers are required to affix to new motor vehicles. The amendment would require the certification label for multipurpose passenger vehicles and trucks with a gross vehicle weight rating of not more than 6,000 pounds to specify that the vehicle complies with all applicable Federal motor vehicle safety and theft prevention standards. The current regulation only requires a statement of compliance with safety standards. The Anti Car Theft Act of 1992 extended the theft prevention standard to multipurpose passenger vehicles and trucks rated at not more than 6,000 pounds.

Abstract: In response to a petition for rulemaking, the agency is proposing to eliminate the requirement that new car manufacturers provide their dealers consumer information on the tire grading of new car tires. This action will allevlate a paperwork burden on automobile manufacturers and dealers that has little benefit to consumers.

2615. TRANSITION PROCEDURES FROM CURRENT TO NEW NATIONAL DRIVER REGISTER

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will eliminate existing text in the CFR.

Legal Authority: 23 USC 401

CFR Citation: 23 CFR 1325

Legal Deadline:
Final, Statutory, February 6, 1997.

Abstract: In response to the President's Regulatory Reinvention Initiative, the agency is removing the regulation on procedures for transition to the National Driver Register (NDR). It is also amending portions of the regulation on participation in the NDR Problem Driver Pointer System (PDPS). These portions pertain to the steps States were to follow to notify the NDR of their interest in participating in the NDR under PDPS. The agency will remove these provisions when the transition to the new NDR has been completed.

Abstract: The agency is proposing design and performance specifications for a new, more advanced 6-year old child dummy. The agency believes that the new dummy, part of the family of Hybrid III test dummies, is more representative of humans than the existing 6-year old child dummy specified by the agency and allows the assessment of more types of potential injuries. The new dummy is especially needed to evaluate the effects of air bag deployment on children, but would also provide greater and more useful information in a variety of environments to better evaluate child safety.

Abstract: The agency is proposing to amend the lighting standard to reduce glare from daytime running lamps (DRLs). It would do this in three stages. One year after publication of the final rule, DRLs utilizing the upper headlamp beam would not be permitted to exceed 3,000 candela (cd) at any point, thus becoming subject to the maximum candela permitted for DRLs other than headlamps. This same limit would be applied to the upper half of lower beam DRLs two years after publication of the final rule. Finally, four years after publication of the final rule, all DRLs, except lower beam DRLs, would be subject to a flat 1,500 cd limit. Lower beam DRLs would be limited to 1,500 cd at horizontal or above. This action is intended to provide the public with all the conspicuity benefits of DRLs while reducing glare and is based on research that has become available since the final rule establishing DRLs was published in 1993.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 32904

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 531

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: Provisions of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) Implementation Act of 1993 modified the calculation of average fuel economy by permitting Mexican content of passenger cars to be included with United States and Canadian content. This was for assigning passenger cars to domestic or import fleets for computation of corporate average fuel economy (CAFE). The revision of the code permits the declaration of Mexican content to occur during the period January 1, 1997, through January 1, 2004, at the manufacturers' option. This rulemaking provides instructions on making the Abstract: The agency proposes to update its lists in appendices A, B, and C of part 544 of passenger motor vehicle insurers that are required to file reports on their motor vehicle theft loss experience. If these revised appendices are adopted in a final rule, each insurer included in any of these appendices must file a report for the 1995 calendar year not later than October 25, 1998. Abstract: The agency is amending the final rule that was published March 19, 1997 (RIN 2127-AG59) that allows the depowering of air bags. This technical amendment clarifies that: (1) the "corridor" defining the permissible range of acceleration with respect to time can itself be shifted with respect to time to contain the time at which the sled acceleration first reaches 0.5 g; (2) the neck injury criteria for flexion bending moment and extension bending moment are intended to be measured by the six axis load cell and corrected to reflect the corresponding values at the occipital condyles; and (3) prior to testing the engine, transmission, axles, exhaust, vehicle frame, and vehicle body should be rigidly secured and adequately attached to the vehicle and/or the sled. Fluids, batteries and unsecured components may be removed.

Abstract: In a final rule published September 30, 1997 (62 FR 51064 - RIN 2127-AG35), the agency extended the applicability of Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standard No. 135, Passenger Car Brake Systems, to light trucks and vans (LTVs) with a gross vehicle weight rating (GVWR) of 3,500 kg or less. The rule also stated that the agency would publish a separate notice addressing the appropriateness of extending the requirements of Standard No. 135 to LTVs with a GVWR between 3,500 and 4,536 kg. After reviewing additional brake test data designed to assess the performance of vehicles with the increased GVWR, however, the agency has decided to withdraw rulemaking. Safety benefits resulting from extending the application of Standard No. 135 to LTVs with GVWRs between 3,501 and 4,536 kg are questionable and would be further limited by substantial costs to manufacturers and by low sales volumes.

Abstract: The agency granted a petition for rulemaking requesting that three constant deceleration stops be added at the onset of the thermal test sequence for purposes of establishing performance requirements for the subsequent "hot performance" and "recovery performance" test. Based on available information, the agency believes that the practicability testing problems cited by the petitioner will not result in vehicle non-compliance unless a given vehicle's brake system is severely degraded by heating. Therefore, the agency has decided to withdraw further rulemaking on this issue.

Legal Authority: PL 105-178, sec 1403

Abstract: Section 1403 of TEA-21 established a new program of incentive

Final Rule Stage

grants (under section 157 of chapter 1 of title 23) to encourage States to increase seat belt use rates. This rulemaking action establishes the criteria and procedures to be followed to implement this incentive grant program. A State is eligible for an incentive grant if: (1) The State had a seat belt use rate greater than the national average for the two preceding calendar years, OR (2) The State's seat belt use rate in the previous calendar year was higher than the State's "base seat belt use rate." (The " base seat belt use rate" is defined as the State's highest use rate for any calendar year from 1996 through the calendar year preceding the previous calendar year.) The amount of funding each State is awarded will be based on calculations by the Secretary of the annual savings to the Federal Government in medical costs (including savings under the medicare and medicaid programs). According to the statute, on September 1 of each year, beginning in 1998, the Department will determine which States meet the eligibility criteria, and on October 1 of each year, the Department will allocate the incentive grant funds. This rule sets forth the procedures the agency will use to evaluate seat belt use rates and to allocate funds. Its publication as an interim final rule, with immediate effectiveness, is necessary because the first evaluations of seat belt use information are required on September 1, 1998, and the first allocations of funds are required on October 1, 1998. The statute authorizes a total of $500 million for grants under this section for fiscal years 1999 through 2003. A State may use these grant funds for any project eligible for assistance under title 23. If there are any unallocated funds available in FY 1999, the excess amounts will be apportioned to the states for expenditure on the Surface Transportation Program (STP). If there are any unallocated funds available in FY 2000 through FY 2003, the Secretary is directed to allocate the funds to selected States to carry out innovative projects that promote increased seat belt use rates. States will be selected based on plans submitted to the Secretary.

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: PL 105-178, sec 1404

CFR Citation: 23 CFR 1225

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: Section 1404 of TEA-21 established a new program of incentive grants (under section 163 of chapter 1 of title 23) to encourage States to establish 0.08 percent blood alcohol concentration (BAC) as the legal limit for drunk driving offenses. This rulemaking action establishes the criteria and procedures to be followed to implement this incentive grant program. Any State that has in effect and is enforcing a 0.08 percent BAC law, before the end of the fiscal year, is eligible to receive incentive funds for that fiscal year. The law must provide that any person with a blood alcohol concentration of 0.08 percent or greater while operating a motor vehicle in the state shall be deemed to have committed a per se offense of driving while intoxicated (or an equivalent per se offense). A state may use these grant funds for any project eligible for assistance under title 23. The statute authorizes a total of $500 million for grants under this section for fiscal years 1998 through 2003. Available funding each year is apportioned among all eligible States according to the Section 402 formula. This rule must be published as an interim final rule, with immediate effectiveness, because its criteria apply for States seeking to receive FY 1998 funds.

Abstract: TEA-21 established a new program of incentive grants to encourage States to adopt and implement effective programs to reduce highway deaths and injuries resulting from individuals riding unrestrained or improperly restrained in motor vehicles. This rulemaking action will establish criteria and procedures to be followed to implement this incentive grant program. A State may become eligible to receive a grant under this section by demonstrating that it has implemented at least four of the following six criteria: 1) a law requiring safety belt use by all front seat passengers (and beginning in FY2001, in any seat in the vehicle); 2) a primary safety belt law; 3) minimum fines or penalty points for belt and child seat violations; 4) a special traffic enforcement program; 5) a child passenger protection education program; and 6) a child passenger protection law - requiring minors to be properly secured. The statute authorizes a total of $68 million for grants under this section over 5 years beginning in fiscal year 1999. Each State that qualifies for a grant receives up to 25 % of its FY1997 section 402 apportionment. This rule is being published as an interim final rule, with immediate effectiveness, because its criteria apply for States seeking to receive funds beginning on October 1, 1998.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: PL 105-206, 112 Stat 834

CFR Citation: 23 CFR 1230

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: Section 5 of the TEA-21 Restoration Act established a new program (under section 154 of chapter 1 of title 23) to encourage States to enact Open Container laws. A State which does not have an Open Container law will have certain Federal-aid highway funds transferred to the State's section 402 State and Community Highway Safety grant program. This rulemaking action establishes the criteria and procedures to be followed to implement this transfer program.

Each State shall have in effect an Open Container law that prohibits the possession of any open alcoholic beverage container, or the consumption of any alcoholic beverage, in the passenger area of any motor vehicle (including possession or consumption by the driver of the vehicle) located on a public highway, or the right-of-way of a public highway, in the State. On October 1, 2000, and October 1, 2001, if a State has not enacted and is not enforcing an Open Container law, 1-1/2 percent of the Federal-aid highway funds apportioned to the State under paragraphs (1), (3), and (4) of section 104(b) will be transferred to the State's section 402 apportionment. On October 1, 2002, and each October 1 thereafter, if a State has not enacted and is not enforcing an Open Container Law, the transferred amount increases to 3 percent. Funds transferred to section 402 must be used for alcohol-impaired driving countermeasures or enforcement of driving while intoxicated (DWI) or driving under the influence (DUI) and other related laws. A State may elect to use all or part of its transferred funds for activities eligible under the section 152 Hazard Elimination Program. The Federal share of a project funded under this section is 100 percent.

This rule is being published as an interim final rule with immediate effectiveness because some state legislatures are not scheduled to meet in 2000, so they are preparing their legislative agendas now for their 1999 legislative sessions. The states have a need to know what the criteria will be as soon as possible so they can enact conforming legislation and avoid the transfer of funds on October 1, 2000. The agency concludes, therefore, that prior notice and opportunity to comment on the rule is both impracticable and contrary to the public interest and finds good cause to publish an interim final rule.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: PL 105-178, sec 2004

CFR Citation: 23 CFR 1313

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rulemaking implements changes mandated by TEA 21 to the Section 410 impaired driving countermeasures grant program. New incentive grant programs include incentives for graduated licensing programs, anti-drunk driving programs aimed at young adults, increased sanctions for drivers with high blood alcohol levels, and increased alcohol testing for drivers involved in fatal accidents. The rulemaking will also establish an alternative incentive program in which states may qualify for grants by demonstrating reductions in fatally injured drivers with blood alcohol concentrations above .10. The rulemaking will also provide for supplemental grants for those states qualifying for a basic grant. These supplemental grant programs will add provisions aimed at reducing operation with suspended licenses and improving detection and conviction of drunk drivers. Appropriated for use in this program are the following: $30.6 million for FY 1998, $28.5 million for FY 1999, $29.3 million for FY 2000, $30.1 million for FY 2001, $38.7 million for FY 2002, and $39.8 million for FY 2003. Final Rule Stage

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: TEA 21 established a new program of incentive grants to encourage States to adopt and implement programs to improve highway safety data. This rulemaking action will establish criteria and procedures to be followed to implement this incentive grant program to encourage States to adopt and implement effective programs to improve the timeliness, accuracy, completeness, uniformity, and accessibility of State data that is needed to identify priorities for national, State, and local highway and traffic and State programs. A State may become eligible to receive a grant under this section by demonstrating that it has met one of the following three options: 1)establish a multi-disciplinary highway safety data and traffic records coordination committee; complete a highway safety data and traffic records assessment or audit within the last five years and initiate development of a multi-year highway safety data and traffic records strategic plan. Upon completion of this option the State may receive $125,000. 2) certify that the State has met the criteria of option 1 and submit a data and traffic record multi-year plan, identifying goals, performance-based measures, and priorities; and specify how incentive funds will be used. Upon completion of this option the State may receive $250,000. 3) the Secretary may award grants of up to $25,000 for 1 year to any State that does not meet the criteria for option 1. In subsequent years a State must submit or update a data and traffic records multi-year plan, identifying goals, performance-based measures and priorities; and the specifics of how incentive funds will be used. The State must certify that the coordinating committee continues to support the multi-year plan and report annually on the progress made to implement the plan. States meeting these conditions in subsequent years may receive $225,000 or more, based on the population and road mileage in the state. A total of $32,000,000 is authorized for fiscal years 1999 through 2002, and all grant amounts are subject to the availability of funds. This rule is being published as an interim final rule, with immediate effectiveness, because its criteria apply for States seeking to receive funds beginning on October 1, 1998.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: PL 105-178; 49 USC 30114

Abstract: The agency is amending its regulation on the importation of vehicles that do not comply with applicable safety standards to include vehicles that are imported for "Show or Display" as a category of vehicles the agency may exempt from compliance with the safety standards. The amendment is being made pursuant to a statutory mandate to include the "Show or Display" category and will not otherwise affect the agency's regulatory requirements. The agency concludes, therefore, that prior notice and opportunity to comment on the amendment are unnecessary and finds good cause to publish a direct final rule.

2634. • +UNIFORM CRITERIA FOR STATE OBSERVATIONAL SURVEYS OF SEAT BELT USE

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: PL 105-178, sec 1403

CFR Citation: 23 CFR 1340

Legal Deadline:
Final, Statutory, December 8, 1998.

Abstract: This rulemaking action establishes the criteria and procedures to be followed by the States to determine their seat belt use rates. Section 1403 of TEA-21 established a new program of incentive grants (under section 157 of chapter 1 of title 23) that provides funds to States if: (1) The State had a seat belt use rate greater than the national average for the two preceding calendar years, OR (2) The State's seat belt use rate in the previous calendar year was higher than the State's "base seat belt use rate." (The " base seat belt use rate" is defined as the State's highest use rate for any calendar year from 1996 through the calendar year preceding the previous calendar year.) For calendar years 1996 and 1997, the legislation directs the Department to weigh State-submitted use rates to insure national consistency in methods of measurement. For calendar years 1998 and beyond, States must establish their seat belt use rates in accordance with guidelines issued by the Secretary. This rulemaking provides the States with the required guidelines. These uniform criteria replace the "Guidelines for State Observational Surveys of Safety Belt and Motorcycle Helmet Use," published in 1992, and rescinded by this rule. The results of the survey conducted in accordance with this rule will be used in making allocations of a total of $418 million during fiscal years 2000 through 2003. This rule is being published as an interim final rule, with immediate effectiveness, because the criteria apply to surveys that the States must conduct during calendar year 1998. Moreover, most States conduct these types of surveys during the summer/fall months.

2635. • MINIMUM PENALTIES FOR REPEAT OFFENDERS

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: PL 105-206, 112 Stat 834

CFR Citation: 23 CFR 1235

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: Section 5 of the TEA-21 Restoration Act established a new program (under section 164 of chapter 1 of title 23) to encourage States to enact Repeat Intoxicated Driver laws. A State which does not have a Repeat Intoxicated Driver law will have certain Federal-aid highway funds transferred to the States section 402 State and Community Highway Safety grant program. This rulemaking action establishes the criteria and procedures to be followed to implement this transfer program.

Each State shall have in effect a Repeat Intoxicated Driver law that provides, as a minimum penalty, that an individual convicted of a second or subsequent offense for driving while intoxicated (DWI) or driving under the influence (DUI) after a previous conviction for that offense shall (A) receive a driver's license suspension for not less than 1 year; (B) be subject to the impoundment or immobilization of each of the individual's motor vehicles or the installation of an ignition interlock system on each of the motor vehicles; (C) receive an assessment of the individual's degree of abuse of alcohol and treatment as appropriate; and (D) receive (i) for 2nd offense, not less than 30 days community service or 5 days of imprisonment; and (ii) for 3rd and subsequent offense, not less than 60 days community service or 10 days of imprisonment. On October 1, 2000, and October 1, 2001, if a State has not enacted and is not enforcing a Repeat Intoxicated Driver law, 1-1/2 percent of the Federal-aid highway funds apportioned to the State under paragraphs (1), (3), and (4) of section 104(b) will be transferred to the State's section 402 apportionment. On October 1, 2002, and each October 1 thereafter, if a State has not enacted and is not enforcing a Repeat Intoxicated Driver law, the transferred amount increases to 3 percent. Funds transferred to section 402 must be used for alcohol-impaired driving countermeasures or enforcement of driving while intoxicated (DWI) or driving under the influence (DUI) and other related laws. A State may elect to use all or part of its transferred funds for activities eligible under the section 152 Hazard Elimination Program. The Federal share of a project funded under this section is 100 percent.

This rule is being published as an interim final rule, with immediate effectiveness, because some state legislatures are not scheduled to meet in the year 2000, so they are preparing their legislative agendas now for their 1999 legislative sessions. The states have a need to know what the criteria will be as soon as possible so they can enact conforming legislation and avoid the transfer of funds on October 1, 2000. The agency concludes, therefore, that prior notice and opportunity to comment on the rule is both impracticable and contrary to the public interest and finds good cause to publish an interim final rule.

Abstract: This action would require manufacturers to disseminate crashworthiness performance information concerning their cars to the public, to provide consumers with comparative information on the crashworthiness performance of new car models. This rulemaking is considered significant because of the impact on manufacturers, the interest shown by consumers, and the potential significant effects on the automotive marketplace. The agency has requested public comments on the National Academy of Sciences (NAS) study titled "Shopping for Safety - Providing Consumer Automotive Safety Information," (TRB Special Report 248) and how that study should be reflected in the agency's decision on whether, and if so, how, to proceed with a crashworthiness rating for automobiles.

Abstract: This action amends the certification requirements that apply to incomplete vehicles other than chassis-cabs. Incomplete vehicles are vehicles that include at least a frame and chassis structure, power train, steering system, suspension system, and brake system, but need further manufacturing performed on them to become completed vehicles. This action extends the certification requirements currently applying to chassis-cabs to all types of incomplete vehicles. The agency recognizes that manufacturers who build vehicles in more than one stage are faced with somewhat different problems than manufacturers who build vehicles in a single stage, especially when it comes to certifying vehicles to meet Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standards. The agency held a public meeting to listen to the views of these groups and others with respect to improving the vehicle certification process, and now seeks to implement the new requirements.

Abstract: This standard was temporarily amended to make the unbelted test for vehicles with air bags less stringent and, in effect, make it easier for manufacturers to quickly depower their air bags. Depowered air bags are likely to benefit out-of-position occupants and reduce drivers' arm injuries, but they might be less effective than earlier air bags for some occupants. Abstract: In response to a petition for rulemaking, the agency proposed to revise the light transmittance requirements to replicate real-world conditions more closely and to measure light transmittance of window glazing in a laboratory test at the angle at which the window is mounted in a vehicle. The proposal also made the light transmittance requirements consistent with passenger cars and light trucks. After reviewing the comments and available information, the agency has decided to withdraw this action because: 1) the cost impacts involved with testing at the installed angle would not be adequately balanced by the potential safety benefits of increased visibility if glazing continues to be installed at current rake angles; 2) the agency believes that practical limits imposed by concerns about visual distortion will prevent rake angles from increasing; and 3) the agency does not want to prohibit the use of the best present solar windshield glazing in order to achieve slight differences in effective light transmittance differences at current rake angles.

Abstract: In response to a petition for rulemaking, this action solicited comments to assist the agency in determining whether to permit the installation of manufacturer-supplied retreaded tires on new trailers. The current requirement states that used or retreaded tires may be installed on new trucks, buses, and trailers only if owned and provided by the vehicle purchaser. After careful evaluation of the comments, the agency has withdrawn this action because installation of used tires on new vehicles is incompatible with motor vehicle safety and because there are no standards for retreaded tires for vehicles other than passenger cars.

Abstract: In response to a petition for rulemaking, the agency proposed to require that each air brake-equipped truck, truck tractor, and bus be equipped with a means of automatically removing moisture and contaminants from the air system. The purpose of this proposal was to improve the safety of air-braked vehicles by improving the reliability and durability of antilock braking system (ABS) modulator valves and pneumatic control valves. The agency is withdrawing this action at this time pending completion of Society of Automotive Engineers development of a performance standard for cleaning and air drying equipment for use in air brake systems.

Abstract: The agency was considering to propose removal of certain sealed beam headlamp requirements in the standard. Manufacturers would no longer have to petition for rulemaking to change the specifications of sealed beam lamps. This would have resulted in an administratively restructured and clarified section of the standard dealing exclusively with headlamp requirements. The agency has decided to combine this action with the administrative rewrite (RIN 2127-AG87).

Abstract: This action responds to petitions for reconsideration of a final rule published December 13, 1995 (60 FR 63965) that amended FMVSS No. 105 and FMVSS No. 121 to require medium duty and heavy duty vehicles to be equipped with an antilock brake system (ABS). The previous action required continuous power for trailer ABSs in place of the dedicated power and separate ground previously required, delayed the implementation date for the in-cab trailer malfunction indicator by four years, and extended by three years the period in which exterior ABS failure indicators are required on trailers. This action permits hydraulically-braked vehicles with GVWR greater than 10,000 pounds but less than 19,501 pounds to be equipped with a single wheel speed sensor in the driveline, and allows motor homes with a GVWR of 22,500 pounds or less to use a single rear drive axle wheel speed sensor if manufactured prior to March 1, 2001.

Abstract: In response to the President's regulatory reinvention initiative, this action proposed to exempt vehicles under 8,500 pounds gross vehicle weight rating (GVWR) from compliance with the rearward displacement requirements of FMVSS No. 204, if they comply with Standard 208 air bag requirements in a rigid barrier crash test. This exemption was expected to save certification costs. The agency is withdrawing this proposal because the widespread use of the new "sled test" allowed by the depowering rulemaking (62 FR 12960) may have eliminated the basic need for this proposal.

Abstract: This rule permits, but not requires, the installation of dynamically deploying upper interior head protection systems currently being developed by some vehicle manufacturers to provide added head protection in lateral crashes. Compliance with these requirements is tested at specified points called "target points." Since compliance is often not practicable at target points located near the places where these dynamic systems are stored before they are deployed, vehicles equipped with the dynamic systems will be allowed to meet slightly reduced requirements at these points. However, these vehicles will also be required to meet new requirements to ensure that these dynamic systems enhance safety. This rule adds procedures and performance requirements for testing the deployment of these systems and their protective capability through a combination of in-vehicle tests and a full scale vehicle crash test. For the specifications and qualification requirements of the anthropomorphic test dummy to be used in compliance testing see RIN 2127-AG74.

Abstract: The agency intended to upgrade the requirements for child seats certified for use on aircraft. It would have required child restraints certified for use on aircraft to meet compatibility (fit) requirements and to meet performance criteria when sled tested under conditions more representative of the aircraft environment. This action was considered significant because of the substantial public interest in issues involving child seats on aircraft and because of special interest to another modal Administration. This action will now be initiated by the Federal Aviation Administration.

Abstract: NHTSA proposed to amend a provision in the occupant crash protection standard which specifies that, during crash tests, all portions of a test dummy must remain in the vehicle throughout the test. NHTSA considered a range of alternative requirements to ensure that the standard's requirements are practicable. This action resulted from a petition for rulemaking. This action is being withdrawn because problems with containment have been adequately resolved by vehicle manufacturers.

Abstract: The agency has made two amendments to the specifications for the side impact test dummy and the procedure in the side impact protection standard for positioning the dummy in a vehicle for compliance testing purposes. The first amendment added plastic spacers to the dummy's lumbar spine to prevent a metal cable within the spine from contacting other metal parts in the spine ("snapping"). Some manufacturers believe that such contact can generate large spikes in the data obtained from the dummy. The second amendment specified a procedure during the positioning of the dummy to fully extend the damper piston in the dummy's ribcage prior to the side impact test. These changes are intended to reduce to the extent possible any potential problems with the consistency of the data obtained from the dummy in a side impact crash test.

Abstract: The agency established a new category of motor vehicle called "low-speed vehicle." A low-speed vehicle (LSV) is any 4-wheeled motor vehicle, other than a truck, whose top speed is more than 20 but does not exceed 25 mph. Under this new standard, Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standard No. 500, LSVs will be equipped with certain basic items of motor vehicle safety equipment, such as seat belts, in lieu of complying with the Federal motor vehicle safety and bumper standards that would apply if LSVs were categorized according to existing vehicle types.

2668. DEPOWER EXCLUSIONS FROM REQUIREMENTS FOR VEHICLES CERTIFIED TO THE ALTERNATIVE SLED TEST

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 322; 49 USC 30111; 49 USC 30115; 49 USC 30117; 49 USC 30166

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 571.208

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The agency has amended the occupant crash protection standard to ensure that vehicle manufacturers can quickly depower all air bags so that they inflate less aggressively. In response to the interim final rule, the agency has adopted an unbelted sled test protocol to the standard's full scale unbelted barrier crash test. The agency took this action to provide a solution to the problem of the fatalities and injuries that current air bag designs are causing in relatively low speed crashes to small, but growing numbers of children, and occasionally to adult occupants. See RINs 2127-AG75 and 2127-AG94 for related issues.

Abstract: In response to a petition for rulemaking, the agency is amending the standard with respect to the conspicuity requirements for stop signal arms. Specifically, the amendment permits the use of light emitting diodes (LEDs). This amendment allows States and local jurisdictions to purchase stop signal arms with these types of lamps.

2671. EXEMPTIONS TO ODOMETER DISCLOSURE REQUIREMENTS

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: PL 104-205, sec 332

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 580

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The final rule amended 49 CFR 580, Odometer Disclosure Requirements, by establishing a new section, part 580.17, by repromulgating the exemptions for certain categories of vehicles from odometer disclosure requirements now located in part 580.6, and by moving the exemptions to the new part 580.17. The rule also revised the authority citation for part 580 to reflect Public Law 104-205. The repromulgation was necessitated by a recent United States Court of Appeals decision that raised questions about the agency's authority to exempt categories of vehicles from the Federal odometer disclosure requirements. In response to comments received on the interim final rule, the agency promulgated a final rule amending one of the exemptions for vehicles 10 years old or older (Section 580.17(a)(3)) to clarify the scope of the exemption. This final rule also amends the statutory authority for the exemptions to reflect the amendment of PL 105-178, sec 7105.

Abstract: The agency had planned to propose rulemaking to require stop lamp illumination during the operation of a retarder system. A retarder is a supplementary braking system that is independent from the service brakes. Retarders are increasingly being used as a wear-free additional braking system on buses, trucks and heavy-duty vehicles. Currently, there is no requirement that the stop lamps be illuminated to indicate that the vehicle is decelerating as a result of retarder operation. Because of the lack of agency consensus and the absence of conclusive evidence showing a need for this rulemaking, the agency has decided to terminate rulemaking activity on this subject at this time.

Abstract: The agency has denied a petition for rulemaking which would exclude motor-driven cycles and other motorized bicycles from Department's regulations. The petitioner argued that the vehicle's low speed and small size justified such exclusion. The agency found this conclusion unsupported. Motorized bicycles, which may have a maximum speed of up to 25 miles per hour and are found on the public streets, must be afforded the same level of protection that now exists for their category under the Federal motor vehicle safety standards where they are defined as "motor driven cycles," which are "motorcycles with a motor which produces 5 brake horsepower or less."

Abstract: The agency denied a petition for rulemaking to add requirements regarding the maximum time for a stop lamp to reach 90 percent of its required illumination. A requirement of this nature could be met using currently-available technology such as light emitting diodes (LEDs), neon lamps, hot filament systems, or shuttered systems. Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 20103

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 228

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: In 1994, the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA) launched a major project to facilitate maintenance of hours-of-service records and submission of "excess service" reports in an electronic, rather than a paper, format. FRA is proposing a model waiver to railroads interested in maintaining electronic records for train and engine service employees. These employees compose the vast majority of those subject to the statutory limitations on hours of service. This project will eventually lead to the formal revision of 49 CFR 228. This is considered significant due to public interest.

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 20103

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 229

Final, Statutory, March 3, 1995.

Abstract: The agency has proposed to address crew working conditions on locomotives, pursuant to the Rail Safety Enforcement and Review Act (1992). FRA investigated a variety of locomotive working conditions, including sanitation, noise and temperature, and reported its findings to Congress. On October 31, 1996, the Railroad Safety Advisory Committee (RSAC) accepted a preliminary planning task to schedule handling of these issues. The Locomotive Crew Safety Working Group met on January 23, 1997 to develop task statements that were forwarded to the full RSAC and accepted on June 24, 1997. This project is considered significant because of substantial public interest. FRA is awaiting the advice and recommendations of RSAC before taking further regulatory action.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 322; 42 USC 4332

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The Federal Transit Administration (FTA) and the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) currently have a joint environmental regulation at 23 CFR 771, "Environmental Impact and Related Procedures," that outlines requirements for complying with the National Environmental Policy Act and related laws and regulations. The Federal Railroad Administration (FRA) has "Procedures for Considering Environmental Impacts" (45 FR 40854, June 16, 1980) which serve the same purposes. FTA and FHWA are revising their regulation to serve program needs. In order to achieve consistency in environmental analysis for surface transportation modes and to update its existing environmental procedures which were issued in 1980, the FRA will join with FTA and FHWA in developing an environmental regulation that applies to all three modal Administrations. This action is considered significant because of public, congressional, and environmental concerns and because it involves several departmental modes. The FTA RIN is 2132-AA43; the FHWA RIN is 2125-AD32.

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 20103

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 220; 49 CFR 236

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: FRA is collecting information to determine whether it should initiate a rulemaking addressing Positive Train Control (PTC) systems. In response to Congressional mandate, FRA has continued its commitment to identifying high risk corridors which may better support PTC investment; supporting PTC technology development, testing and compatibility; and promoting deployment of PTC technology on high risk corridors by the year 2000. FRA anticipates its fact finding efforts through the Railroad Safety Advisory Committee (RSAC) Working Group on PTC could result in FRA's decision to proceed to rulemaking. FRA, believing it advantageous to resolve the differences concerning this project in an open forum, formally proposed this rulemaking to RSAC in September, 1997, and is awaiting the advice and recommendations of RSAC. The initial rulemaking will address technical standards for PTC, amending 49 CFR part 236.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 20701

Abstract: Pursuant to the President's Regulatory Reform Initiative, and at the initiative of several industry members, FRA has undertaken to modernize part 230 to reflect current operating realities and, perhaps, to allow greater flexibility in the steam locomotive inspection waiver process. On July 24-25, 1996, the agency tasked the revision of these standards to the Railroad Safety Advisory Committee (RSAC), established by FRA on March 26, 1996 (61 FR 9740). (See Notice of RSAC Meeting, July 10, 1996, 61 FR 36415.) On February 17, 1998, the RSAC submitted to FRA consensus recommendations for issuance of an NPRM.

Priority: Other Significant. Major status under 5 USC 801 is undetermined.

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 232; 49 CFR 231; 49 CFR 229

Legal Deadline:
Final, Statutory, December 31, 1993.

Abstract: Pursuant to the Federal Railroad Safety Enforcement and Review Act of 1992, FRA is revising the power brake rules. After separating proposed revisions regarding freight power brakes from passenger power brakes, FRA tasked the revision of freight power brake standards on April 1-2, 1996 to the Railroad Safety Advisory Committee (RSAC), established by FRA on March 26, 1996 (61 FR 9740). On June 24, 1997, this task was withdrawn from RSAC and FRA is proceeding on its own initiative. This rulemaking is considered significant because of its potential economic impact and congressional and public interest.

Abstract: FRA proposes to publish regulations governing operational and design safety of on-track equipment used by railroads for track maintenance. The regulations would cover self-propelled rail-mounted non-highway machines where light weight exceeds 7500 pounds. This rulemaking was requested by the Brotherhood of Maintenance-of-Way Employees (BMWE) as part of the organization's petition requesting revision of the track safety standards. Due to various contentious issues raised during the NPRM comment period, FRA believes it may be advantageous to resolve differences in an open forum. Therefore, on September 30, 1997, FRA formally proposed this rulemaking as a new task (Task 97-8) for the Railroad Safety Advisory Committee (RSAC). After discussion, the RSAC declined to accept the task at that time. Staff turnover, combined with the press of other business, has slowed further action on this rulemaking.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 20103

Legal Deadline:
Final, Statutory, June 22, 1989.

Abstract: FRA is making technical changes and minor amendments to final regulations which were published on September 30, 1994. These regulations require that railroads take specific and timely actions to protect the travelling public and railroad employees from the hazards posed by malfunctioning highway-rail grade crossing warning systems, and that railroads follow specific standards for maintenance, inspection, and testing of those systems. The amendments clarify issues arising from implementation of this new regulatory program. No new costs are expected.

Additional Information: The final rule, RIN 2130-AA70, was published 9/30/94 (59 FR 50086), and was effective 1/1/95. In response to a petition for reconsideration, FRA conducted a review, together with rail labor and rail management, to address various implementation issues that had surfaced since the rule was enacted. After meeting with these parties in March 1995, FRA issued an Implementation Manual on April 14, 1995. An interim final rule intended to clarify implementation issues by making minor technical amendments was published on June 20, 1996, effective August 19, 1996. Abstract: FRA has published a proposed rule of particular applicability for a high speed rail project in the state of Florida. As proposed, the system will operate from Miami to Tampa via Orlando, and will be modeled on the French TGV. As currently designed, the operation will travel at 200 mph on dedicated rail with no grade crossings, and will be used exclusively for passenger service. Florida anticipates beginning operations in the year 2004. Abstract: This action is required by section 1218(a) of the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century ("TEA 21"). This section, codified at 23 USC 322, provides a total of $55 million for Fiscal Years 1999 through 2001 for preconstruction planning activities, final design, engineering, and construction activities for the deployment of Magnetic Levitation technology ("Maglev Deployment Program"); $15 million is available in Fiscal Year 1999 and $40 million for Fiscal Years 2000 and 2001. Section 322 requires FRA to establish Project selection criteria, to solicit applications for funding, to select one or more Projects to receive financial assistance for preconstruction planning activities, and after completion of such activities, to select one of the Projects to receive financial assistance for final design, engineering, and construction activities. 2712. PROTECTION OF UTILITY EMPLOYEES

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 20103

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 218

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: FRA is in the process of reconsidering amendments to its "Blue Signal" regulations, which prescribe minimum requirements for the protection of railroad employees engaged in the inspection, testing, repair, and servicing of rolling equipment. The original "blue signal" rule did not include train and yard crews in this protection, with limited exceptions. The final rule, intended to redress this problem, allowed augmentation of a crew by using a "utility" employee, which would increase a railroad's efficient use of its employees. Based on petitions to reconsider several aspects of its final rule treating this subject, FRA issued amendments to this rule. Based on comments received, the agency suspended those amendments and reopened the comment period to further develop this proposal.

Abstract: The Tourist and Historic Working Group of the Railroad Safety Advisory Committee was established to review existing and proposed regulations for their appropriate applicability to one segment of FRA's small business customers, the tourist and historic railroads. In addition, the group is examining FRA's policy with respect to exercise of jurisdiction over railroads off the general system of rail transportation.

Additional Information: This rulemaking represents a long-term effort to review existing and proposed regulations for their appropriate applicability to tourist and historic railroads. The group was created in April of 1996 and met on June 17 - 18, 1996. Thus far, the group has reviewed the Steam Locomotive standards and FRA's Accident/Incident Reporting standards and provided recommendations regarding their applicability to the tourist and historic railroad industry. (See Notice of Meeting, 61 FR 54698.) The group is anticipated to next review the final rules on Track Safety Standards and Rail Passenger Service: Emergency Preparedness.

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 20103; 49 USC 20142

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 213

Legal Deadline:
Final, Statutory, September 1, 1995.

Abstract: This action comprehensively revised the track regulations for the first time in over a decade. This revision of FRA's track safety standards was mandated by Congress in the Rail Safety Enforcement and Review Act (PL 102-365) and requested by the Brotherhood of Maintenance-of-Way workers in their petition requesting several modifications of existing track standards. On April 1-2, 1996, FRA tasked the revision of these standards to the Railroad Safety Advisory Committee (RSAC) which the agency established on March 26, 1996 (61 FR 9740). (See Notice of Task Acceptance, 61 FR 29164, June 7, 1996.) After receiving the advice and recommendations of the RSAC, the agency issued these regulations. This action is significant because of substantial public interest and safety implications

Roadway Maintenance Machine Safety (RIN 2130-AB28) and Gage Restraint Measurement Systems (GRMS), both initially discussed as part of the track standards revisions, will be addressed in separate rulemaking actions.

Abstract: This action establishes minimum emergency preparedness standards to ensure that railroads involved in passenger train operations can effectively and efficiently manage emergencies. This action was taken pursuant to the Federal Railroad Safety Authorization Act of 1994. The rule provides flexibility to each railroad to establish procedures and policies appropriate to its particular operations, subject to review and approval by the FRA. Abstract: In the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990, Congress had authorized FRA to assess and collect railroad user fees for a 5-year period which ended September 30, 1995. Due to a lack of Congressional action to reauthorize the program, FRA is dropping this item from the Unified Regulatory Agenda. Should Congress act to reinstitute railroad user fees, FRA will take appropriate regulatory action (within the confines of the enabling legislation) to reexamine the burden of the program on small railroads.

2719. TWO-WAY END-OF-TRAIN TELEMETRY DEVICES AND CERTAIN PASSENGER TRAIN OPERATIONS

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 20103

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 232; 49 CFR 231; 49 CFR 229

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: On January 2, 1997, FRA published a final rule amending the regulations governing train and locomotive power braking systems at 49 CFR part 232 to add provisions pertaining to the use and design of two-way end-of-train telemetry devices (EOTs). (See 62 FR 278). The purpose of the revisions was to improve the safety of railroad operations by requiring the use of two-way EOTs on a variety of trains pursuant to 1992 legislation, and by establishing minimum performance and operational standards related to the use and design of the devices. The current regulations regarding two-way EOTs provide an exception from the requirements for "passenger trains with emergency brakes."

In this rulemaking, FRA amended the final rule to specifically encompass certain passenger train operations where multiple express-type equipment, material handling cars, or units of intermodal equipment are part of a train's consist. Trains of this nature are currently being operated by the National Railroad Passenger Corporation and swift action was necessary to clarify and address the applicability of two-way end-of-train requirements to these types of operations.

Legal Deadline:
Final, Statutory, May 18, 1992.

Abstract: The Federal Transit Administration and the Federal Highway Administration currently have a joint environmental regulation at 23 CFR 771, "Environmental Impact and Related Procedures." The agencies first issued an environmental regulation together in 1980. The joint regulation was amended in 1987 and again in 1991. Even though FTA and FHWA have joint regulations, each agency's guidance for implementing those regulations is procedurally different. This causes difficulties and inconsistencies for sponsors of transportation projects, particularly where joint FTA and FHWA funds are involved. In the ISTEA, the Congress recognized the importance of providing uniformity and consistency between FTA and FHWA environmental procedures. This is needed to accommodate the increased funding flexibility for surface transportation provided by ISTEA. Because of an increased emphasis on intermodal planning and proposals to advance a high-speed rail program, the proposed, new joint regulations will include the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA) and the United States Coast Guard (USCG) bridge permit program. Further, FTA and FHWA agencies will propose to make changes to conform this rule to the requirements of the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (P.L. 105-178). Most notably, FTA and FHWA will propose to integrate the major investment study of the metropolitan and statewide planning rules with this rule.

Additional Information: Former section 12(h) of the FT Act, as amended (now 49 USC 5302(a)(9)), defines a "new bus model" as a bus model which has not been used in mass transportation service in the United States before the date of production of such model, or a bus model which has been used in such service, but which is being produced with a major change in configuration or components. A third interim final rule, published on 07/28/92, added two new categories of buses required to be tested. On 10/13/92 FTA published a notice postponing the application of the interim final rule for these vehicle types until 02/10/93. The FTA's fourth interim final rule, issued on 11/3/93, established four subcategories of small vehicles to facilitate the phase-in of testing. The final rule will add the two tests mandated by ISTEA, brake performance and emissions, to the seven tests currently performed at the bus testing facility. In addition, the final rule will clarify the partial testing with regard to what constitutes a "major change" on a bus that has been fully tested, but is later produced with a change in configuration or component.

2729. "MAINTENANCE" UNDER DEFINITION OF SAFETY-SENSITIVE FUNCTIONS IN DRUG AND ALCOHOL RULES

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 5331

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 653; 49 CFR 654

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The Federal Transit Administration is proposing to expand its definition of safety-sensitive functions to require drug and alcohol testing of maintenance workers engaged in rebuilding or overhauling engines, revenue service vehicles, and parts. This change would eliminate the distinction between maintenance workers involved in on-going, daily maintenance and repair work and those who, on a routine basis, perform rebuilding and overhauling work.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: PL 105-178, sec 3008; 49 USC 5308

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 624

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: Section 3008 of the Transportation Equity Act of the 21st Century amends 49 CFR 5308 to establish the Clean Fuels Formula Grant Program. This grants program will assist transit systems in purchasing or leasing clean fuel programs; constructing clean fuel or electrical re-charging facilities; modifying existing garage facilities to accommodate clean fuel vehicles; re-powering pre-1993 engines with clean fuel technology which meets the current bus emission standards; and retrofitting or rebuilding pre-1993 engines before their half-life for rebuilding. This provision requires the Secretary to issue an implementing regulation that sets forth eligibility requirements and an apportionment formula for eligible projects. Because applications must be submitted to FTA by January 1 of each year, FTA will publish its interim final rule by November 1, 1998, for the applications due January 1, 1999.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: PL 105-178, sec 3003

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 639

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: Section 3003 of the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (TEA-21) expanded the definition of capital projects to include the leasing of equipment or facilities for use in mass transportation when it is cost-effective to do so. Prior to enactment of TEA-21, the option to lease instead of purchase was available only to recipients of FTA's formula grant program for urbanized areas, section 5307 recipients through the capital lease rule. To implement this expanded definition, which will benefit most of FTA 's recipients, FTA will amend its capital lease rule by expanding it to include all FTA recipients of capital assistance. This rule will then allow all FTA recipients of capital assistance to choose to purchase or lease equipment or facilities depending on which option is more cost-effective. Because this rule is non-controversial and beneficial to all FTA recipients of capital assistance, FTA will issue a direct final rule, thus, quickly implementing the change mandated by TEA-21. The publication of this rule will relieve recipients of capital assistance of an administrative burden they must meet under OMB guidance.

DOT—FTA

Final Rule Stage

Legal Authority: 49 USC 60101 to 60125

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 192; 49 CFR 195

Abstract: This rulemaking would establish qualification standards for personnel who perform certain operation and maintenance functions on gas or hazardous liquid pipelines. The standards are needed to ensure that pipeline personnel can recognize, and react properly to, dangerous situations. Following withdrawal of an initial NPRM, a negotiated rulemaking committee considered alternatives and, by January 1998, reached consensus on a proposal to require pipeline operators to have and follow a personnel qualification program. A second NPRM will be based on this proposal.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 60101 to 60125

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 192 to 195

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rulemaking is designed to update the pipeline safety regulations on an annual basis. It will incorporate by reference the latest editions of consensus standards to allow operators to utilize current technology, materials, and practices. In addition, noncontroversial corrections and clarifications will be made. This annual update process is consistent with the President's goal of regulatory reinvention and improvement of customer service.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 60101 to 60125

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 192; 49 CFR 195

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This action addresses the need to revise or supplement the safety standards for gas and hazardous liquid pipelines to further reduce the potential for corrosion-caused accidents. Particular attention will be given to the need to incorporate by reference voluntary standards of recognized standard-setting organizations, and to apply the same corrosion control standards to gas and hazardous liquid pipelines.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 60101 to 60125

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 485; 49 CFR 487; 49 CFR 713

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: Gas pipe that is generally corroded over a large area to the extent that wall thickness is unsafe must be replaced, unless in the case of transmission pipe, operating pressure is reduced. Similarly, any damage that impairs the serviceability of high-stress transmission pipe must be replaced, unless it is repaired by a full encirclement welded split sleeve. The proposed rule would permit operators to use alternative corrective methods that have been demonstrated to permanently restore the pressure integrity of corroded or damaged pipe. Operators of hazardous liquid pipelines already may use these methods. By allowing the use of less expensive proven technologies, the proposed rule would reduce costs in the gas pipeline industry without reducing safety.

DOT—RSPA

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 60101 to 60125

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 195.302

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: Certain older pipelines in terminals and tank farms must be pressure tested before December 7, 2003. Based on a petition, RSPA is reconsidering this testing requirement in light of the risk and low operating stress of these pipelines. RSPA has stayed enforcement of the testing requirement against pipelines designed not to operate above 20 percent of specified minimum yield strength.

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 60101 to 60125

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 194

Legal Deadline: Final, Statutory, August 18, 1992.

Abstract: The interim final rule established regulations requiring response plans for certain onshore oil pipelines. Those regulations are mandated by the Federal Water Pollution Control Act as amended by the Oil Pollution Act of 1990 (Pub. L. 101-380). The purpose of these requirements is to improve response capabilities and minimize the impact of onshore oil spills from pipelines. This rule is significant because of substantial public and congressional interest.

The operators filed response plans under this interim final rule, and numerous tabletop exercises and area exercises have been conducted to validate the planning process. Work is proceeding on a "one plan" approach that would allow an operator to file only one oil spill response plan within the various interested agencies.

2762. +RISK-BASED ALTERNATIVE TO PRESSURE TESTING RULE

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 60101 to 60125

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 195

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rulemaking would provide a risk-based alternative to the existing pressure testing rule for older hazardous liquid and carbon dioxide pipelines. On June 7, 1994 (59 FR 29379), RSPA issued a final rule requiring the hydrostatic pressure testing of certain older pipelines (49 CFR 195.302). On June 23, 1995, the American Petroleum Institute (API) filed a petition on behalf of many liquid pipeline operators that recommended a risk-based alternative to the required pressure testing rule. RSPA finds considerable merit in a risk-based approach to pressure testing and thus has postponed the time for compliance with the final rule issued on June 7, 1994, to allow time for evaluation of the API petition. The risk-based alternative would allow operators to elect an approach to evaluating the integrity of these lines that takes into account individual risk factors. This would allow operators to focus resources on higher-risk pipelines and effect a greater reduction in the overall risk from pipeline accidents. This rulemaking is considered significant because of the substantial industry interest.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 5101 to 5127

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 173

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The ANPRM solicited comments on the merits of a petition for rulemaking to require registration and training of persons who fill propane cylinders, certification of filling equipment operators, and proof of financial responsibility. The petition would also allow filling of propane cylinders by volume rather than by weight, which is currently required by the hazardous material regulations. This notice will terminate rulemaking action in this docket and deny the petition for rulemaking because, based on the comments, there is no safety justification for imposing the costs of a registration, training and financial responsibility program for cylinder fillers.

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 60101 to 60125

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 192; 49 CFR 195

Legal Deadline:
Final, Statutory, November 1, 1989, Deadline pertains to pipeline inventory and State agency information.

Abstract: This action proposes to equalize as far as possible the requirements that gas and hazardous liquid pipeline operators keep maps and records to show the location and other characteristics of pipelines. Operators would be required to keep an inventory of pipe and periodically report mileage and other facts. In addition, operators would be required to provide certain information to State agencies upon request. This is a significant action because of congressional and State concerns about the need for appropriate public officials to have pipeline information.

Additional Information: In furtherance of this rulemaking, the Department of Transportation's Office of Pipeline Safety (OPS) is working with other Federal and State agencies and pipeline industry to create a national pipeline mapping system. This system, when complete, will show the location and selected attributes of the major natural gas and hazardous liquid pipelines and liquefied natural gas facilities operating in the United States. OPS will add additional data layers into the system, including layers on population densities, unusually sensitive areas, natural disaster probability and high consequence areas, hydrography, and transportation networks. OPS will use the system to depict pipelines in relation to the public and the environment, and to work with other government agencies and industry during an incident.

A joint government/industry Mapping Quality Action Team (MQAT II) has drafted national pipeline mapping standards that will be used to create the digital pipeline layer. These include standards for electronic data submissions, paper map submissions, and metadata (data on the data). The team has also drafted standards that will be used by the pipeline mapping repository receiving the pipeline information. The team is currently pilot testing the draft standards and is working to establish relationships with State agencies, industry, and others to exchange data that meets the standards.

Additional Information: Docket No. PS-133. A public workshop was held on 10/19/95 (60 FR 44822). This action is being coordinated with other rulemakings on onshore oil spill response plans (Docket No. PS-130; RIN 2137-AC30), areas unusually sensitive to environmental damage (Docket No PS-140; RIN 2137-AC34), and pipeline leak detection systems (Docket No. RSPA 97-2362; RIN 2137-AD05). These actions are being pursued in coordination with, and as part of the response to, the EFRD mandate.

First, RSPA has required pipeline operators to develop and carry out onshore oil spill response plans under the Oil Pollution Act of 1990 (Docket No. PS-130; RIN 2137-AC30). The operators have filed response plans under an interim final rule, and numerous tabletop exercises and area exercises have been conducted to validate the planning process. Work is proceeding on a 'one plan' approach that would allow an operator to file only one oil spill response plan with the various interested agencies. A final rule will be directed toward improving operators' accident response capabilities and minimizing accident consequences.

Second, RSPA published a proposed rule to adopt the American Petroleum Institute's (API) pipeline leak detection system technical standard (Standard API 1130, Computational Pipeline Monitoring) to guide industry implementation of computer-based leak detection systems (Docket No. RSPA-97-2362, RIN 2137-AD06). This proposal would require that operators of hazardous liquid pipelines use API 1130 in conjunction with other information in the design, evaluation, operation, maintenance, and testing of their software-based leak detection systems. This will result in a significant advancement toward the acceptance of leak detection technology on hazardous liquid pipelines. This is a necessary precedent to the possible adoption of regulations on emergency flow restricting devices.

Third, RSPA is working with the Environmental Protection Agency, the U.S. Coast Guard, and others to develop a definition of "areas unusually sensitive to environmental damage from pipeline spills" (Docket No. PS-140; RIN 2137-AC34). This effort will define areas that are candidates for the application of EFRDs.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 5101 to 5127

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 172; 49 CFR 174; 49 CFR 175; 49 CFR 176; 49 CFR 177

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This action proposes to amend the Hazardous Materials Regulations by requiring shippers and carriers to retain a copy of the hazardous material shipping paper or an electronic image of the shipping paper for a period of one year. Retention of shipping papers is a current requirement as specified in 49 U.S.C. 5110(e). RSPA's next action is undetermined because there is pending proposed legislation on this subject that would clarify the time frame for beginning the one year cycle.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 5101 to 5127

Abstract: This rulemaking proposes to better define the applicability of Federal Hazardous Materials Regulations, 49 CFR parts 171-180, thereby clarifying the relationship among Federal, State, local and tribal agencies in the regulation of hazardous materials transportation. RSPA has held three public hearings on this rulemaking and is evaluating input from those meetings and numerous public comments.

2772. +PROHIBITION OF OXIDIZERS ABOARD AIRCRAFT

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 5101 to 5127

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 175

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: RSPA is amending the Hazardous Materials Regulations to prohibit the carriage of oxidizers, including compressed oxygen, aboard passenger-carrying aircraft. The effect of this prohibition is to limit oxidizers to accessible locations on cargo aircraft. The December 30, 1996, notice of proposed rulemaking analyzed Class D cargo compartments and proposed to add a shipping description to the Hazardous Materials Table for chemical oxygen generators and to require approval of a chemical oxygen generator that is transported with its means of initiation attached. The supplemental proposal specifically analyzes the prohibition of oxidizers in Class B and C cargo compartments. This rulemaking is significant due to congressional and public interest in the hazards presented by these materials when transported as cargo on passenger aircraft.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in

Long-Term Actions

the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 60101 to 60125

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 192

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This action would change miscellaneous gas pipeline safety standards to provide clarity, eliminate unnecessary or overly burdensome requirements, and foster economic change. Some of the proposed changes result from RSPA's further review of the standards following its 1995-1996 review under the President's Regulatory Reinvention Initiative. Other changes are based on recommendations by the National Association of Pipeline Safety Representatives (NAPSR) in its November 1992 report on the standards. The proposed changes would reduce costs in the pipeline industry without compromising safety.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 60101 to 60128

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 195

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: In 1995, the National Association of Pipeline Safety Representatives (NAPSR) completed its review of the hazardous liquid pipeline safety regulations. NAPSR provided RSPA with 28 recommendations for changes to 49 CFR part 195, the hazardous liquid pipeline regulations. NAPSR's recommendations are aimed at making the regulations more explicit, understandable, and enforceable. This action would address the need to change Part 195 as NAPSR recommended. This action is considered significant because it involves matters of substantial public and state interest.

2775. 1998 HARMONIZATION OF HAZARDOUS MATERIALS REGULATIONS WITH INTERNATIONAL STANDARDS

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 5101 to 5127

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 171 to 180

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rulemaking is an ongoing effort to maintain harmonization of the Hazardous Materials Regulations with international standards. The last completed final rule to maintain alignment with corresponding provisions of international standards was issued by RSPA on May 7, 1997 (Docket HM-215B; 62 FR 24690) RIN 2127-AC82.

Because of recent changes to the International Maritime Dangerous Goods Code, the International Civil Aviation Organization's Technical Instructions for the Safe Transport of Dangerous Goods by Air and the United Nations Recommendations on the Transport of Dangerous Goods (UN Recommendations), these proposed revisions are necessary to facilitate the transport of hazardous materials in international commerce.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 5101 to 5127

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 171 to 178

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rulemaking makes minor changes to the Hazardous Materials Regulations. This periodic (usually annual) rulemaking makes updates and corrections to noncontroversial and technical requirements in response to petitions for rulemaking, industry complaints, technological developments and RSPA's enforcement experience. In this final rule, RSPA is making a variety of changes, such as updating incorporations by reference, responding to petitions for rulemaking, clarifying requirements and providing regulatory relief. Because some of the changes are substantive, RSPA published an NPRM to obtain public comments.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 60101 to 60125

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 199

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This amendment alleviated the burden on pipeline operators located outside the U.S. of having to drug test employees that perform a covered function. There are a small number of pipeline operators with covered employees that are located in Canada performing a covered function. It is not cost effective to require these foreign employees to comply with the drug testing regulation. RSPA does not have sufficient resources to inspect these foreign-located employees for compliance with part 199. RSPA does not impose any other safety regulations on any pipeline operator that is located outside the U.S.

Abstract: This action results from the need to make the RSPA drug testing regulations conform with those of the other Departmental operating administrations that fall under the Omnibus Transportation Employee Testing Act of 1991. It would make drug testing among the operating administrations as consistent as possible and simplify the drug testing process for pipeline operations. It would require that an employee who tests positive for drugs be evaluated by a substance abuse professional prior to returning to performing his/her covered function.

2779. LOW-STRESS HAZARDOUS LIQUID PIPELINES SERVING PLANTS AND TERMINALS

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 60101 to 60125

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 195

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: RSPA's hazardous liquid pipeline safety regulations originally did not apply to steel pipelines that operate at 20 percent or less of specified minimum yield strength. A final rule (59 FR 35465; July 12, 1994) extended the regulations to three groups of these pipelines: 1) pipelines that transport highly volatile liquids (HVL), 2) pipelines or pipeline segments in populated areas, and 3) pipelines or pipeline segments located offshore or in commercially navigable waterways. Accidents showed that regulating these pipelines or pipeline segments would be in the interest of public safety. Moreover, 49 USC 60102(k) provides that DOT may not exclude hazardous liquid pipelines from regulation based solely on operation at low internal stress. The final rule responded to the statutory prohibition and reduced hazardous liquid pipeline risks.

Subsequently, various pipeline companies expressed difficulty in meeting the regulations on certain short lines. In view of these difficulties and the low risk of the lines involved, RSPA stayed enforcement of the regulations against plant and terminal transfer lines that are less than one mile long and do not cross offshore or commercially navigable waterways, or that come under the U.S. Coast Guard safety regulations (61 FR 24244; May 14, 1996). After further review, RSPA revised the regulations to except these lines from the regulations. RSPA's hazardous liquid pipeline safety advisory committee has participated in the decision making process on this action.

Abstract: In December 1996 the Secretary of Transportation and the Secretary of the Interior signed a new Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) on the sharing of regulatory responsibilities for Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) pipelines between the Office of Pipeline Safety (OPS) and the Minerals Management Service (MMS). This new agreement replaces a 1976 MOU. The new MOU allows MMS to perform routine inspections of DOT-subject facilities located on offshore platforms, with referral of enforcement actions to OPS. It also sets up a coordinated program of offshore operator inspections. This Direct Final Rule is designed to update the pipeline safety regulations to reflect features of the new MOU regarding the boundary between MMS and OPS regulatory oversight.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 60101 et seq

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 195

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rulemaking would incorporate by reference in the hazardous liquid pipeline regulations an industry publication for leak detection, API 1130, "Computational Pipeline Monitoring," published by the American Petroleum Institute (API). This proposal would require that operators of hazardous liquid pipelines use API 1130 in conjunction with other information in the design, evaluation, operation, maintenance, and testing of software-based leak detection systems. This will result in a significant advancement toward the acceptance of leak detection technology on hazardous liquid pipelines. However, RSPA is not proposing to require operators to install such systems.

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 172; 49 CFR 174; 49 CFR 175; 49 CFR 176; 49 CFR 177

Abstract: RSPA withdrew its requirements for formal preparation Radiation Protection Program (RPP), adopted in a September 28, 1995 final rule (60 FR 50292), because of questions and problems raised since issuance of that final rule. Examples of the effect on activities presenting very small exposure to radiation convinced RSPA that it should reconsider this requirement.

RSPA previously attempted to withdraw the RPP requirements in a September 2, 1997, direct final rule (62 FR 46214), RIN 2127-AD08, but received two adverse comments. Accordingly, RSPA issued a rulemaking document revoking the direct final rule, a rulemaking to extend the compliance date, and a notice of proposed rulemaking to withdraw the RPP document. RPP requirements may be reconsidered at a later date, in a separate, future rulemaking.

Abstract: MARAD regulations provide the qualifications for approval of depositories under several maritime programs, including the Capital Construction Fund Program (CCF). The CCF statute allows CCF fund holders to invest CCF funds in various securities, under certain conditions, but the relevant regulations do not allow for the use of brokerage firms. 2789. • TRANSFER OF MARINE EQUIPMENT TO SHIP OPERATORS AND SHIPYARDS: REMOVAL

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will eliminate existing text in the CFR.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 1114(b)

CFR Citation: 46 CFR 360

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: MARAD review of this regulation indicated that it was obsolete, as the equipment on board vessels of the National Defense Reserve Fleet is now commercially outdated and cannot be used by current U.S. Flag merchant ships. This provision was removed.

2790. MODERNIZING THE PASSENGER ORIGIN-DESTINATION SURVEY

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 41708; 49 USC 41709

CFR Citation: 14 CFR 241

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: Historically, the source document for the Passenger Origin-Destination Survey was the auditor's coupon of the ticket. Until recently, these coupons provided all the information that was needed for the Survey. In the last few years, the carriers have begun using trip passes in conjunction with the tickets, thereby eliminating some of the data that is required to be reported in the Survey. Other innovations used by the industry, such as change-of-gauge flights and code-sharing, have impacted the Survey and obscured some of the data that is required to be reported, such as change of planes and junction points. This rulemaking will explore whether there are alternative sources for the data and modernize the collection system to keep pace with the industry.

2791. MODERNIZING THE MOTOR CARRIERS OF PROPERTY FINANCIAL DATA COLLECTIONS

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

Legal Authority: 49 USC 14122 to 14123

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 1249

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The motor carriers of property financial data collection program was transferred to DOT from the Interstate Commerce Commission by the ICC Termination Act of 1995, which went into effect 1/1/96. The Secretary of Transportation has delegated responsibility for this program to BTS. BTS plans to conduct a rulemaking to review and revise the current program. Revision is necessary because the laws governing data collection were changed slightly by the Act. Also, the data needs of the public and private sectors have changed, and the technology to collect, process, and disseminate data has been vastly improved. Finally, Congress has explicitly called on DOT to streamline and simplify reporting requirements to the maximum extent practicable.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 49 USC 14123; 49 USC 72(a); 49 USC 111

CFR Citation: 49 CFR 1249

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This action transfers and redesignates certain motor carrier transportation regulations relating to reporting requirements. The regulations are currently found in 49 CFR chapter X and are being transferred to chapter XI. The ICC Termination Act of 1995 abolished the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) and transferred certain functions to the Department of Transportation. The Secretary of Transportation delegated the motor carrier financial and operating data collection provisions of the former ICC to the Bureau of Transportation Statistics (BTS). This action makes no substantive changes to the motor carrier financial and operating data collection regulations. It simply provides notice to the public that the regulations are being moved.

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY

31 CFR Subtitle A, Chs. I and II

Semiannual Agenda and Fiscal Year 1999 Regulatory Plan

AGENCY: Department of the Treasury.

ACTION: Semiannual regulatory agenda and fiscal year 1999 regulatory plan.

SUMMARY: This notice is given pursuant to the requirements of the Regulatory Flexibility Act (Pub. L. 96-354, September 19, 1980) and Executive Order (E.O.) 12866 ("Regulatory Planning and Review," September 30, 1993), which require the publication by the Department of a semiannual agenda of regulations. E.O. 12866 also requires the publication by the Department of a regulatory plan for fiscal year 1999.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: For additional information about a specific entry in the agenda or plan, contact the "Agency Contact" identified in the item relating to that regulation.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The semiannual agenda of the Department of the Treasury conforms to the Unified Agenda format developed by the Regulatory Information Service Center (RISC). For this edition of the regulatory agenda, the regulatory priorities of the Department of the Treasury are included in The Regulatory Plan, which appears in part II of this issue of the Federal Register.

Dated: September 15, 1998.

Neal Comstock,

Executive Secretary.

Priority: Other Significant

Legal Authority: 12 USC 4703; 12 USC 4713; PL 104-19; 42 USC 4332

CFR Citation: 12 CFR 1805 (New); 12 CFR 1806 (New); 12 CFR 1815 (New)

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The Department of the Treasury has issued a revision of a temporary rule for public comment to implement two programs that will be administered by the Community Development Financial Institutions (CDFI) Fund: the CDFI Program and the Bank Enterprise Award (BEA) Program. These programs were authorized by the Community Development Banking and Financial Institutions Act of 1994. The CDFI Program's core component provides direct assistance to CDFIs that serve their target markets through loans, investments and other activities. The CDFI Program's intermediary component provides financial assistance to CDFIs that provide financing primarily to other CDFIs and/or support the information of CDFIs. The CDFI Program's new technical assistance component provides technical assistance to CDFIs to enhance their capacity through training and/or development. The BEA Program encourages insured depository institutions to engage in certain development and service activities within distressed communities and to make investments in CDFIs. The regulations establish eligibility criteria and application procedures for financial assistance through these programs. The regulations also establish the appropriate environmental review procedures for these two programs.

Abstract: The first notice of proposed rulemaking (NPRM I) is a reissuance of the NPRM published on 9/21/95. The 9/21/95 notice proposed to fix the time by which Treasury can decline payment on Treasury checks, provide financial institutions with a date certain for final payments, and provide greater clarity by defining previously undefined terms. Finally, that notice proposed that the Department of the Treasury may instruct Federal Reserve Banks to intercept benefit payment checks to deceased payees and to return, unpaid, those checks. NPRM I will announce the Department of the Treasury's intent that this regulation supersede Federal common law regarding the risk of loss on checks containing forged disbursing officer signatures, such as counterfeits. The second notice of proposed rulemaking (NPRM II) will further amend this regulation to implement provisions of the Debt Collection Improvement Act of 1996 authorizing the collection of debts owed by presenting banks through Treasury Check Offset. Among other things, NPRM II will broaden the use of powers of attorney for purposes of negotiating Treasury checks.

Legal Authority: 31 USC 321; 31 USC 3328; 31 USC 3331; 31 USC 3343; 31 USC 3702; 31 USC 3712

CFR Citation: 31 CFR 245

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: 31 CFR part 245 governs the issuance of replacement checks for checks drawn on the United States Treasury when (1) the original check has been lost, stolen, destroyed or mutilated or defaced to such an extent that it is rendered non-negotiable; (2) the original check has been negotiated and paid on a forged or unauthorized indorsement; and (3) the original check has been cancelled pursuant to 31 CFR part 240. The regulation is being revised to update the regulation's definitions to make them consistent with the language of the proposed revisions to the definitions in 31 CFR part 240. Other revisions will govern the use of the Check Forgery Insurance Fund (Fund). The Fund is a revolving fund established to settle payee claims of non-receipt where the original check has been fraudulently negotiated. The Fund will ensure that innocent payees, whose Treasury checks have been fraudulently cashed, will receive replacement checks in a timely manner.

Abstract: This regulation was last updated in 1969. Since that time, several significant changes have taken place in pledging securities. The most significant has been the advent of book-entry securities. This revision will provide Federal agencies with the flexibility to design operating procedures that consider the unique characteristics of their operations, systems, policies, legislation, regulations and expectations of their customers and programs. In addition, this revision provides that in the event of a default, the proceeds from the sale of pledged Government obligations will be available to satisfy any claim of the United States. This is an expansion of the current rule which limits the application of the proceeds to damages arising out of the default. Also, notice is provided of the role of the Bureau of Public Debt in collateral valuation.

Abstract: This regulation governs the administration of the purchase, custody, deposit, transfer, sale and reporting of foreign exchange (including credits and currencies) by executive departments and agencies. Currently, this regulation allows the purchase of foreign currency to an amount which, together with the balance on hand in the bank, may not exceed estimated requirements for a 30-day period. The revised rule allows the purchase of foreign currency to a balance "commensurate with immediate disbursing requirements."

CFR Citation: 31 CFR 900 to 904

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The Federal Claims Collection Standards prescribe basic standards for Federal agencies for collection of non-tax claims. The current standards originally were published in 1984 jointly by the Department of Justice and the General Accounting Office at 4 CFR parts 101-105. The Department of the Treasury has been added as a co-signor by the Debt Collection Improvement Act of 1996 (Act) and the General Accounting Office was removed as a co-signor by the General Accounting Office Act of 1996. This revision, which will move the standards to 31 CFR parts 900-904, is being made to simplify the language of the current standards and to incorporate changes made by the Act concerning such topics as disbursing official offset, cross-servicing of debts, interest and penalties on claims, and contracts for collection services.

Legal Deadline: Final, Statutory, January 1999.

Abstract: Public Law 104-134 amended 31 USC 3332 to require Federal agencies to convert all Federal payments (other than payments under the Internal Revenue Code) from checks to electronic funds transfer (EFT) in two phases. First, persons who become eligible for Federal payments on or after July 26, 1996, are to receive those payments by EFT unless they certify in writing that they do not have an account with a financial institution. The first phase was implemented by interim regulations published that date. Second, beginning January 2, 1999, all Federal payments (except payments under the Internal Revenue Code) must be made by EFT unless waived by the Secretary of Treausry. A notice of proposed rulemaking to implement phase two was published on September 16, 1997.

Abstract: ATF is proposing changes to the distilled spirits plant regulations to implement the Administration's Reinventing Government effort to reduce the regulatory burden and streamline requirements. ATF believes these proposed changes will benefit distilled spirits plant proprietors and other industry members by enabling them to operate more easily and with less regulatory oversight from the Government. ATF is also requesting comments on the possibility of revising the distilled spirits plant recordkeeping requirements to accomplish the Government's goals through a system that would be based, as much as possible, on proprietors' own recordkeeping methods.

Abstract: ATF is issuing this temporary rule to implement certain provisions of Public Law 104-208, the Omnibus Consolidated Appropriations Act of 1997 (the Act), enacted September 30, 1996. The Act amended the Federal explosives laws in title 18, United States Code, chapter 40, to require all Federal agencies to report to ATF any information involving arson or the suspected criminal misuse of explosives. The Act also authorizes ATF to establish a repository for this information. In addition, the law provides that such repository will contain information on incidents voluntarily reported to ATF by State and local authorities.

Abstract: This notice of proposed rulemaking proposes to establish regulatory procedures to revoke previously approved certificates of label approval, exemptions from label approval, or distinctive liquor bottle approvals. These revocation procedures are necessary where label approvals, etc., have been made in error. Adoption of these procedures will allow ATF to revoke, in an orderly and efficient manner, label approvals, exemptions from label approval, or distinctive liquor bottle approvals which have been made in error and will provide for appeals by industry members.

Provisions of the law will become effective 4/24/97.

Abstract: This temporary rule implements certain provisions of the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996 (Public law 104-132). These regulations implement the law by requiring detection agents for plastic explosives. The temporary rule also authorizes the use of four specific detection agents to mark plastic explosives and provides for the designation of other detection agents.

Abstract: The Omnibus Consolidated Appropriations Act of 1997 contains amendments to the Gun Control Act of 1986 (18 U.S.C. chapter 44). These amendments add to the category of "prohibited persons" anyone convicted of a "misdemeanor crime of domestic violence". The amendments require individuals acquiring handguns from Federal firearms licenses to certify (in accordance with the Brady Law) that they have not been convicted of such a crime. The amendments also provide for sales between Federal firearms licensees of curio and relic firearms away from their licensed premises.

Abstract: The temporary rule amends the regulations to provide for a firearms purchaser's affirmative statement of his or her State of residence on ATF Form 4473 (Firearms Transaction Record) and ATF Form 5300.35 (Statement of Intent to Obtain a Handgun) in acquiring a firearm from a Federal firearms licensee. The temporary rule also amends the regulations to require that aliens purchasing a firearm provide proof of residency through the use of substantiating documentation, such as utility bills or a lease agreement. In addition, the regulations are being amended to require that licensees examine a photo identification document from aliens purchasing firearms. These regulations implement President Clinton's March 5, 1997, announcement of firearms initiatives intended to protect the American public from gun violence.

Abstract: The OCC is considering proposing to require national banks that are registered transfer agents to file reports regarding their Year 2000 readiness with respect to their transfer agent activities. The Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) recently adopted year 2000 readiness requirements for nonbank transfer agents. This proposal would incorporate the SEC's rule with certain modifications to apply those requirements to national bank transfer agents.

CFR Citation: 12 CFR 3

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: As part of the OCC's ongoing efforts to develop and refine capital standards to ensure the safety and soundness of the national banking system and to implement statutory requirements, the OCC is amending various provisions of the capital rules for national banks. Specifically, these changes include: (1) collateralized transactions; (2) servicing assets; (3) recourse arrangements and direct credit substitutes; (4) technical and conforming amendments under section 303 of the Riegle Community Development and Improvement Act of 1994, Pub. L. 103-325 (Sept. 23, 1994) (CDRI section 303); (5) unrealized revaluation gains on certain equity securities; (6) market risk (specific risk); and (7) claims on securities firms. The OCC is conducting all but the market risk rulemaking jointly with the other Federal banking agencies. The market risk regulation is being done jointly with the FDIC and the FRB.

Abstract: Document provides for the Land Border Carrier Initiative Program, a program designed to prevent smugglers of illicit drugs from utilizing commercial land conveyances for their contraband. The program provides for agreements between carriers and Customs in which the carrier agrees to increase its security measures and cooperate more closely with Customs and Customs agrees to apply special administrative provisions pertaining to penalty amounts and expedited processing of penalty actions if illegal drugs are found on a conveyance belonging to the participating carrier. Further, at certain high risk locations along the land border, an importer's use of the Line Release method of the processing of entries of merchandise by Customs is conditioned on the carriers and drivers carrying that merchandise participating in the Land Border Carrier Initiative Program.

2982. CASH ADVANCES OF COMPENSATION TO SERVICE PROVIDERS

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 26 USC 7805; 26 USC 451

CFR Citation: 26 CFR 1

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The proposed regulations provide rules for distinguishing cash advances of compensation, which are includible in the gross income of the service provider at the time the cash advances are received, from loans, which are excludible from the income of the service provider. The regulations provide that cash advances will be includible in the service provider's gross income even if they must be repaid upon the happening of a condition subsequent. Further, the regulations provide a method for service providers to change the method of accounting for cash advances, and provide that any section 481(a) adjustment that results from the change in method may be included in gross income by the service provider over a 4-year spread period if the service provider complies with this method.

3014. STATEMENT OF PROCEDURAL RULES—PART 601.702 APPENDIX B - INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE - 31 CFR PART 1

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 5 USC 552; 5 USC 301

CFR Citation: 26 CFR 601; 31 CFR 1

Legal Deadline: Other, Statutory, October 2, 1997.
Most provisions of the Electronic FOIA Amendments take effect 180 days from enactments, i.e. 3/31/97. Sections 7 & 8 take effect 1 year after the date of enactment, i.e. 10/2/97.

Abstract: The document contains final rules amending the Statement of Procedural Rules (SPR) (26 CFR 601.702). Some amendments reflect procedures heretofore only made available to the public in the Internal Revenue Manual, which is maintained in Internal Revenue Service reading rooms. The SPR also reflects changes in the title and nomenclature and changes of addresses to be contacted for Freedom of Information requests. The rules affect persons requesting records from the Internal Revenue Service. The document also contains proposed rules amending 31 CFR part 1 appendix B, Disclosure of Records, Freedom of Information Act, Internal Revenue Service Rules, to reflect changes mandated by the Electronic Freedom of Information Act Amendments of 1996, Pub. L. No. 104-231 (October 2, 1996).

3019. CERTAIN ASSET TRANSFERS TO A TAX-EXEMPT ENTITY

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 26 USC 7805; 26 USC 337

CFR Citation: 26 CFR 1

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The Tax Reform Act of 1986 (the "Act") repealed the last vestiges of the General Utilities doctrine ("GU repeal"), and corporations must recognize gain, in most cases, upon the distribution of appreciated property to their shareholders. The Act granted the Secretary authority to promulgate regulations necessary to carry out the purposes of the Act. This project will develop regulations to prevent the circumvention of GU repeal by conversion of for-profit corporations to tax-exempt entities and by other transactions involving tax-exempt entities.

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Legal Authority: 26 USC 7805; 26 USC 0721

CFR Citation: 26 CFR 1

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This regulation is intended to prevent avoidance of the special rule for nonqualified preferred stock under section 1014 of the Tax Relief Act of 1997. Section 1.356-3 of the Income Tax Regulations is amended to provide that, as a general rule, the term "stock or securities" does not include nonqualified preferred stock, or a right to acquire such preferred stock, where the stock or right is received in exchange for stock or a right to acquire stock.

3211. CAPITAL RULES

Priority: Substantive, Nonsignificant

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

Legal Authority: 12 USC 1462; 12 USC 1462a; 12 USC 1463; 12 USC 1464; 12 USC 1467a; 12 USC 1835; 12 USC 1848; 12 USC 4808

CFR Citation: 12 CFR 567

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: OTS currently has underway a number of regulatory amendments to its capital standards for savings associations. These amendments will serve to implement section 303 of the Riegle Community Development and Regulatory Improvement Act of 1994 (CDRIA), as well as standards such as those of the Financial Accounting Standards Board. CDRIA requires the Federal banking agencies to make their capital rules and other rules more uniform.

These regulatory changes include a recourse rule that would vary the risk-based capital requirement for traded and non-traded positions in securitized asset transactions according to relative risk exposure.

Interagency capital projects are also underway to address (i) leverage capital and risk-based standards for certain loans involving residential properties and investment in mutual funds, (ii) risk-based capital standards for collateralized transactions, and (iii) risk-weight of claims on securities firms.

Department of Veterans Affairs

Semiannual Regulatory Agenda

DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS (VA)

DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS

38 CFR Ch. I

Unified Agenda of Federal Regulatory and Deregulatory Actions

AGENCY: Department of Veterans Affairs.

ACTION: Semiannual regulatory agenda.

SUMMARY: This agenda announces the regulations that the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) will have under development or review during the 12-month period beginning October 1998. The purpose in publishing the Department's regulatory agenda is to allow all interested persons the opportunity to participate in VA's regulatory planning.

ADDRESSES: Interested persons are invited to comment on the entries listed in the agenda by contacting the individual agency contact listed for each entry or by writing to: Director, Office of Regulations Management (02D), Department of Veterans Affairs, 810 Vermont Avenue NW., Washington, DC 20420.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Gloria Armstrong at (202) 273-8605.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: This document is issued pursuant to Executive Order 12866 "Regulatory Planning and Review" (and implementing guidance) and the Regulatory Flexibility Act, which require that executive agencies semiannually publish in the Federal Register an agenda of regulations that VA will have under development or review. For this edition of VA's regulatory agenda, we have concluded that we do not have any regulatory submissions for the October 1998 Regulatory Plan. However, the Agency's Statement of Regulatory Priorities does appear in this issue of the Federal Register.

Thomas O. Gessel,

Director, Office of Regulations Management.

3233. PER DIEM FOR NURSING HOME CARE OF VETERANS IN STATE HOMES

Priority: Other Significant

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

Legal Authority: 38 USC 1741; 38 USC 1742; 38 USC 1743; 38 USC 8131; 38 USC 8132; 38 USC 8133; 38 USC 8134; 38 USC 8135; 38 USC 8136; 38 USC 8137

CFR Citation: 38 CFR 17.190 to 17.222

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This document proposes to establish a new part 51 setting forth a mechanism for paying per diem to State homes providing nursing home care to eligible veterans. Under the proposal, VA would pay per diem to a State for providing nursing home care to eligible veterans in a facility if the Under Secretary for Health recognizes the facility as a State home based on a current VA certification that the facility meets the standards set forth in proposed subpart D. This new part would cover material currently in manuals. Also, it should supersede the regulations currently contained in 38 CFR 17.190 through 17.199 that pertain to payment of per diem for nursing home care in State homes. The standards in proposed subpart D are patterned after the standards of the the Department of Health and Human Services that nursing homes must meet to participate in the Medicare and Medicaid programs (see 42 CFR 483). The standards are intended to set forth minimum requirements necessary to ensure that VA pays per diem for eligible veterans only if the State home provide high quality care. The proposed regulations include application and inspection provisions. the Life Safety Code requires updating to the 1993 edition and various other technical and editorial changes need to be made.

Abstract: This rule proposes to amend the Department of Veterans Affairs regulations concerning State homes. VA provides funds to States for projects for the construction, acquisition, or renovation of State veterans nursing homes and State veterans domiciliaries. VA also provides funds for projects for renovating existing State veterans hospital facilities provided that the renovations would not expand a State's capacity to furnish hospital care. This advance note of proposed rulemaking requests comments regarding what regulations should be established with respect to the priorities for awarding State home grants for construction, acquisition, or renovation.

Legal Authority: 38 USC 501; 50 USC 486(c)

CFR Citation: 48 CFR 829

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: This rule proposes to amend the Department of Veterans Affairs Acquisition Regulation (VAAR) by deleting provisions pertaining to the acquisition of tax-free alcohol products. The provisions proposed for deletion are internal Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) guidance to contracting officers and are not required to be in the Code of Federal Regulations. In addition, the rule proposes to delete procedures and controls prescribed in the VAAR for facilities or institutions owned or controlled by State Governments, territories, and the District of Columbia to obtain tax-free tobacco products for gratuitous distribution to present and former members of the Armed Forces of the United States. VA policy is to not provide tobacco products to VA patients. This proposed change would be an extension of that policy. By deleting these provisions and controls, VA would no longer assist State Governments, territories, and the District of Columbia in obtaining tax-free tobacco products.

3258. HEADSTONE AND MARKER INSCRIPTION POLICY

Priority: Info./Admin./Other

Reinventing Government: This rulemaking is part of the Reinventing Government effort. It will revise text in the CFR to reduce burden or duplication, or streamline requirements.

Legal Authority: 38 USC 501; 38 USC 2306

CFR Citation: 38 CFR 1.630; 38 CFR 1.632

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The proposed rule revises 38 CFR, section 1.630 to implement Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) regulations on its inscription policy for use on Government-provided headstones or markers. The amendment formalizes and updates previous and current policies to reflect changes in VA's Simplified Inscription Policy based on inscription information authorized at Government expense, such as specific valor awards or other items paid for at private expense. The rule is published as proposed in the Federal Register to provide information to the public on specific changes to VA's inscription policy for Government-furnished headstones and markers. A 60-day public comment period is provided. This action is subject to the requirements of the Administrative Procedures Act and E.O. 12866 as the rule is a statute as approved by the then-Administrator now Secretary of Veterans Affairs in 1974. The proposed rule will not have a significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities and only individual VA beneficiaries could be directly affected.

Legal Deadline: None

Abstract: The proposed rule revises 38 CFR, part 39, to amend Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) regulations for the State Cemetery Grants Program to implement and update information on program requirements and the application process for participants. The amendment formalizes new standards and provides guidance on how States may obtain funding for grants to expand, establish, or improve State veterans cemeteries. The rule is published as proposed in the Federal Register to provide information to the public on how to apply for Federal funding for State veterans cemeteries. A 60-day public comment period is provided. It is subject to the requirements of the Administrative Procedures Act and E.O. 12866 because the rule is an interpretation of statute. The proposed rule will not have a significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities; only those States that apply for funding may be direct beneficiaries.

Abstract: Title 38 CFR part 17, section 17.84, sets forth the basic policies and procedures governing the administration of the CHAMPVA program. This proposed revision to 38 CFR 17.54 would incorporate revised CHAMPVA claims-processing procedures and define benefits and services for this program. These proposed regulations will not have an effect on the economy, State or local government agencies or geographic regions, and will not increases in costs, because the monetary impact would be insignificant. This regulatory action is important because current regulations describe the CHAMPVA program in terms of the initial agreement between VA and DOD (since modified) and do not address the program changes initiated by VA to centralize all CHAMPVA activities. The proposed regulations address the CHAMPVA Center's new role in program administration, including absorption of the previously contracted-out claims-processing activities.
